Jenkins Still Held in Jail; Governor Promises Statement

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 21.—After an examination today, Jenkins tonight was returned to the jail.

Governor Cabrera will make a public statement on Saturday, giving the official side of the case. He said he had no desire to molest Jenkins, but must see the case through.

Secretary of Foreign Relations Medina refuses to make a statement, saying that as the case is in the hands of the authorities he could not express an opinion.

MEXICO CITY, Nov. 21, (Associated Press.)—Hilario Medina, Under Secretary of Foreign Relations, stated tonight that no American note relative to the Jenkins case had been received.

Excelsior says: "The immediate release of Jenkins, as requested by the United States note, rests solely with Jenkins, as his refusal to give bail is the only bar between him and freedom."

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—The kidnapping and subsequent arrest and rearrest of William O. Jenkins, the American Consular Agent at Puebla, promises to bring the whole Mexican situation to a head unless the Carranza Government complies with the demand of the American Government for the immediate release of Jenkins and adopts a safe and sane attitude in the matter.

It was learned today that the Administration had very carefully weighed every element in the situation before sending this, the stiffest of a series of notes to the Carranza Government, and that if the attitude of the Carranza Government should force the hands of the United States the Government at Washington was prepared to go the full limit necessary properly and adequately to deal with the situation.

When the Carranza Government was informed that the Washington Government was "surprised and incensed" over the rearrest of Mr. Jenkins, especially in view of the suffering and losses that Jenkins had already sustained in connection with his kidnapping "through lack of protection by the Mexican authorities," and that "further molestation of the Consular Agent will seriously affect the relations between the United States and Mexico, for which the Government of Mexico will assume sole responsibility," the American Government meant exactly what these words imply.

These statements in the note of Secretary Lansing to the Carranza Government were intended as a solemn warning to the Carranza Government that it would be precipitating a serious breach in the relations between this country and Mexico if it persisted in the molestation of the American official and failed to yield to the demand for his "immediate release."

The note to the Carranza Government was not, technically speaking, an ultimatum, because it contained no time limit, but it was in such form that it could not be regarded, when read by Carranza, as being anything less than a semi-ultimatum calling for immediate and prompt action of a satisfactory character. The note contained every element of an ultimatum except a time limit, and the demand for the "immediate release" of Jenkins gave the note the color of being an ultimatum.

Armed Force a Last Resort.

Before dispatching the note the Administration considered what action it might be called upon to take in the event that the Carranza Government should flatly refuse to comply with the demand for the release of Jenkins. If a situation should be precipitated making it necessary, it is believed that the Administration would consider itself prepared to send a military expedition to effect the release of Jenkins. It would be much regretted by officials if the attitude of the Carranza Government would be such as to force this Government, in order to afford full protection to the rights and lives of its officials in Mexico, to take drastic action, but it was made plain to the Carranza Government in Secretary Lansing's note, that the rearrest of Consular Agent Jenkins was considered as being absolutely unwarranted as well as arbitrary.

The rearrest of Jenkins took place after the Carranza Foreign Office had once before been urged to bring about the release of Jenkins and to give orders against his being further molested, and after the Government had reached the conclusion, on the basis of its offi-

Illinois Women May Sit In National Conventions

CHICAGO, Nov. 21.—Women may sit as delegates in the Republican and Democratic National Conventions and vote for the nomination of a candidate for President of the United States, according to an opinion given today by Attorney General Brundage.

The opinion reverses all practices in effect since Illinois became a suffrage State and may result in the election of some women delegates to the national conventions of both political parties next year.

SWANN ASKS SMITH FOR ANOTHER JURY

FAVORS SPECIAL COUNSEL

Willing That Existing Grand Jury Shall Go On with the Traction Inquiry.

Governor Alfred E. Smith was appealed to last night by District Attorney Edward Swann to name a Supreme Court Justice and another Grand Jury to replace the Extraordinary Grand Jury, who had requested the Governor on Thursday to designate the Attorney General to act as special counsel for an investigation of "municipal offices and the departments and of the office of the District Attorney of New York County," in a search for "corrupt misconduct in public office." Mr. Swann urged the Governor to ignore the request of the jurymen on the ground that they did not comply with the law by specifying "the charges" or "public officers" to be investigated.

Up to the time that Mr. Swann's letter was sent to Governor Smith the Governor had given no hint of what his attitude toward the Grand Jury's request would be. At 9 Middagh Street, Brooklyn, the home of the Governor's mother, it was said that the Governor was too much concerned over the illness of his mother to give due consideration to any other matter, but that he might issue a statement today.

The District Attorney further asserted in his letter to the Governor that Raymond F. Almirall, foreman of the Extraordinary Grand Jury, was "openly hostile to the Mayor and the District Attorney," and had "placed himself in the position of a complainant." The letter from the District Attorney reads:

Mr. Swann's Letter.

Nov. 21, 1919.

Hon. Alfred E. Smith, Governor of the State of New York, Executive Chamber, Albany, N. Y.

My Dear Governor Smith: My attention has been called through the public press to a letter written to you by Raymond F. Almirall, the foreman of the Extraordinary Grand Jury, which one of the morning papers states has not yet reached you; but on account of the importance of the matter involved I think it best to write you without delay.

There are many misstatements in Mr. Almirall's letter to you, but it is not my purpose in writing this letter to enter into a controversy with him, and I therefore pass them by for the present.

Mr. Almirall concludes his letter by suggesting that you designate the Attorney General to appear before the Extraordinary Grand Jury to act generally as their legal adviser and counsel, but without specifying what criminal action or proceeding he desires the Attorney General to conduct.

The Executive Law provides that the Governor may require the Attorney General to appear before a Grand Jury and conduct 'such criminal actions or proceedings as shall be specified in such requirement,' that is to say the Governor may designate the Attorney General to supersede the District Attorney in specified cases. The public officers Mr. Almirall desires to investigate are not specified, nor are the charges against them specified. He does not, in my opinion, give sufficient information to justify the Governor in acting under the Executive Law.

Mr. Almirall, who is openly hostile to the Mayor and the District Attorney, has obviously placed himself in the position of a complainant against unnamed public officers in unnamed offices, and has practically asked you to issue a roving commission to the Attorney General to investigate such matters as Mr. Almirall shall select. The real position of Mr. Almirall being that of a complainant, I take the liberty of suggesting to your Excellency that if, in your judgment, there are sufficient facts to justify it, you appoint another Extraordinary Term of the Supreme Court for the purpose of investigating any public office or officer in the City of New York against whom Mr. Almirall, as complainant, presents any evidence of wilful and corrupt misconduct, and that you name a Justice to hold such term, at which a Grand Jury may be impaneled, in order that there may be an impartial body standing between Mr. Almirall and the persons against whom he makes complaint or accusations, if any.

So far as the office of District Attorney is concerned, I invite the full-

PRESIDENT GIVES WAR FOOD CONTROL POWERS TO PALMER

Aims to Avert Sugar Famine and Stop Ever-Mounting High Prices.

HOOVER MACHINERY READY

WHOLESALE PRICE 12 CENTS

Candy and Soft Drink Makers' Supply Will Be Reduced by 60 Per Cent. Immediately.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—President Wilson today in a proclamation placed the Government again in control of the nation's food supply by transferring the authority of the Food Administration to Attorney General Palmer.

The revival of the wartime functions of Administrator Hoover resulted directly from the Government's efforts to avert a famine in sugar, but the powers delegated to the head of the Department of Justice will be used also to help put down the ever-mounting cost of living.

For the present the Attorney General will not put into operation all of the machinery permitted under the executive order signed by the President, but should conditions arise to make it necessary the full pressure of all the broad power vested in him will be exerted to meet them.

Mr. Palmer's staff will begin immediately to build up a sugar-distributing system which will allocate all sugar stocks in the country. It will provide an equitable system of distributing supplies and will defeat any concentration or hoarding, officials said.

Plans tentatively decided on provide for increasing the price of all sugar excepting the Louisiana crop, for which a price of 17 cents already has been fixed, to 12 cents a pound wholesale.

Through this increase, new sources of supply are expected to be opened. With assurances that a fair margin of profit, said to be about $1.54 a hundred pounds, would be allowed, sugar refiners are ready to enter the Cuban markets and purchase all available stocks, it was stated. Thus, officials believe, the increased price will avert a shortage which threatens to become a famine during the next sixty days.

Immediate action also is contemplated in curtailing the consumption of sugar by manufacturers whose products are not regarded as essential food. This will apply particularly to soft drink dealers and candy manufacturers. The abnormal increase in sales of these articles and the consequent heavy drain on the sugar supplies is traceable, officials declared, to the enforcement of prohibition.

Arrangements have been completed, subject to changing conditions of the sugar situation, whereby beet and cane sugar refiners will enter the Cuban markets immediately. The department, however, will exact a signed agreement with firms entering that trade to consign all of their purchases to this country. This will mean that American dealers will get a large proportion of the 4,000,000 tons of raw sugar yet available in Cuba, officials said.

Danger of a Sugar Famine.

Normal consumption of sugar in the United States is about 4,000,000 tons. In other years about 3,000,000 tons were imported from the Cuban fields, to which was added the average production of approximately 1,000,000 tons of the native product, but officials were alarmed lest European dealers should continue their heavy purchases, already in excess of 1,000,000 tons, in Cuban markets and deprive this country of the full supply it usually gets there. The refiners who have agreed to go into the Cuban trade have been urged, it was said, to use all haste that the stocks may not be exhausted before this nation is supplied.

The danger of a sugar famine will be greatest next month, it was said, as stocks are rapidly being depleted and in many sections are already exhausted, and the necessity for garnering all avail-

Britain Gives Formal Assent to French Protective Treaty

PARIS, Nov. 21.—Stephen Pichon, the French Foreign Minister, and Sir Eyre Crowe, Assistant Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs of Great Britain, last night exchanged ratifications of the treaty guaranteeing British aid to France if, without provocation, she is attacked by Germany. Sir Eyre is the representative of Great Britain in the Supreme Council in the absence of Premier Lloyd George.

The announcement of the exchange of ratifications caused considerable surprise, because it had been generally understood that Great Britain would not ratify the treaty before the United States did so. The treaty does not come into force until the similar treaty with the United States has been ratified.

OFFER NEW TERMS IN COAL DEADLOCK

Miners Drop 30-Hour-a-Week Demand, but No Basis of Settlement Is Reached.

CALL IN SECRETARY WILSON

Special to the New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—With the threat of governmental intervention hanging over their heads the representatives of the operators and miners struggled for several hours today to reach an agreement which would bring about a peaceful settlement of the strike in the bituminous coal fields. Both sides have virtually been given to understand that the Government cannot delay action beyond the early part of next week.

After operators and miners had been in continuous conference from 2 o'clock this afternoon until 6 o'clock this evening without being able to approach an agreement, Secretary of Labor Wilson was called in and a stormy session followed, which ended at 8:20 o'clock tonight. The one hopeful note was then sounded by Secretary Wilson.

"I think I may say that progress has been made," he said. "I have held all along that a settlement would be reached."

As to the details of what had taken place while he was at the conference, Secretary Wilson was silent, but the Secretary of Labor is said to have formally presented a definite proposal to end the wage disputes and avert a coal famine. The nature of the proposal was not disclosed, but it is believed he suggested a flat increase of about 31 per cent.

For the miners, Acting President John L. Lewis of the United Mine Workers announced that he had promised to withhold comment pending the outcome of tomorrow's meeting. He said that no agreement had been reached. When asked about the statement made by Secretary Wilson that progress has been made, Mr. Lewis said:

"That's what Secretary Wilson says."

Operators Withdraw Offer.

T. T. Brewster, speaking for the operators, also said that no agreement had been reached, but that another attempt would be made tomorrow to arrive at common ground. The offers made by the operators of a general increase of 20 per cent. was rejected by the miners, said Mr. Brewster, and finally this had been withdrawn, leaving the slate clean so far as the operators were concerned.

Another important development today was a noontime conference between Attorney General A. Mitchell Palmer, his assistant, Judge Ames, who acted for the Government in the injunction proceedings before Judge Anderson; Fuel Administrator Garfield, and Director General of Railroads Walker D. Hines.

At this conference the Government's position in the coal strike was discussed in detail and future procedure considered. It was decided that it would be safe to let matters hang fire, at least until Monday, to permit the miners and operators another chance to get together. The Government officials will meet again Monday.

The situation tonight was not regarded as hopeless by those who are working for an amicable agreement, and such a result may be accomplished before Gov-

Crisis In Italy Over Adriatic and Home Affairs; American Diplomats Show Great Concern

ROME, Nov. 21, (Associated Press.)—The American Embassy here is actively engaged in watching the situation in Italy, which, it is asserted, may develop seriously from one hour to another as regards both Italy and the Dalmatian coast.

Peter A. Jay, the American Chargé d'Affaires, with the entire personnel of the embassy, including Brig. Gen. Evan M. Johnson, was engaged throughout Thursday night sifting from reports received data from which to compile cipher dispatches to the State Department at Washington and the American peace delegation in Paris.

On account of the pressing situation Mr. Jay has decided not to absent himself from Rome, even for a short time, and therefore he has abandoned his plan to go to Naples to meet Mrs. Jay, who is returning to Italy from the United States.

Mr. Jay is being aided in his task by personal and cordial intercourse with Premier Nitti and Count Carlo Sforzo, Under Secretary for Foreign Affairs. The American Chargé became intimately acquainted with Count Sforzo when he was Italian Minister to China.

Mr. Jay said to The Associated Press today that he realized that the Italian Government was doing all that was humanly possible and straining every nerve to prevent trouble, both at home and on the Adriatic, but that complications might arise which it would find beyond its power to control and for which it could hardly be considered responsible.

The Chargé added that Premier Nitti was working most strenuously to insure order, which he certainly would be able to maintain up to the time of the reopening of Parliament.

The fact that King Victor Emmanuel has left Rome is taken in some quarters as confirmation that he may not be present at the reopening of Parliament on Dec. 1 to deliver the speech from the throne.

The Messaggero, however, says that Parliament will be inaugurated by the King. The newspaper adds that the Cabinet will remain unaltered, and that reports of a Ministerial crisis are unfounded.

The definite causes of the serious situation referred to above have not been revealed here. They may be connected with d'Annunzio's activities in Dalmatia and the strong political feelings aroused by the election last Sunday.

PRINCE RECEIVES FINAL GREETINGS FROM PILGRIMS

VISITS ROOSEVELT'S GRAVE

Gives a Party to High School Boys and Girls on the Renown —Sails Today.

To bid godspeed to the Prince of Wales, who sails for home today, a thousand distinguished Americans gathered last night at a great dinner at which the Prince was the guest of the Pilgrims of the United States. This, almost the last of the stately functions arranged to give expression to New York's hospitality for the royal guest, was the occasion for a mighty "hail" and a "farewell" in which the genuineness of mutual regret was plainly perceptible.

Edward Albert, looking almost childlike beside the venerable and stalwart Chauncey M. Depew, who presided, moved once more winningly and naturally into the affections of those who saw and heard him. They enjoyed the modesty with which he shrank behind a huge loving cup filled with roses when they roared their loudest approval at him; they enjoyed the heartiness with which he joined in the laugh when the thrusts of the proverbial Depew wit strayed in his direction, and they listened earnestly to every word of his graceful little speech of praise for America's war work and of his pride in the peace and good-will between his nation and ours.

The End of a Busy Day.

The Prince came to the dinner at the end of a program which had filled his daylight hours and he hurried away to fulfill still other engagements made for him in an effort to crowd the utmost into his brief stay.

In the morning he had come from the battle cruiser Renown to find a great crowd awaiting him, including a number of eager children who just would defy all police regulations and rush up to exchange a laughing handshake with him. He had been whirled to Central Park, where he planted on the Mall an English elm tree, which it is hoped will grow to be a fitting grandson to the one his grandfather planted there fifty-nine years ago.

That over, he had driven to Oyster Bay, where, without ceremony of any kind, but with his whole bearing expressive of solemn sadness, he had laid a wreath of laurel on the grave of Theodore Roosevelt, while the eldest son of the late ex-President looked on.

Turning once more to gayer functions, he had gone to the Piping Rock Club, where the Board of Governors entertained him at a luncheon of a purely social nature, at which many of the members with their families gathered.

In the afternoon he received a thousand school children aboard the Renown and showed himself as much at home among them—perhaps a little more so—as among the gray-haired dignitaries with whom he has held his own.

With that over, he stole an hour for exercise at the Racquet and Tennis Club, making himself "fit" for the dinner, a special gala performance at the Hippodrome at which he and his entourage were guests later in the evening, and a reception at the 7th Regiment Armory, to which Rodman Wanamaker, Chairman of the Mayor's Committee on Reception to Distinguished Guests, and Mrs. Wanamaker had bidden many to be presented to him.

Sails for Halifax Today.

On board the Renown today the Prince will participate in the closing ceremonies of his visit before the battleship weighs anchor and steams for Halifax at 2 o'clock this afternoon. He will decorate a large group of American soldiers whose war achievements have been specially recognized by Great Britain, and he will bid farewell to his official hosts. He will slip ashore a moment to greet an assemblage of Boy Scouts at the landing at 11:45 this morning.

Last night's dinner was staged at the Plaza, the dais and some of the tables being laid in the rose room, while the others were crowded into adjoining rooms, where most of the guests were unable to see the Prince. The rose room was decorated with tall vases of chrysanthemums and glowed in the mingled light of the crystal chandeliers overhead and the red-shaded candles on the tables. Behind the dais were two big flags, one of the United States and one of Great Britain, and between them was hung an electric piece both proclaiming, and depicting, "hands across the sea."

The Prince and his staff entered to the tune of "Stars and Stripes Forever," and as soon as he was in his place the orchestra played the two national anthems. As the slim figure in conventional British naval mess jacket with the four broadstripes on the cuff proclaiming the Prince's rank as captain, passed among the diners through a beribboned lane they cheered him continuously.

With the coming of coffee and cigars Frederick Cunliffe Owen, a Vice President of the society, read cablegrams he had sent to the Prince's grandmother and father, Queen Alexandra and King George, and these replies:

London, Nov. 20, 1919.

I have received with much pleasure your gratifying message with regard

LODGE OPPOSES CONCESSION

HOPE FOR WILSON SOLUTION

President's Message to Congress, It Is Said, May Open the Way to Agreement.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—Indications that the Peace Treaty fight is likely to be thrown into politics were given today by Senator Lodge, the Republican leader in the Senate, in a statement which he made just before his departure for Boston. Senator Lodge declared that there was "no room for further compromise," and that he wished "to carry these reservations into the campaign."

Additional significance was seen in this attitude from the fact that Will H. Hays, Chairman of the Republican National Committee, has been in Washington during the climax of the treaty fight in consultation with Mr. Lodge.

Although Senator Hitchcock, the Democratic leader, again expressed today an urgent desire for compromise, no definite steps to that end were disclosed. President Wilson, it was indicated at the White House, would issue no statement on the Senate's refusal to ratify the treaty until he sent his message to Congress shortly after the opening of the new session, Dec. 1.

Hitchcock Deprecates Politics.

Commenting on Senator Lodge's stand (which is printed in an adjoining column), Senator Hitchcock said:

"It would be entirely welcome to us if the reservations should be taken into the campaign, but I do not consider that it would be very patriotic. It appears to have become a question between patriotism and politics. The patriotic thing to do is to work out a compromise.

"The Democrats are not afraid of the issue. The vote would have been the same even if the President had not written his letter. I do not mean to say that the letter did not have some influence, but there would have been enough Democrats anyway to vote against the Lodge ratification resolution.

"Senator Lodge seems to have selected politics as the choice, and I think it is the duty of Senators to select patriotism. I do not think in this crisis that politics should be the issue when the interests of the country and the world are to be considered. The Democrats will work for a compromise. They will take the stand that the passage of the treaty is their supreme duty."

Senator Hitchcock took a fairly hopeful view of the treaty situation. He said that he looked to the country to exert strong pressure that would bring about a compromise on the disputed reservations, and that ratification of the treaty would result. Other Democratic Senators took the same view. Senator King of Utah predicted that the treaty would be ratified by Christmas.

"The country," Senator Hitchcock said, "is going to pound Democratic Senators, it is going to pound the President, and it is going to pound Republican Senators, because it wants some kind of a compromise at once. I believe all will have to give and take so that we can get this treaty ratified.

"There is one thing that the country wants and that is prompt ratification of the treaty. I don't think that we will find a compromise difficult to obtain. I have always predicted that we would first have to reach a deadlock before we began to compromise. That is exactly what we have done, except that I hadn't anticipated that the Senate would adjourn when it reached the deadlock. I had hoped that we could go right ahead and reach a compromise before we quit."

Senator Hitchcock said he was not working on any compromise reservations at present. He hopes to see the President tomorrow and then take a flying trip to his home in Omaha.

To Send Out Flood of Speeches.

It was believed at the capitol that Democratic Senators were desirous of disposing of the treaty soon rather than dragging it into the Presidential campaign. But the indications were that a final fight before the country could scarcely be avoided if Senator Lodge and his supporters were determined upon that course.

Preparations are being made to distribute great numbers of speeches made by Republican Senators during the final hours of the treaty debate, as campaign documents. It was noted that the speeches picked for distribution include that of Senator Lenroot of Wisconsin, who declared that the Republican Party would welcome a campaign with the Lodge reservations as the issue. This course has been urged by many Republican Senators, who were aroused by President Wilson's attacks on treaty opponents during his tour in September.

Prospects of prompt action on the

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—Senator Lodge's statement today declaring for carrying the Peace Treaty fight into the political campaign reads:

> I have no especial comment to make. The case is very simple. After four months of careful consideration and discussion, the reservations were presented to the Senate. They were purely American in their character, designed solely to Americanize the treaty and make it safe for the United States.
> Under the President's orders the followers of the Administration in the Senate voted down those reservations. It was also shown by a vote that there was a decisive majority against the treaty without the reservations.
> Those reservations as presented to the Senate will stand. There is no room for further compromise between Americanism and the super-government presented by the League. All I ask now is that we may have the opportunity to lay those reservations before the American people. To that great and final tribunal alone would I appeal.
> I wish to carry those reservations into the campaign. I wish the American people to read and study them. They are not like the covenant of the League. They are simple.
> I do not see that there is one of them to which any American can object. I want the people to see them, understand them, and think of them in every household, on every farm, in every shop and factory throughout the land. Then let them decide.

DEMOCRATS IN TILT FOR SENATE LEADER

Hitchcock, Acting Leader in Martin's Place, Has Underwood as Rival.

CONTEST IS LIVELY ONE

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—A lively contest to fill the position of Democratic leader in the Senate left vacant by the recent death of Senator Thomas S. Martin of Virginia is in sight.

Among those most frequently mentioned to head the Administration forces in the Senate are Senator Hitchcock of Nebraska, now acting leader, and Senator Oscar Underwood of Alabama. Both are strong men on their side of the Senate and a sharp contest is indicated between the supporters of the two Senators.

Pending the election of a new leader at a Democratic caucus, Senator Hitchcock, ranking minority member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, is acting leader. He is Vice Chairman of the Democratic conference and acting Chairman since Senator Martin's death.

A meeting of Senator Hitchcock's friends took place today in the office of Senator Chamberlain of Oregon, and at the same hour Senator Underwood was at the White House in conference with Joseph P. Tumulty, the President's secretary. Whether White House indorsement of Mr. Underwood will be forthcoming is a question of speculation in political circles here tonight, but reports of friction between the White House and Senator Hitchcock have been circulated during the last few months. A rather general belief is that Mr. Underwood is regarded with favor at the White House, although President Wilson has placed great trust in Senator Hitchcock during the treaty fight which the Nebraska Senator has directed.

Fourteen Senators attended the Hitchcock meeting in Mr. Chamberlain's office, it was said. It was reported that Senator Culberson of Texas, who is the ranking Democratic member of the Senate and therefore in line for the leadership, favors Senator Hitchcock. Senator Culberson's poor health makes it impossible for him to consider the post. Senator Simmons of North Carolina also is said to favor Mr. Hitchcock, although he has made no public statement of his attitude.

As Senator Hitchcock has been in charge of the treaty fight throughout, it was assumed that no matter who is picked as leader of the Senate he will continue to handle the treaty. It was not learned when the Democratic caucus will be held, some believing that Senator Hitchcock's friends desire to wait until the treaty fight is out of the way.

It was recalled that shortly after the special session of Congress began a report arose that President Wilson desired Senator Swanson of Virginia to become the Democratic leader in place of Senator Hitchcock. But a statement was issued from the White House, following the sudden departure of Senator Hitchcock for his Summer home in Massachusetts, in which the President's confidence in Senator Hitchcock was expressed. This ended for the time being all talk of friction between Mr. Hitchcock and President Wilson.

Men Hailed In Berlin Should Be on Trial, London Paper Says.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—The Daily Mail, in an editorial article on the Hindenburg-Ludendorff demonstrations in Berlin, says:

"Had the treaty been ratified two months ago all these officers who are now creating turmoil in Berlin and plotting the return of the All Highest would be in the hands of the Allies undergoing trial as mere criminals. We betray no secrets when we say that both Hindenburg and Ludendorff are 'wanted,' not only for their cruel devastation of France, but also for their part in carrying through the submarine campaign with its ruthless atrocities."

GALICIAN MANDATE TO POLES

Norway to Have Suzerainty Over Spitzbergen—Serbians Will Sign Austrian Treaty.

PARIS, Nov. 21.—The Supreme Council today agreed upon Dec. 1 as the date for formal ratification of the German Peace Treaty.

Further informal discussions have been held with the German representatives now here in connection with the notification by the Allies that a protocol must be signed by Germany guaranteeing fulfillment of the armistice conditions. These discussions have been confined chiefly to the methods of procedure in considering the protocol. As yet the Germans have not stated whether they will sign the document.

The American delegation is still without instructions as to its participation in the Peace Conference after the failure of the Senate to ratify the treaty; but Henry White attended the meeting of the Supreme Council today as representative of the United States, Under Secretary Polk being absent in London. The entire delegation is continuing its work in the belief that a compromise ratification resolution will be agreed to in the United States.

This view is apparently shared by most members of the council, who are anxious for the continuance of the United States in the deliberations of the peace-making body. The council, however, is working out plans so that the enforcement of the treaty will not be hindered, if the United States fails to ratify the treaty later.

The Council today approved the text of an agreement granting political suzerainty over the Spitzbergen Archipelago to Norway.

It considered the status of property in Slesvig belonging to inhabitants who intend to acquire Danish nationality. A note on the subject will be sent to the Danish Government by the Council.

Dispatches from Belgrade say that the Serbian Government has authorized its delegation at Paris to sign the treaty with Austria which Serbia did not sign at St. Germain on Sept. 10.

PARIS, Nov. 21.—The Supreme Council decided today to turn over Eastern Galicia to Poland for twenty-five years, at the end of which the League of Nations will decide what to do with this territory. Eastern Galicia, with its 16,000,000 inhabitants, will be federated with Poland under a mandate, the arrangements for which will give Poland practically the government of the region.

This decision comes after many weeks of discussion of the Galician problem. Poland asked for annexation outright, but this was opposed by England, which favored giving a mandate to Poland for five years, at the end of which time there would be a plebiscite. Paderewski opposed this solution, asserting that Galicia could not be reconstructed if for five years there was to be constant electioneering.

Today's solution is a compromise which is acceptable to Poland. The mandate is different from the mandates provided in the treaty as League of Nations mandates. It means that if Poland administers Galicia well for twenty-five years that area will become an integral part of Poland.

PROMPT START UNDER TREATY

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—Besides bringing the League of Nations formally into existence, the promulgation of the treaty at the regular session beginning Dec. 1, appeared to be somewhat remote, in view of the procedure that has been outlined by Republican leaders. The plan is to refer the treaty to the Foreign Relations Committee, if it is resubmitted to the Senate, and fight the reservation battle there, rather than on the floor. The treaty would not be reported out of the committee until sixty-four, or two-thirds of the Senators, has given their approval to reservations. If this were accomplished, the treaty would be reported and ratified without further delay.

Considering the situation in the Senate committee, the fight there will probably be a long one, which may not end until the National campaign is well under way next Spring, if then. A majority of the Republican Senators on the committee are of the Johnson-Borah-Knox "Battalion of Death" group, and they are in a position to delay action for a considerable length of time, if not indefinitely.

Senator Borah has repeatedly urged his party to make the treaty an issue in the next campaign, and Senator Hiram Johnson has already started his campaign for the Presidential nomination on the league issue.

These and other factors, such as the announced desire of Senator Moses of New Hampshire, to reopen hearings on the treaty, and go into a thorough investigation of negotiations at Paris, give little hope of a speedy disposition of the treaty.

On the other hand, Senator Lodge's plan to carry the treaty into the next campaign does not necessarily mean delay in acting on it, according to some Senators. The fight could come over the question of withdrawal of the treaty, they explained, although the general opinion appeared to be that the League and treaty would provide the issue rather than a proposal to withdraw.

The question was also raised by some Senators today as to whether the President can withdraw the treaty from the Senate without a majority vote by that body. A precedent was cited in the case of the Hawaiian treaty, which was withdrawn by the President in 1892 after the Senate had approved this step by a majority vote.

What new situation President Wilson's message to Congress will create is problematical tonight. Although the Republican forces appeared to be taking the aggressive, as the Lodge challenge to a finish fight indicated, the lineup may be shifted entirely by President Wilson's next move and the result may be a prompt disposal of the treaty, according to many observers.

It is known that many Republicans want to keep the treaty out of the next campaign. It is also known that Senator Hitchcock is ready to compromise on reservations which come close to those sponsored by Senator Lodge.

Might Lose Seized Property.

Meanwhile, officials of the Government confess that they are at sea as to American relations with Germany. They are uncertain as to the status of the property of German citizens seized by the United States, including the great German passenger liners. They are convinced, however, that should Congress declare the war at an end, as provided in the pending Senate resolution, and should this action be recognized as binding, the German property held by the United States would revert to German ownership.

This is only one of the complications that the Senate's action has produced. Should the war be declared at an end by any other course than ratification of the treaty, the status of the relations of the United States and Germany would be governed by the principles of international law. To accomplish the advantages which the United States obtains through the Versailles treaty, it would be necessary for this Government to enter into new treaty negotiations with the German Government. Here another complication is encountered, for the German Government cannot make arrangements with any other Government without submitting such arrangements to the League of Nations, of which the United States would not be a member. It is declared here to be a case of the "vicious circle" over again.

The powers that have ratified the treaty may proceed to carry out its provisions and to organize the League of Nations. One complication in this connection is that the first meetings of the League Council and the League Assembly are to be called by the President of the United States under the terms of the covenant, which part of the treaty-making machinery the United States has in effect rejected. Whether President Wilson will feel free to act under the authority thus conferred is something that has not been disclosed.

The failure of the treaty prevents the United States from having a representative on the allied reparations commission which will determine the compensation to be exacted from Germany in retribution for the losses she caused by the war.

It has been the intention of this Government to accept as its share of this reparation the German merchant ships seized by the United States and the German property taken over in this country. The right and title of the United States to these ships and other properties belonging to private citizens of Germany is now brought into question. According to the interpretation of authorities they will revert to German ownership when the war between Germany and the United States is declared to be at an end, there being no treaty agreement between the United States and Germany for their disposition.

Cite Precedents on Resolution.

Considerable discussion was aroused today by the belief expressed at the White House that the concurrent resolution offered by Senator Lodge to declare the war at an end would require the President's signature. The general practice has been to require the President's signature to all bills and joint resolutions, but not to concurrent resolutions, or simple resolutions requiring action by only one branch of Congress. Search of precedents discloses, however, that it is the substance and not the form of a resolution that determines whether it requires the Presidential signature.

An opinion written in August, 1854, by Caleb Cushing, then Attorney General, states that Congress cannot "pass any law which in effect coerces the discretion of the President" except by the President's consent unless it should be passed over his veto by a two-thirds vote.

A similar view is taken in a report made by a Senate Committee on Judiciary some twenty years ago. This report states that Congress can take no action in the nature of legislation without the approval of the Executive unless by going over his veto. The substance, not the form, of a measure determined whether it required the signature of the President, the committee reported.

GIVES WARNING TO SENATE.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 21.—Robert R. McCormick, one of the managers of the Chicago Tribune, sends this London dispatch of Thursday's date, which will be published tomorrow:

"The London papers widely display the suggestion of the Presse de Paris that if America does not require the acceptance of the reservations in the Peace Treaty, the Allies will allow the League to be formed and later refuse to recognize the validity of the reservations.

"Therefore, it is vital that the Senate does not omit a clause requiring their acceptance. The majority of the league, otherwise, would demand obedience to those sections reserved against under penalty of war."

TREATY SNARL HITS EXCHANGE

British Don't Expect Stable Money Market Until Ratification.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—The condition of American exchange is causing anxiety in trade circles, as the prevailing rates mean that a tremendous premium has to be paid by British buyers for goods purchased in the United Statse. The rate this morning was called at $4.05, on easier money in New York, but opinion in Lombard Street is that there is no backbone in the market, while the recent uneasiness caused by the constant declining tendency has been accentuated by the non-ratification of the Peace Treaty. The rate, according to opinion here, is likely to be unstable until the treaty question is settled and official action is taken regarding the granting of credits.

The lower exchange rate is also a contributory cause to the high prices realized for arrivals of silver, while, on the other hand, America, Spain, and other countries, in view of the adverse exchange, are taking offerings of gold in the open market at 103 shillings per ounce, or 21 per cent. over the mint prices.

The money market is gradually tightening, daily loans which are badly wanted commanding 5 per cent., with the floating supplies insufficient. Borrowers are forced to pay the Bank of England 6½ per cent. on weekly loans. The joint stock banks are not lending freely in the market because of the huge trade demands by customers for their expanding businesses and the financing of the large number of cotton bills now arriving.

Market opinion is that the year will pass without a high bank rate, but that money will be scarce.

WANT TO TRY KAISER FOR WAR LAW BREAK

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Saturday, Nov. 22.—The Daily Chronicle hears that the Government is steadily proceeding with its plans for bringing the ex-Kaiser to trial.

It is probable that the formal application to the Dutch Government for the surrender of the ex-Kaiser will be made when ratifications of the Peace Treaty by three of the great powers have been deposited.

There are alternative indictments on which William II. can be arraigned before an international tribunal. He can be tried on the charge of responsibility for the war or on charges of breach of the laws of war.

It is probable, The Chronicle says, that the Government will proceed with the latter course and so avoid the possibility of an interminable historical discussion with regard to the actual responsibility foro pening hostilities.

Holland is at present de facto custodian of the ex-Kaiser. There is no doubt that the legal advisers of The Netherlands Government have been consulted on the delicate questions involved.

Chief among the many difficulties to be guarded against is any appearance of bullying a small and friendly power, which would naturally be the worst possible start for the League of Nations.

URGES 'REAL PEACE' WITH GERMANY

SEES MILITARIST MENACE

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—Harold Spender in an article in The Daily Chronicle points out the seriousness of the present European situation and the danger of a fresh outbreak of war in the near future unless steps are taken to attain real and permanent peace with Germany.

"Although the Germans signed the peace treaty nearly five months ago," he says, "the treaty itself is not yet ratified, although we were assured in the House of Commons the other day that it would be ratified on Nov. 10. America hangs back, entangled in party squabbles, and still bemused with that old dream of detachment from Europe which was the inspiring force of the War of Independence."

Mr. Spender, while agreeing that there is "not the remotest possibility of Germany being able to resume war on a big scale in our generation," says that there are many invisible forces at work in Germany—"forces of hope and despair, flickers of energy which seem to survive even national destruction"—and he proceeds:

"If we leave to Germany no alternative but despair, then we may prepare ourselves for some wild spasms of resistance before the end comes. In other words, we must make our choice—peace or war, war or peace. If we refuse to consummate this peace both in deed and word, then there is but one logical alternative—we must remain armed; we must cease demobilizing; we must be careful how we retrench. For the worst possibility of all would be for us to disarm and yet to refuse real peace. Then would come Germany's chance. The embers of the military power which, as the Prime Minister has shrewdly pointed out, are sullenly smoking in Eastern Russia, might suddenly flicker again into flame. If we fail to secure peace it will be necessary for this nation to keep under arms a full million of men in order to police disordered Europe. Conscription will be inevitable.

"The alternative is to make peace—real, actual peace, not merely camouflaged war—but to make peace with people you must be willing to trade with them. To refuse to trade with them is to carry on war with them in everything except actual killing, because a nation that cannot trade must perish.

"That is one element in the making of peace. What is it that at present threatens Germany with the fearful alternatives of annihilation or renewal of war? Is it not that the present Government in Germany—a peace Government, a Republican Government—is not being allowed a reasonable chance; that it is not being permitted to prove to its own people that there is a possibility for Germany to exist at peace with other nations? The result is that the credit of the present Government is gradually oozing out. Every observer from Germany tells us the same thing, that general German public opinion is gradually swinging against a republican form of government and drifting toward the desperate advices of the Militarist Party."

Mr. Spender concludes:

"As sure as night follows day there will be, unless peace be really secured, another Anglo-German war within five or six years, even if it only takes the form of prolonged guerrilla strife over the vast spaces of Central Europe; for history has clearly shown that no great people will perish without a second effort, and if men cannot live by peace, they will prefer to die on the battlefield than die of famine and despair."

Polk Family Guests in London.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—Frank L. Polk, Under Secretary of State and head of the American peace delegation, and his family are guests in London at the home of Sir John Lane Harrington, on what is described as a purely personal visit. No arrangements have been made for Mr. Polk to meet members of the British Government. He will return to Paris Tuesday.

SOME BRITISH CRITICS ARE LENIENT TO US

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—The London Times, in an editorial on the American Senate's rejection of the German treaty, says:

"The disappointment to the democracies of Europe is a bitter blow to the whole system of international policy which America did so much to build up, and of which the League of Nations is the concrete expression. It is a very heavy prejudice to the prospects of European peace and of world peace. Any attempt to disguise these things from ourselves or from the Americans would be idle and unwise. We must face the facts—and they are serious facts—of the new situation which the unfortunate action of the Senate has created.

"It does not come as a surprise to anybody acquainted with American politics and American opinion, and we must presume that the statesmen of the alliance long since determined upon their course in the contingency which constantly became more probable.

"The rejection of the treaty and of the League of Nations incorporated in it may be expected to give rise to unfavorable feelings and to caustic comments in some quarters, particularly among nations who do not understand American traditions and American politics so well as Englishmen understand them.

"We deprecate any feeling of the kind as unmerited and unfair. We believe ex-President Taft expressed the real sentiments of his countrymen and his countrywomen at the New York banquet to the Prince of Wales when he said: 'The great body of American people realize that they must unite with other nations in saving the world from future catastrophe.' 'The European nations,' Mr. Taft added, 'must be patient with us.' That is wise advice from the lips of a true friend. We trust it will everywhere be followed.

"We agree with Mr. Taft that they do see the necessity placed upon them of union with other democracies. Even if their eyes are not yet fully opened to the truth, America will sooner or later draw the conclusions. If she does not ratify this treaty and League, she will presently become a party to some very similar arrangements. Until she does, in her own time, we must 'have patience' with her."

The Chronicle Counsels Patience.

The Daily Chronicle says:

"Whatever happens next month, it would be idle to minimize the mischief caused by what has happened already. The Senate's action made it impossible for the other powers which signed the treaty at Versailles to expect from the United States the same leadership in the development of the League for which all their most democratic and peace-loving statesmen had hoped, but our only wise course is to be patient and make the best of what is left."

As regards the fear in America that the League may prove a mere partisan alliance of the powers victorious in the late war The Chronicle says:

"We respect this fear so far as it is genuine, and it would be affectation to treat it as already groundless; but we would earnestly ask Americans who are influenced by it to reconsider their view in the light of European facts. If the League were really a militarist plot, as some suggest, how do they account for the circumstance that throughout Western Europe it is not the militarists, but the anti-militarists, who are concerned to preserve and develop it, and that its European backing is democratic and pacific to the core?"

Spectator Praises American Ideals.

LONDON, Nov. 21 (Associated Press).—All the weeklies discuss the American Senate's decision on the treaty in a friendly way.

"We understand perfectly America's difficulties and the spirit in which the Senate has been in action, and how public opinion has been working," says The Spectator. "While America's voice is still uncertain, let it not be forgotten that America is always inclined to be like the man in the Gospel who said 'I go not' and went."

The newspaper recalls that the President and people of the United States first said the war was not their concern.

"When she did act," The Spectator adds, "it was with a self-abandonment and unselfishness and generosity to which the history of international relations affords no parallel. America threw herself into the contest without a reservation, without thought of what she was to gain as a nation. She played no huckster's part. With a magnificence of purpose which, if the world at large does not completely understand it, has always been understood here by her own flesh and blood, she nobly refused to make Europe's agony her opportunity. Even for reasonable demands the idea of making terms for the salvation of the world never crossed the mind of her people. They were too proud to bargain."

The Spectator recalls its expressed astonishment at the construction of the American peace delegation and says it thinks President Wilson should have invited ex-President Taft, Elihu Root, and Senator Lodge to go to Paris to share in his responsibilities.

The Nation says:

"Superficially Europe's loss is irremediable. Her idealists lose the participation of the greatest of the world States in the greatest of world ideals. Her liberals will miss the hoped-for American mandate for Armenia and Constantinople. Her philanthropists may have to lament her formal withdrawal from economic relief of millions of starving and unemployed workers.

"Mr. Wilson might have gone home from Paris with a charter of a new Europe and have bound America to willing association in the work of reparation. But on the road to Utopia he fell among real politicians. The European powers had made their own arrangements, irrespective of the policy or sentiment of the ally whose intervention had made it possible for them to come to any arrangement. Mr. Wilson himself was treated in Paris with gross discourtesy, while leaf by leaf the book of promise of his earlier statesmanship was torn away."

The Saturday Review, commenting on the adjournment of the United States Senate, says:

"We are convinced that the binding, far-reaching, and omnipresent obligations of the League of Nations would have created friction between Great Britain and the United States. After more than a century of ill-will and misunderstanding, the British and Americans have come to respect one another and recognize each other's strength. Why not leave it at that?"

The New Statesman says:

"What is really serious, we think, is not the Senate's behavior, but the fact that the Senate apparently represents the attitude of the American people."

The Evening Standard says:

"It is permissible to point out that America is not the first country that has struggled to preserve splendid isolation. Aloofness was long the essence of British foreign policy. Whatever decision the Senate reaches, it is clear that America will continue to be drawn into world affairs."

The Globe says:

"It is for the Government and people of the United States to decide whether they are meeting the moral responsibility the present situation places upon them. America never failed before, and it is inconceivable that she will fail now."

BONAR LAW HOPEFUL OF OUR AID LATER

But Meanwhile Our Delay Will Not Be Allowed to Hamper Peace Work.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—"The inability of the United States representative at Paris to deposit President Wilson's ratification of the German treaty at the same time those of other powers are filed will not prevent the remaining allied and associated powers from proceeding to carry the treaty into effect," said Andrew Bonar Law, Government leader in the House of Commons, today, in answer to numerous questions regarding the status of the treaty as a result of the American Senate's action.

Replying to a question from Sir Donald MacLean, Bonar Law said:

"Without doubt there will be no slackening in the determination of Great Britain to do all in her power to take the lead in seeing that the League of Nations becomes an effective instrument of human progress. I think it would be a mistake to assume that all possibility of help from the United States is gone."

Referring to the possibility of an alteration in the date of formal ratification of the treaty (which has been tentatively fixed for Dec. 1), Mr. Bonar Law said:

"That must depend upon whether there is a possibility of a change in the view of the Senate at its meeting in December."

Asked whether the action of the United States would affect the Anglo-French-American treaty, the Government leader declared:

"Our undertaking in that treaty, which so far has been unratified by the United States, was contingent upon its also being carried by the United States. Another situation might create a new condition of affairs."

Peace Treaty by the powers which have already ratified it will bring into force a prodigious list of obligations which must be performed by Germany. They touch upon great and small matters in many parts of the world, and are subject to time limits ranging from fifteen days to fifteen years.

For the establishment of the league no definite time is stipulated in the treaty, but the inference generally drawn is that it will be set up at once. There are many references in the treaty to subjects upon which the league must pass within a few weeks from the coming into force of the compact.

A number of commissions, including that which is to take charge of the Saare Basin and the one which is to delimit the Polish-German frontier, are to be set up within fifteen days of the establishment of peace.

Within three months the German Army must be reduced to 200,000 effectives, all unauthorized munitions plants must be closed. Germany must hand over all of her military and naval aeronautical equipment, including the remnants of her once proud Zeppelin fleet, and must modify her laws to conform with various treaty provisions.

The time limit for the reduction of the German Navy personnel to its prescribed strength is two months, and by the same date the German warships named in the treaty must be delivered to the Allies. One month is the limit for the delivery of the last scrap of submarine equipment. The German forts which the treaty names must be disarmed within two months and dismantled within six.

In matters relating to finance and financial reparation, the dates for the most part are fixed on the calendar and the time of coming into force of the treaty does not affect them. The date of May 1, 1921, is stipulated as the limit for Germany's delivery to the Reparations Commission of her initial reparation payment of 20,000,000,000 marks, and the commission is required by May 1, 1919, to notify Germany of the total damage claims to be filed against her by her late enemies.

No date is fixed for the appointment of the reparations commission, but the presumption is that it will begin work immediately. In fact, dispatches have indicated that it has been doing business unofficially for some weeks in preparation for the task it must assume of rationing raw materials to Germany and taking over the vast work of financial rehabilitation throughout Europe. The clearing house system by which it is to operate must be set up in three months.

Other sweeping provisions are definitely set forth as becoming effective on the date of the exchange of ratifications. Germany immediately loses legal title to all her colonies and to all her surface warships not in home ports. Rights in Shantung pass formally to Japan and Great Britain's protectorate over Egypt is legalized.

Germany immediately accepts as binding upon her some fifty treaties relating to many subjects, and agrees to accept in future many other treaties yet to be negotiated by the Allies. Prisoners of war are to be repatriated, the treaty says, "as soon as possible" after the date of effective peace. German troops must be withdrawn from various sections, including portions of East Prussia and Poland, within fifteen days. Coal deliveries to Belgium and France must begin at once.

PARIS STILL HOPES FOR RATIFICATION

Diplomats Look for Efforts at Treaty Compromise in the Senate.

FRENCH PRESS RETICENT

By EDWIN L. JAMES.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Nov. 21.—There was a reaction today from the excitement of yesterday, caused by the receipt of the news that the American Senate had adjourned without ratifying the treaty. The opinion has spread in all diplomatic circles that the adjournment means only a recess, during which efforts can be made to reach a compromise, and this opinion is borne out by reports received by the European Governments today from their representatives in Washington.

The American delegation has as yet received no official word from Washington as to the latest developments and consequently finds itself powerless to comply with requests for information coming from their delegation. It has to rely on news dispatches for its own information, and such dispatches are meagre and lacking in details.

The French press this morning, with one exception, abstains from comment on the action of the Senate. This attitude of the editors is probably due to a request of the French Government. The sole comment on the situation comes from the editor of L'Homme Libre, Premier Clemenceau's newspaper. He says:

"The Supreme Council fixes Dec. 1 as the day to put the treaty into effect. There is no reason why this should not be so. The attitude of the American Senate does not permit us to wait for ratification by the United States, which is evidently only postponed, but perhaps postponed for a long time.

"One cannot deny the gravity of the situation which arises from the attitude of America. Besides questions of detail, which render difficult the constitution and functioning of the League of Nations in the absence of our friends from the other side of the Atlantic, one forsees what our enemies of yesterday can gain from the application of the Versailles treaty without the effective aid of the nation whose chief fixed its directing principles.

"This peril, we dare say, will be really disquieting only if the attitude of the plutocratic Senators remains uncompromising. Fortunately, all indications are that this will not be so. Another session of Congress will see accomplished the ratification which the late session was not able to accomplish. The practical spirit and friendship of the Americans for the European democracies will be able to triumph, we are sure, over party and personal quarrels. While waiting, it is our duty to see that the treaty is put into effect in the same spirit which guided the Peace Conference."

The American delegation awaits instructions from Washington as to what is to be done with regard to the American troops on the Rhine when the treaty is put into effect. It appears that the Allies will adhere to Dec. 1 as the date for ratification unless reassuring news comes from Washington.

The question to be settled by the American delegation is whether the putting of the treaty into effect terminates the armistice conditions between Germany and America, although America has not ratified the treaty. Information is also desired as to whether or not Washington wishes the American Ambassador to France to sit on the committee of Ambassadors which will take over the unfinished work of the Peace Conference when it adjourns the first week in December. Answers to these questions are expected by Tuesday, when Frank L. Polk, head of the American delegation, will return from London and Premier Clemenceau will be back from his holiday.

SEES GERMAN SHIPPING KILLED BY THE TREATY

Chairman of Hamburg-American Line Says Restoration Is Impossible—Has Only Few Craft.

HAMBURG, Nov. 21 (Associated Press).—"Under the Peace Treaty the restoration of the German mercantile fleet is made an actual impossibility," said Herr von Schinkel, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Hamburg-American Line, in addressing a meeting of the officials of the line today.

"Except the remount of a few small steamers and other accessories, everything has been taken from the company which now has, instead of its former property, merely a claim on the Government for indemnification."

The meeting approved an issue of 5,000,000 marks in preferred shares and amended its rules with a view to permitting the company to engage in other branches of business and protecting the company against a majority of the shares of the capital stock being acquired by foreigners owing to the present low rate of exchange.

SWISS UPPER HOUSE VOTES TO JOIN LEAGUE

BERNE, Nov. 21.—This morning, while the Swiss Ständerat, or upper house, was proceeding to discuss the ratification of the decision of the Nationalrat, or lower house, that Switzerland should join the League of Nations, a Berne newspaper called Der Bund circulated widely a bulletin that the American Senate had refuse to ratify the Peace Treaty.

Nevertheless the Ständerat ratified by 33 votes to 6 the lower house's decision that Switzerland should join the League.

FORCE IN MEXICO IF JENKINS IS HELD

cial dispatches dealing with the case, that there was neither ground nor justification for the attempt that has been made by certain authorities in Mexico to make it appear that Consular Agent Jenkins had connived with the bandit Cordoba for his own kidnapping. On the contrary, the report of Consular Agent Jenkins to the State Department, given over his own signature as a sworn official of the American Government, shows that Mr. Jenkins states that he is indignant over the attempt to involve him in collusion with the bandit, that his consular agency did not receive proper police protection by any of the Mexican officials, and that in addition to sustaining considerable suffering and being in fear of his life he has officially reported that his entire loss in the matter will represent an outlay of about 357,341 pesos in Mexican gold, or about $178,670 in American gold.

The Jenkins report to the State Department officially giving the details as to his kidnapping and what occurred in connection with his release after ransom of $150,000 American gold was demanded, tells in about 4,300 words a graphic story of the incident. Secretary Lansing was in possession of this and other reports on the case before the stiff note of last night was sent to the Carranza Government.

The Administration is not seeking to engage in armed intervention in Mexico, and has been doing everything within its power for some months to avoid that last resort. If armed intervention comes as a result of the attitude of the Carranza Government in this case it will be a contingency for which the Carranza Government itself must assume the sole responsibility.

Force Needed to Intervene.

It was admitted in high official circles today that the State Department had before it an estimate prepared by the War Department of just what would be involved should this Government be forced to armed intervention in Mexico. This estimate covers in detail the number of troops considered necessary and the time that would be necessary to handle the situation and restore order. This estimate was prepared more than three years ago, but it is not considered that the situation in Mexico has changed sufficiently in the meantime to necessitate any radical revision of plans or figures. The War Department placed the number of troops needed at 450,000 and estimated that it would probably take three years with such a force to bring about a complete pacification of the country.

It is not the expectation in official circles that President Carranza and his offical advisers will invite drastic action, or possible intervention, by the United States by refusing to release Jenkins, although the gravity of the situation was evident in the attitude of officials today.

Another significant feature of the situation today was the apparent decision of the Washington Government that Jenkins was kidnapped through lack of protection by the Mexican authorities, and it is now possible that the Washington Government will hold the Carranza Government responsible for the conditions which resulted in the kidnapping of an official of the Washington Government in Mexico.

The official report of Jenkins on his capture, while covering the same ground as that of the letter which Representative Davis gave out yesterday, goes considerably more into detail and sets forth facts of the case not dealt with in the letter to the Representative from Jenkins's Congressional district in Tennessee.

Jenkins says the amount stolen from his safes was 50,823.65 pesos, Mexican gold, and adds:

"It will be understood that in this city there are not banks where money can be deposited, as the Government confiscated all the banks long ago, and until the present time no private banks have been established here, and it is therefore necessary that every business man be his own banker, keeping in his own safe whatever money he may have on hand. It is also known that there is no paper money at present, and all money at present circulating is in coin. It is pertinent to mention that there was the sum of 105 pesos Mexican gold of consular funds in the money taken from my safes, and that the office of the consular agency is in the same room as my private office; therefore it may be properly stated that the safes were in the office of the consular agency."

Wanted to Get British Vice Consul, Too.

Jenkins's report also confirms the report that had reached Washington several days ago that it was likewise the purpose of the bandits who kidnapped him to kidnap also the British Vice Consul at Puebla. This part of the plot failed because the British Vice Consul was not in Puebla at the time.

"The leader of the bandits," Jenkins's report stated, "ordered my wife to call up the British Vice Consul here, Mr. William Hardaker, an intimate friend of ours, saying that he also wanted to carry him with me, but my wife replied that Mr. Hardaker was in Mexico, and the bandit said no more on the subject. But it is evident that it was his intention to carry Mr. Hardaker with me. It is probable that he intended making me call Mr. Hardaker, for it was certainly not his intention to allow my wife to come to the office, but after she had come he very likely considered it better that she call him and not that I do it. I have since learned that on that night there were several suspicious people immediately around Mr. Hardaker's house, and it is quite possible that it was their intention to capture him on his leaving his house, as he also lives in the extreme eastern limit of the city."

Jenkins gives a graphic description of his treatment while in the hands of the bandits, tells how, as a result of lack of protection from the rain, he began to suffer rheumatic pains in his right leg, how this rapidly grew worse until he reached "most deplorable state, being unable to rise from the ground, and suffering constantly the most excruciating pain from my leg," and how he developed fever.

While he resisted payment of the ransom, the consular agent reported, his "grave condition" led him to assent to five of his friends obligating themselves "with their lives" for the payment of the balance of the money. The sum of 54,000 pesos in cash was paid by these friends toward the ransom of 300,000 Mexican pesos demanded.

"Since my release," says the Jenkins report, "further payments have been made on account of the balance due and total payments now approximate 100,000 pesos. It is my intention to make arrangements as best I can for the immediate payment of the balance due and recover the documents that were extended to Cordova thus releasing my friends from the great responsibility they have assumed. I feel absolutely certain that any failure to comply with the obligations of that document would result in the immediate death of these friends and myself, as it is well known that the rebels can with all ease perpetrate most any crime that they desire."

Jenkins declares that his release was due wholly to the activity of his friends, and not any practical efforts put forward by the Mexican authorities.

Concerning the attitude of the Mexican authorities in Puebla the Jenkins report says:

"It is worthy of attention to take note of the attitude the State Government of Puebla assumed toward this incident, for almost immediately after my capture the official paper of the Governor published the opinion that I had been instrumental in my own kidnapping, and that I have formed a plot with the rebels and other friends of mine to cause international difficulties. Also that it was the intention to collect this ransom from the Mexican Government and divide it, &c. It is impossible to express my indignation at this outrage on the part of the local authorities, and they have persisted in persecuting me in every way possible until a few days ago. Even while I was in the hospital, unable to see anyone, the Judge in charge of the case in repeated instances attempted to cause me trouble, and it was only by the stand taken by the Director of the hospital that I was not annoyed. I am glad to say that the best element of this city has recognized in these attacks only an effort on the part of the Governor to avoid the responsibility of his criminal neglect of the protection of the city."

SHEA SEES DANGER IN RAILROAD BILLS

RAILROAD CRISIS DISCUSSED

President Elliott Says Higher Rates Are Necessary to Save Companies from Bankruptcy.

Announcing that he spoke on behalf of the four railroad brotherhoods, the allied shop crafts, and the American Federation of Labor, Timothy Shea, Acting President of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Engineers, last night demanded continuation of the present system of Government control for at least two years, and expressed dissatisfaction with all proposed legislation for the solution of the railroad problem.

His speech was delivered at the annual dinner of the Academy of Political Science in the Hotel Astor, and his audience comprised more than 1,000 persons, including executives from the largest railroads in the country. He followed railroad officials who had urged return of the roads to their owners and increases in rates so that railroad credits would be restored and investment in railroad stocks and bonds again made attractive.

It would be a public calamity to "hurry the railroads back to private ownership and operation by means of the Cummins bill, the Esch bill, or any other legislation," Mr. Shea said, in speaking in support of the Plumb plan, with modifications. He asserted that the adoption of the Plumb plan would not "Russianize" the railroads, but would "Americanize" them.

Twenty experts in railroad affairs presented their views upon the needs of the transportation systems of the country at the series of meetings held in the Astor under the auspices of the academy. There was no divergence of opinion among railroad executives that the problem was the most important before the country and should be taken up immediately.

Howard Elliott, President of the Northern Pacific Railroad, said last night that one of the first necessary steps was to permit the railroads to raise rates so that equipment could be brought up to date and so that investment in railroad bonds could be made attractive again. The same opinion was voiced by other speakers.

Opposed to Both Bills.

"The railway labor organizations are opposed to the fundamental basis of both the so-called Cummins and Esch bills," said Mr. Shea.

"The most objectionable provisions, so far as employes are concerned, are those in the Cummins bill dealing with labor conditions and relations. The authors of the Cummins bill directly state that they are determined to shackle labor by taking away from it the right to strike. The framers of the Esch bill at first had the same object in view. These labor provisions, however, I am glad to say, were stricken out of the Esch bill. The object which it is hoped to attain by the Cummins bill, however, is identical—the deprivation of labor of its most effective weapon—the right to strike.

"The anti-strike provisions of the Cummins bill are justified outwardly by the claim that the public welfare must be protected against dislocations and stoppage of transportation facilities. The distinguished Chairman of the Senate Committee, whose name the Senate bill bears, and many others in the Senate, are undoubtedly sincere in this point of view, but they are blinded by sinister interests which lurk invisibly in the background. We, who represent labor, may be unduly suspicious at times, but we pride ourselves in the fact that we have long since become proficient in detecting the hand of Esau when we hear a voice which seems to be the voice of Jacob.

"Beyond these anti-strike proposals we can see the sword of treachery. The chief executives of the railway labor organizations have become convinced—and their conclusions are based on actual evidence—that the pending anti-strike legislation is the indirect outcome of a conspiracy to reduce the wages of railroad employes below their present inadequate levels. The dominating financial interests in the transportation industry, who, in the background, conspired to bring about this legislation under the dissimulation of protecting the public against railway strikes, have decided that when Government control of the transportation industry is terminated, they will reduce the rates of pay of railway workers and, if strikes result, they will break them by fining or imprisoning the strikers and their leaders. It is the same reasoning and it is the same group who have attempted to continue the enslavement of the iron and steel workers by denying them the right of collective bargaining.

Shea Sees Sinister Plot.

"These interests are also responsible for the failure of the National Industrial Conference called by President Wilson to function. They are also the fundamental forces against bituminous mine workers and are at the bottom of the conspiracy to exploit both the miners and the consumers of coal.

"Their object is never altruistic but always sinister. Their purpose is to continue unchecked their wartime profiteering, and the exploitation of wage-earners and the public, in which profitable policy they had been so successful prior to the war. It is unnecessary to say that not only as railway workers, but as free and patriotic citizens in our self-governing American republic, we shall resist this conspiracy to the uttermost. Under no conditions shall we consent to be shackled with legal chains of industrial slavery.

"There is no blinking the fact that the real interest and the vital significance of anti-strike legislation to the railroad employe is involuntary servitude. It will render him powerless in the presence of his most formidable and ruthless adversaries.

"It is strange and incredible that when we have just made every sacrifice of life and property to destroy political autocracy in Europe, and when we have been encouraged to look forward to a larger measure of industrial democracy, that a policy is formulated and advocated which can mean nothing else than placing railroad workers under the control of autocratic financial and industrial interests.

"We submit that such legislation is not only unjust and intolerable, but is opposed to the fundamental ideals of American democracy. If labor is to be deprived of the right to strike and is to be required to submit all its grievances to judicial determination, such a policy must obviously be preceded by legislation or agreement which will assure to labor in the form of industrial principles or fundamental law the assurances of its fundamental economic rights. Without such a policy, anti-strike legislation will open wide the door to an intolerable exploitation of the working classes which will result in violent protest and the breakdown of civil government.

"It is for this reason that the third practical consideration against such legislation may be stated. It is not feasible. Being unjust and undemocratic, free men will not endure it. It is, therefore, impracticable. All of the industrial and commercial nations of the world have in past years tried such a policy in some form, and with the exception of France and Russia under the old régime, they all found that it did not work. Hundreds of thousands of men cannot in the event of a discontinuance of work be placed in jail. Men will not submit to the confiscation of their financial resources and property because they have refused to accede to unjust working or living conditions.

"To those who know conditions and have an insight into the psychology of the railroad worker, it is apparent that the enactment of such legislation will have exactly the opposite effect to that for which it is intended. It will add to existing discontent, stimulate dislocation of transportation facilities, and probably lead to a stoppage of work on a scale that has been hitherto deemed incredible."

Elliott Urges Higher Rates.

"Without an increase in rates a very large number of railroad companies will face bankruptcy, and very few of those who escape this unfortunate plight can pay any return to the shareholders," said President Elliott of the Northern Pacific Railroad.

President Elliott added that for the first nine months of this year the so-called standard of about $935,000,000 had not been earned by $345,000,000 on 229,000 miles, comprising the larger systems, and that there was an indication that the total deficit for the year on all railroad operations might reach $350,000,000. He said that the condition was most serious in New England and that immediate rate increases there were necessary if the railroads "are to survive and serve the public." He added that the "roads north of the Ohio River and east of the Mississippi are also in a very critical condition."

Alfred P. Thom, general counsel of the Association of Railway Executives, said that he believed also that an increase of rates was needed.

Bond Market Conditions.

As an example of the decline of the interest of investors in railroads, and the consequent decrease of railroad credits, Pierpont V. Davis, Vice President of the National City Company, cited the failure of his company to dispose within five months of "an issue of ten-year 6 per cent. obligations of one of the few railroad companies which has prospered under Federal control." He said that a similar issue of an industrial corporation, amounting to $1,500,000, was absorbed in an hour, with $1,000,000 in oversubscriptions.

"From my knowledge of the bond market, I believe that, owing to the present attitude of the investor, the successful flotation of new issues is impossible to all but a very limited number of railway companies," said Mr. Davis. "This preference on the part of investors for the securities of industries not subject to public regulation is one of the most pronounced characteristics of the bond market at the present time."

In an analysis of the Cummins bill, S. Davies Warfield, President of the National Association of Owners of Railroad Securities, denied the assertion of officials of the railroad workers' brotherhoods that there was eight billions of water in the twenty billions of railroad securities.

The property investment accounts of the railroads have been under the close supervision of the Interstate Commerce Commission only since 1907, yet within the short intervening period of twelve years the records show that more than $6,000,000,000 of cash expenditure has been made on the properties of Class I railroads, over one-third of the $17,500,000,000 total property book value of these roads, exclusive of intercompany securities, (as of the test period 1915, 1916, and 1917.) I am speaking of property value not security values or issues. No well-informed person will contest the statement that in the aggregate the properties and equipment devoted to the public use of Class I railroads (89 per cent. of the total mileage) are worth more in the aggregate than the $17,500,000,000, as shown by the books of the railroads.

Balthasar H. Meyer, a member of the Interstate Commerce Commission, said that to increase that body beyond seven members would lower the efficiency and that thirty would be a "convention," not a commission. Other speakers yesterday were Professor T. W. Metre of Columbia University, Professor Frank H. Dixon of Princeton, Calvin Tomkins, ex-Dock Commissioner in this city; Alba B. Johnson, President of the Railway Business Associaton; Professor Thomas Reed Powell of Columbia University; John E. Oldham, the Boston banker; Thomas W. Hulme, Vice Chairman of the President's Committee on Federal Valuation; William L. Ransom, former counsel to the Public Service Commission here, and Representative Schuyler Merritt, a member of the House Committee on Interstate and Foreign Commerce. Sessions of the academy will be held in the Astor today at 10:30 this morning and 2:30 this afternoon.

WAR FOOD CONTROL POWERS TO PALMER

While the margin between the wholesale and retail price of sugar has not yet been determined, officials are known to have considered tentatively 1.54 cents, making the retail price approximately 14 cents a pound. This, however, is subject to change, depending upon a variety of conditions.

Beet sugar refiners already have tentatively assented to the plan, it was learned, upon assurances that a higher price than now prevails would be established. Cane sugar dealers will be called into conference at an early date. They also are understood to favor the arrangement providing the price is raised, as is planned, so that they will not be involved in heavy losses which they say would result from buying Cuban sugar at the present price in Cuba and selling at 10½ cents, the present price in the United States.

The Sugar Distribution Committee will sit constantly and will have entire charge of the allocation of stocks. Refiners who enter into the agreement will be compelled to sell their supplies through this committee. Otherwise their transactions will not be materially restricted, it is said. Officials believe this plan will eliminate the possibility of a concentration of stocks at any point as well as prevent hoarding.

Wheat Embargo Lifted.

In a statement issued yesterday, Julius H. Barnes, United States Wheat Director, announced that, effective on Dec. 15, the export and import embargoes on wheat and wheat flour would be eliminated. The statement said that by a proclamation yesterday President Wilson terminated the embargo control which had been in effect for two years, first under the War Trade Board and then under the legislation embodied in the wheat guarantee bill.

"This is one step in the necessary reconstruction of trade facilities broken by the war which must function when the Grain Corporation terminates its three years' work," continued Mr. Barnes's statement. "While ocean transport conditions and also disorganized international finance will probably prevent free trading between merchants of the various countries for some time, it is expected that, step by step, international trade may be reknit in the usual channels. Until this is fully accomplished the Grain Corporation will continue to sell from its stocks of wheat and wheat flour the foreign trade that is not supplied under private business initiative.

"This release of embargo also permits Canadian wheat and wheat flour to enter American markets free of duty under rulings of the customs service. It is expected that this will greatly enlarge the United States supply of Spring wheat flours which are favorites in the baking trade, and which, because of the partial crop failure in the Northwest this year, have been relatively in light supply."

SEIZE 38 SUGAR DEALERS.

Fourteen Firms Involved in Profiteering Charges in Chicago.

CHICAGO, Nov. 21.—Thirty-eight members of fourteen wholesale sugar firms were arrested today on Federal warrants charging profiteering in violation of the Lever Food Control act. They were charged with exacting an exorbitant price or conspiracy to obtain an excess price for sugar. The thirty-five sugar dealers are alleged to have sold sugar at prices ranging to 25 cents a pound.

Although the Illinois Fair Price Committee has ceased quoting a maximum price on sugar, Major A. A. Prague, its Chairman, today warned that control of sugar prices had not ceased, and that jobbers still were restricted to a profit of ¾ of a cent a pound and retailers to 1½ cents.

PRINCE RECEIVES FINAL GREETINGS

to my son's visit to New York and I cordially thank the Pilgrims for the kind hospitality they extend to him this evening and for the generous sentiments which you have expressed on their behalf. Special interest will attach to your gathering by the presence of Mr. Chauncey M. Depew, who was associated with the welcome given to my father sixty years ago.

GEORGE, R. I.

Sandringham, Nov. 19, 1919.

Your kind telegram just received. I am deeply interested at hearing the Pilgrim Society are going to entertain my dear grandson at dinner, and that Senator Chauncey M. Depew is to preside. My beloved husband was always such a friend of the great American Nation that he would have rejoiced as his son, his grandson, and as I do at the close union now formed between the two nations who have fought and suffered side by side in the war now happily ended. Please convey my sincere thanks for most kind message, which I appreciate very deeply.

ALEXANDRA.

In the midst of the address upon which Mr. Depew then started, a big loving cup filled with flowers was placed before the Prince. It hid him entirely from view, and there were insistent cries of "Take it away," and "We want to see the Prince." A member of his staff lifted the cup to a table below.

Mr. Depew said a visitor from Britain always was hailed gladly, because his coming served to increase and consolidate the friendship between the two nations, and that by the time such a guest was bidden farewell "we have always found that the better our two peoples know each other the better they like each other."

Recalls Prince Albert's Visit.

The speaker reminisced over the visit of King Edward when he was Prince of Wales, citing as an interesting historical contrast that visit on the eve of the civil war and the coming of the present Prince while his country and ours are celebrating peace.

"We were rather a primitive people fifty-nine years ago," he went on. "Few of our people had been abroad and we cared little for the ceremonies, formalities, and conventionalities which are so important in older civilizations, so I may be permitted to recall an incident with which I was personally familiar. The Prince of Wales was received in audience by a very important and distinguished public functionary. When the Prince entered the audience chamber this high official rushed forward, grasped him by the hand and in the enthusiasm of his welcome nearly wrenched off the Prince's arm, and shouted, 'Most welcome, Prince; we are all mighty glad to see you. How is your mother?'"

There is a delightful tradition at West Point that with some choice spirits among the cadets the Prince had a night off. Nights off are now only memories, as they probably can never be re-enacted. When I came to know the Prince and meet him frequently years after his visit here, I found that he had an invaluable faculty for a public man, that is the ability to remember the names and recall the time and place when he had met any one he wanted to remember.

"With the Russian Bolsheviki comrade means the union of one class against all other classes and the destruction of society. In the French revolution it meant the same thing. But among the Americans, the British and the French breaking through the Hindenburg line and racing for the Rhine, comrade meant a oneness and a unity in which all could participate. For the first time, I think, since the days of the Black Prince, over five hundred years ago, has an heir to the British throne fought in France. After five hundred years he was not fighting to conquer France but to save France and civilization. There he met our boys in the trenches, over the top and on the battlefield. To me one of the most interesting incidents of his visit was when he went to the hospital at Washington and among the wounded American heroes there cheered and delighted them by his cordial soldierly greeting, but above all won their hearts by calling them comrades."

Depew Tells a Joke on the Prince.

Mr. Depew drew a laugh, a shake of the head and a blush from the Prince when he said:

"No greater proof of how sensitive we are to each other's opinions can be given than this incident: It was reported in the press that an enthusiastic citizen of Boston asked the Prince in Canada, 'When will you visit Boston?' and the Prince replied, 'Where is Boston?' The effect on that city was electric. The police of Boston left their post, went on a strike and handed the Puritan city over to the mob. Then Boston was not only on the map, it filled the map.

"This is the last night of his Royal Highness with us, and it closes his visit. His has been an epoch-making trip. He has added new links, human links, to the ties which unite Canada to the British Empire. Many more missions have come to us during the war than ever before. They have consisted of famous Generals, great statesmen and powerful financiers. None of them have appealed to us like the Prince. To quote a homely New England saying, 'He seems to be just among his own folks.' He has grasped and tactfully interpreted our American ways and habits of looking at things. He speaks the American language. He has won our hearts. He carries home our appreciation, our affection and lasting memory."

The Prince Thanks the Pilgrims.

Meantime, the loving cup had been set before the Prince once more, and Mr. Depew asked him to accept it as a token of the honorary membership in the society to which he had been elected in the afternoon. Cries of protest were heard once more at the obtruding blooms, but they were stilled when the Prince said:

"Thank you. I like the flowers very much. It is a great pleasure and privilege for me to meet so many American Pilgrims here tonight, and I thank the society most sincerely for its hospitality and for membership in it and for the loving cup and the flowers—I can assure you I am very glad to be able to hide behind them."

When the laugh at that had died away he went on:

"Now that I am a New Yorker in my own right I am happy that the first occasion on which I have had the pleasure of being a guest of the Pilgrim Society should be in this great city, and that I shall be meeting American pilgrims even before I have met their fellow-pilgrims in London.

"I am not going to make a long speech, but there are two things which I should like to say before leaving the United States, and particularly to a gathering like this tonight. I have already alluded, when addressing other New York gatherings, to the important part played by the United States in the great war, but I have never properly expressed British admiration for the promptness with which the American Nation adopted compulsory enlistment for the emergency. That made the whole world feel that the weight of this great nation would be thrown into the balance with the utmost rapidity, as indeed it was.

Praises Voluntary Rationing.

"There is yet another form of your war service to which I have never alluded before—a very remarkable form, which made a deep impression upon the people of the British Empire. I refer to the wholerearted way in which the American nation accepted voluntary rationing in food and fuel. You all made a splendid response in this respect to the national appeal issued by Mr. Hoover, by whose devotion and organizing power so much suffering and want have been alleviated in the countries hardest hit by the war. That act alone shows with what spirit the American nation can throw itself into a great cause.

"There is one other thing to which I should like to refer tonight, not only because it has impressed me with new force during my travels on this continent, but also because it is an actual and visible example of the objects and aims which the Pilgrims' Society was formed to promote. I do not think anywhere else in the world, except on the North American continent, will you find a frontier between two nations 3,000 miles long with no extensive physical barrier, no military defense, no other dividing line than a boundary determined and guaranteed by mutual confidence and good-will.

"As a Britisher and as a Canadian I take a high pride in that boundary—the international frontier between Canada and the United States—for it seems to me to illustrate in a very striking and practical way the objects for which Americans and Britishers fought in the great war. Just think of it! The ideal which appears so difficult of attainment elsewhere has been an actual and positive reality in North America for over a hundred years.

"I have asked myself how that ideal has been attained here so much in advance of international conditions in other parts of the world, and I think the answer is quite clear. It has been attained because you on your side of the international boundary and we Britishers on ours have, under somewhat different forms, the same political faith, the same human aims, the same practical ideals. These two self-governing peoples, living side by side, each confident in the good-will of the other, have given this splendid example to the world."

With that the Prince laid aside his formal speech which he had been struggling, as always, to follow, without having had time to commit it to memory, and, adverting to Mr. Depew's narration of the West Point tradition about his grandfather, ended:

"Well, I must say that grandfather did better than I have done. I haven't had a night off, at West Point or anywhere else."

That brought laughter and cheers which were stilled only long enough to listen to the concluding words of thanks and regret to New York ring out once more as the Prince departed.

VISITS ROOSEVELT'S GRAVE.

Prince Places Wreath of Laurel—Luncheon at Piping Rock Club.

The Prince of Wales paid his tribute yesterday morning to the memory of Colonel Theodore Roosevelt. So simply that the event hardly could be called a ceremony at all. Edward Albert, with head bared and a look of sadness in his face, bent over the grave of the former President, at Oyster Bay, and deposited at its head a great wreath of laurel.

The royal visitor reached the cemetery at 11:30, and was met there by Lieut. Col. Theodore Roosevelt, eldest son of the late Colonel. The two shook hands, greeted each other heartily, and then walked silently, side by side, up the little hill to the grave. The waiting crowd, in which women and children predominated, had cheered as the guest arrived, but over them, too, fell a solemn hush as the little informal procession went up the hill.

Clarence H. Mackay, who had reached the cemetery a little earlier, had laid a sheaf of flowers beside the grave, and these appeared to confuse the Prince. He pointed to them interrogatively, evidently puzzled as to whether he was expected to deposit his wreath beside them. The Colonel's son shook his head and pointed to the head of the grave, and there the Prince put down his wreath, tied with a big bow of purple mourning ribbon. He stood for a moment with bowed head, and those who had gathered about him waited until the Prince turned quietly away, and in a moment the gathering at the cemetery had dissolved.

The British heir apparent had driven to Oyster Bay in a closed car with Viscount Grey, British Ambassador, and Rodman Wanamaker. As he entered the little town along South Street, he found a crowd of thousands lining his way, and making a gay picture with their waving American and British flags. They cheered him heartily, and Edward Albert, attired once more in mufti, bared his blonde head and waved his derby to right and left. Earlier he had seemed tired and nervous, but the hearty welcome seemed to cheer him, and his face brightened, the customary boyish smile appearing more and more often.

The official party, with its long trailing line of escorting automobiles, turned into Cove Neck Road, on the way to the cemetery, and there an even denser crowd turned the occasion for a moment into a semblance of carnival, despite the solemn nature of the Prince's errand.

It was not until he reached Long Island City that he consented, in response to the urgings of those who watch over him, to forsake the open car in which he had started the journey and, in deference to the brisk morning, ride inside. Rear Admiral Sir Lionel Halsey, who had started out with him, decided to defy the fresh air, and remained in the open automobile.

The Prince had debarked from the royal barge at the Columbia Yacht Club landing promptly on schedule, and had found awaiting him there the largest crowd that yet has watched for his coming from the battle cruiser Renown. He responded to a volley of noisy hails with a cheery greeting, and looked happy when some of the younger of his admirers squirmed through the police lines and rushed up to shake his hand. Several very proud youngsters ran back to hide their self-consciousness in the oblivion of the crowd, carefully guarding from all possible contamination the hand which just had been shaken by such a celebrity.

Greeted all along by smiling and cheering and waving watchers, the Prince was whirled into Central Park. His car came to a halt at the Mall, midway between the Seventy-second and Fifty-ninth Street entrances, and there he was met by Dr. George F. Kunz, President of the Historic and Scenic Preservation Society. A group of park gardeners were holding a young English elm tree beside a hole, which had been dug to receive its roots. The Prince of Wales placed the tree in the bed prepared for it, and took a shovel, with which he put four spadefuls of earth about the tree. Then he handed back the shovel with the laughing remark:

"There, I think that's a big heap for a young fellow so early in the morning."

The crowd which had watched the three-minute ceremony, in which the Prince had but duplicated the performance of his grandfather in 1860, cheered and applauded, and a moment later the young man was on his way to Oyster Bay.

When the wreath had been laid on the Roosevelt grave the Prince and his party got back into their automobiles and were driven to the Piping Rock Club, where he was the guest at luncheon of the Board of Governors. About two hundred were in the party, which included, besides the Prince, his entourage and his American escorts and aids, members of the club who live in the surrounding countryside, and members of their families.

Roger Winthrop, President of the club, presided at the luncheon, which was of a purely social nature, without speechmaking. With the coming of the coffee he proposed a toast to the Prince of Wales, and the drinking of this was followed by much applause. The orchestra played "God Save the King," and then the toastmaster proposed a toast to America and President Wilson. In the drinking of this the Prince, of course, joined, standing with the others at attention during the playing of "The Star-Spangled Banner." A moment later the party was over, and Edward Albert went to the lawn in the front of the clubhouse, where he planted another tree. After a tour of the grounds, he paused long enough for a few women guests to be presented to him, then started back to New York by automobile at 2 o'clock, in order to reach the Renown in time for the functions scheduled to take place on board during the afternoon.

PRINCE GREETS 1,000 PUPILS.

High School Boys and Girls Have Tea on Board the Renown.

One thousand New York school children from twenty-nine high schools went aboard the British battle cruiser Renown yesterday afternoon to see the Prince of Wales. They were conveyed to the warship in a naval tug and two of the municipal steamboats. The Police Boat Patrol, covered with American and British flags and the band on deck playing popular airs, circled around during the reception. About half the number were young women with a sprinkling of girls, and the remainder were youths who carried American flags.

The officers and the crew of the Renown expected to have 1,000 children come on board the ship and had made preparations for them.

The carpenter's mates rigged up an electric switchback railway on the forward deck and the sailors placed handspikes in the steam capstan aft for the children to sit upon and have a merry-go-round. The officers of the Renown made a bran bag, which is one of the ship's canvas bags filled with bran and all kinds of little gifts placed inside done up in small boxes for the little ones to dive for with their hands. These childlike pastimes were abandoned when the news was sent off to the Commander of the Renown that there would not be any little children in the party. As the tenders with the school girls on board came alongside they sang glees, and the Prince of Wales, dressed in the uniform of a naval Captain, stood on the grating of the accommodation ladder on the starboard quarter and saluted them. Tables were set out for tea on the after deck, and 500 were served at a sitting.

When a few hundred of the juvenile guests were assembled and cheering him on the quarterdeck under the awning, the Prince of Wales walked into a position amidships and standing with one foot on the capstan said: "I am delighted to welcome so many girls and boys of the New York schools on board the Renown, and I thank you for the kindly welcome you have given me in New York and the friendly words which have been addressed to me. The Renown, as you see, is a very large ship, but she is not large enough to hold the many thousands of boys and girls of New York whom I would like to invite on board today. I have been having a very good time in this great city, and I hope you will have a good time here this afternoon, and I hope you will carry away a happy memory of my party.

"I want you to have some small memento of this party and I have therefore arranged for you to be given a box of chocolates before leaving the ship. I thank you for coming."

During the afternoon about thirty of the United States mine sweepers which have just returned from their arduous duties in the North Sea left their anchorage off Tompkinsville, S. I., and moved up the Hudson River above Ninetieth Street. The Prince stood on the after part of the quarter deck and watched the small craft pass by. He had a difficult task to get away from the school girls who pulled him this way and that in their efforts to obtain his autograph to the photographs they had brought with them.

The Prince of Wales had decided not to come ashore today before sailing, but at the last moment he was asked to review 5,000 Boy Scouts, who will be drawn up in the form of a hollow square at the Columbia Yacht Club landing at 11:45 this morning. He will come off the ship and say a few words to them and then return to the Renown for the investitures. As the name of each veteran is called an officer will take the medal from the table and hand it to the Prince, who will decorate the recipient with it.

The ceremony is expected to occupy half an hour. Three hundred guests have been invited.

After the reception luncheon will be served at noon, and the Renown will sail for Halifax on the first leg of her homeward journey at 2 P. M. unless other arrangements are made today.

PRINCE AT THE HIPPODROME.

Crowd Cheers Him for Five Minutes on His Arrival.

When the Prince alighted from his automobile in front of the Hippodrome he was greeted by an electric sign which read "Happy Days to the Prince of Wales." He took one look at it, smiled in his familiar way, and then acknowledged the cheers of the crowd which had waited for more than an hour in the vicinity of the theatre for a glimpse of him.

At the entrance to the playhouse he was met by Mark Leuscher, manager of the Hippodrome, and escorted to the centre box on the right hand side of the house. A capacity audience, which had earlier in the evening indicated its affection for the heir apparent by cheering and applauding an excellent likeness of him from the pen of Bert Levy flashed on the screen, arose from their seats as the royal visitor entered and gave him a thundering ovation which lasted more than five minutes. So loud was the cheering that the strains of "God Save the King" and "The Star-Spangled Banner" played by the combined Hippodrome orchestra and the band from the Renown were almost drowned out.

The Prince drew out a long, black cigar, which he smoked as he watched the performance.

At the end of the second act the audience again started to cheer the Prince, and this continued while he accepted a floral tribute presented to him by Miss Katharine Burnside, daughter of R. H. Burnside, in behalf of fifty-seven members of the Hippodrome cast who were born under the British flag. Little Miss Burnside made several pleasing curtsies and the Prince talked with her for a few minutes. Then he retired to one of the lounge rooms, where a number of people were presented to him.

As the curtain went down disclosing the third act, the Prince and his suite returned to their boxes and once again the audience stood up and cheered him. He vigorously applauded the star of the water act, who dived from the uppermost structure of the playhouse. Later the Prince received several hundred British war veterans. He shook hands with each of them, stopping several to converse with them about their wound stripes and the medals which they wore.

When the last of these veterans had been received, the Prince stepped to the railing and in a clear, distinct voice, heard everywhere in the house, said:

"I thank you all for the reception I have received in New York, and I bid you all good night."

Three more cheers were given for the royal visitor, after which he was escorted to the main entrance of the playhouse on Sixth Avenue. As he entered his automobile a great roar was sent up which was heard for blocks away and which sent thousands who were getting out of other theatres in the immediate neighborhood scurrying toward Sixth Avenue. The cheering was taken up by them, and the car containing the Prince, flanked by policemen on foot, started north on Sixth Avenue, the Prince all this time standing in the machine acknowledging the cheering of the crowd.

PRINCE AT RECEPTION.

Dances with Mrs. Rodman Wanamaker at Seventh Regiment Armory.

The royal party reached the Seventh Regiment Armory shortly after 11:10 o'clock last night, and the Prince met Mr. and Mrs. Rodman Wanamaker, who gave the reception in his honor. He was introduced to Colonel Wade H. Hays, commander of the regiment, and reviewed the officers, after which he led Mrs. Wanamaker through a cheering crowd to the platform at the south end of the armory floor.

More than 4,500 persons were present. The drill floor of the armory was filled with women in evening clothes and a mixture of civilian and military men, perhaps the largest number of uniforms gathered at a single affair since the demobilization following the war.

The armory was decorated on the inside from the floor to the peak of the roof with masses of Allied flags.

The guests included many of the younger society matrons and this year's débutantes, as well as a number of city officials and the officers of the police reserves and the police aviation reserves.

The Prince stood on the platform in the armory for about half an hour watching the crowds and listening to the band playing. Then he turned to one of his escorts and shortly after the guard formed in front of the platform. The crowd thought the royal visitor was about to leave. Instead of leaving, the Prince, with Mrs. Wanamaker, stepped out on the dancing floor. As they started off in the dance sixteen men of the regiment formed a complete circle about them. It was within this constantly moving band of men that the Prince danced, while the crowds followed, getting as close to the guard as it could.

Among the prominent men at the reception were Sir Thomas Lipton, former Ambassador Myron T. Herrick, General Nelson A. Miles, Sir John Ferguson, R. A. C. Smith, and others.

At 12:25 A. M. the Prince went to the officers' quarters in the armory, where a light supper was served.

RECEPTION PLEASES BRITAIN.

Curzon Voices Appreciation of America's Attitude Toward Prince.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—Appreciation of the welcome extended to the Prince of Wales in the United States was expressed by Earl Curzon, the Secretary for Foreign Affairs, today.

"England is deeply touched by the warmth of the reception the United States has accorded the Prince of Wales," Lord Curzon said to The Associated Press. "There could be no surer indication of the depth of the real friendship uniting the great English-speaking nations. England has watched the events of the past few days with eager interest as a new manifestation of mutual affection and esteem."

What Happened

In Wonderland when Curley-Cue fell off the second shelf? Everybody shut his eyes tight, dreading to see the smashed head of the favorite. Nobody reckoned on the presence of mind of the Darky Doll who pushed a bed out just in time to catch Curley-Cue. Curiosity led to getting his head caught between the doors. Whereupon the tiger scolded him severely for it and mannishly growled that he had blocked the view entirely. Teddy, wounded in heart at the tiger's remarks, bravely refused the Red Cross Nurse's aid. She had come hurrying down the aisle in the tank. Neither Curley-Cue nor Teddy needed her services.

Who Did?

Some one of the Wonderland people was in peril, for just as the Nurse was about to go back the drums began beating and the horns blowing in an emergency call. Look for the rescue which will appear on Tuesday.

BANDITS GET BIG HAUL OF WHISKY

PUT WATCHMAN IN ICEBOX

Six Barrels and 500 Cases Held in Bond for the British Government in Lot.

Half a dozen thieves invaded the New York Central-West Shore pier, at Franklin Street and the North River, last night, locked three watchmen in an ice box and then carted off six barrels of whisky and 500 cases of whiskey being held in bond for the British Government. The men worked leisurely and took more than an hour while they selected what they wanted and loaded it on two automobile trucks, which they drove on the pier.

Charles Huebner, a watchman, was called to the gate about 9 o'clock by some one pounding on the door. He called out, "Who's there?" and a voice came back, "A floatman." The watchman opened the door and found himself looking into a revolver. He backed away and the intruder followed. Behind him came several others. The man behind the gun apparently knew what he was about, for he backed the watchman to the icebox, and while one of the men swung the door open he kept Heubner covered until he was inside. Then the door swung shut.

The second watchman rounded up was in the engine room. He was James Mattass. The robbers started Mattass toward the ice box, and on the way they encountered the third watchman, Albert Schuttinger. He had no chance to resist, for the robber saw him first.

Through a small window in their prison the three men could see one of the men on guard just outside. He saw them and the door of the box opened wide enough for him to shout inside that the trio would have to stand with their faces to the wall if they did not want a bullet through their heads.

"We will not hurt you," the guard told them, "unless you try to put something over." A flourish of his revolver emphasized his remark.

While one of the men stood guard other bandits swung the pier doors open and soon the prisoners heard the engines of the trucks as they drove on the pier. The barrels of whisky, each said to contain sixty gallons, stood near the entrance and were quickly placed on one of the trucks. The case goods was then loaded on the trucks. It was 10 o'clock before they departed. Some minutes afterward the prisoners succeeded in getting out of the ice box and the police were notified.

David Meadow, a steamship agent at 190 Avenue B, was closing his office at 10:30 last night when four bandits entered, and, after covering him with a revolver, robbed him of $800 cash and $250 in Liberty bonds. One of the robbers fired a shot which grazed Meadow's temple as he tried to follow them. They fled down Twelfth Street and escaped.

HELD IN FRAUD INDICTMENT.

Jersey City Man Charged with Misrepresenting News Services.

A. Albert Lautman was arrested yesterday on an indictment charging that he obtained money under false pretenses by getting subscriptions to a book known as "The Scribes' Review of America, 1914-1919," which he said would be sent to "all papers receiving The Associated Press service and the United Press service." He is said to have masqueraded as "the United Press Service," a play upon the name of the United Press Associations, which brought about his arrest.

The book purported to be a record of the achievements of captains of industry in helping to win the war. Prospective subscribers were informed that the book would be published once in four years and would be "very exclusive."

The indictment has two counts. One charges that he obtained $250 by false pretenses from the Liberty National Bank of New York, and the other that he attempted to obtain $500 by false pretenses from the Liberty Steel Products Company. His home is in Jersey City.

Lautman was arraigned before Judge Otto A. Rosalsky in General Sessions last night and held in $7,500 bail for pleading. He did not secure the bail immediately and was sent to the Tombs Prison.

These paid from $250 to $300 each.

CHURCHILL TO RESIGN?

Labor Leaders Said to Have Offer of Cabinet Places.

Copyright, 1919, by The Chicago Tribune.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—I am informed positively that Winston Churchill is resigning the War Ministry and leaving the Lloyd George Government. This is due to a change in the Russian policy to which Mr. Churchill was committed and to a growing desire of Lloyd George to secure the co-operation of labor, which will have nothing to do with Mr. Churchill.

est investigation by any impartial officer or tribunal that you may name.

Respectfully yours,

EDWARD SWANN.

Mr. Swann asserted that he would not agree to have the present jury take any part in such an investigation except in so far as the members might be concerned in making complaints and submitting their charges or any other information to the investigating body. He would leave the present jury free to continue their part of the transit inquiry together with that part of it which he had submitted on information received from the Mayor.

Although the jury had, in submitting their pronouncement to Justice Weeks, and in their letter to the Governor, announced that their action was taken by unanimous vote, Mr. Swann used the name of Foreman Almirall as the objective in his criticism and challenge of the grounds for the action of the jury.

The prosecutor declared that the traction interests could not have devised a shrewder move to get the District Attorney out of the traction inquiry, for they knew that the District Attorney would not consent to be placed before the public as refusing to let other counsel investigate his office.

ASTRONOMY

The Einstein theory of light, which in the eyes of many scientists has shown the Universe to be limited instead of limitless, has given a great impetus to the study of Astronomy. You see, observations made during the late eclipse of the sun have demonstrated that rays of light from distant stars were deflected as they passed the sun, thus casting doubt upon the correctness of Newton's long-established law that light travels in a straight line. Read up on the subject and get a clearer idea of what it all means. Even if the safety of Newton's law does not interest, there is a world of fascination in the wonders of the sky.

WHALEN ADVOCATES CITY-OWNED BUSES

PREDICTS GOOD PROFITS

Applies for Authority to Continue Present Lines and to Charge Owners $2 a Day.

Application was made to the Board of Estimate yesterday by Grover A. Whalen, Commissioner of Plants and Structures, for authority to continue the operation of the various bus lines in the city until July 1 next and to charge the bus owners $2 a day for each bus. This money, Mr. Whalen suggested, could constitute a fund to meet the expenses of supervision. The present authorization under which Mr. Whalen is permitting the busses to operate expires on Dec. 1. The matter went over until next Friday.

Joseph A. Guider, Commissioner of Public Works of Brooklyn, expressed himself as being opposed to delay because of small technicalities. Concerning the request of the Grand Jury of Kings County that Mr. Whalen and Police Commissioner Enright appear before it at 10 o'clock next Monday to be examined concerning the accidents to persons by the busses and because of the riots growing out of the double fare charge of the Brooklyn City Railroad Company, the Mayor said to Mr. Whalen:

"If you and the Police Commissioner can keep out of jail until next Friday I think we can ease your troubles."

In his report on the busses, Mr. Whalen said that 114 of them were in operation on Nov. 14, and that they carried 75,000 passengers daily. He thought that if the city would undertake the operation of a unified system of city-owned busses great success would attend the venture. He submitted figures showing that 100 busses, seating twenty-seven passengers each, would cost $550,000, and that garage equipment and spare parts would cost an additional $30,000.

His figures for operation and maintenance, including garages the employment of 180 chauffeurs at $1,800 a year each, starters, checkers, &c., total $635,000. Then Mr. Whalen's report says that it is proposed to operate ninety-two busses on the nine routes, which have bus service at the present time, eight busses being held for emergency service. He estimates the profits of operation at $376.80 a day. Then his report reads:

"These nine routes total a length of only twenty-five miles, and on account of their length are bound to be profitable sources of revenue, and the service of these 100 busses will give, I confidently expect, in one year after city operation is commenced a much greater income than is quoted here."

Police Commissioner Enright appeared as a witness yesterday before the Kings County Grand Jury in an investigation being conducted by that body as to the operation of municipal busses in Brooklyn. He spent twenty minutes in the Grand Jury room. Commissioner Whalen also was to have appeared, but because he was to accompany the Prince of Wales for the day he was excused until Monday.

DIRECTORS CLEAR BASTRESS

Special to The New York Times.

MOUNT CARMEL, Penn., Nov. 21.—The Directors of the Mount Carmel Iron Works have caused the withdrawal of charges, instituted Oct. 24, against John E. Bastress for alleged embezzlement of $20,000 of the company's funds.

The charges were made after the suicide of George E. Feast, Superintendent and General Manager of the Iron Works. Feast, in letters written before he committed suicide on a Reading train while being brought from Philadelphia to answer embezzlement charges, made insinuations against Bastress. Immediately after the charges were filed Mr. Bastress resigned as President of the Guarantee Trust and Safe Deposit Company of this city, of which he was the founder. Mr. Bastress says his resignation had bene contemplated before the embezzlement charge was preferred.

In a public statement the Directors of the iron works said that the charges against Mr. Bastress were preferred during the absence of Edward Brennan, a Shamokin mine operator, who is financially responsible for the corporation. Mr. Brennan returned from the South about a week ago and directed the withdrawal of the charges against Mr. Bastress. Resolutions were passed by the Directors exonerating the latter from all liability. The company has been refinanced and Mr. Bastress has been retained in the directorate.

Hartog Denies Commission Promise.

MOUNT VERNON, N. Y., Nov. 21.—In defense of the action brought against him by his brother, Ferdinand Hartog, Jr., to recover $329,000 in commissions for the sale of glucose to the British Government, Louis N. Hartog, the defendant, went on the witness stand before Justice Platt at White Plains today and denied that he had ever agreed to allow Ferdinand commissions. A brother and two sisters testified in behalf of the defendant.

GOVERNORS OPPOSE SEIZING OF MINES

Seven Reply to Harding of Iowa, and Only Roberts of Tennessee Would Run Collieries.

FOR ACTION BY WASHINGTON

Garfield Says Harding Proposal Would Destroy Federal Control Needed to Meet Emergency.

DES MOINES, Iowa, Nov. 21.—Governor W. L. Harding of Iowa had received replies from the Governors of seven bituminous coal producing States up to noon today to his suggestion yesterday that the States take concerted action in an effort to have bituminous coal digging resumed, but not enough had replied for Governor Harding to say whether he would call a conference of Governors.

Governor Roberts of Tennessee said:

"Unless coal situation improves think it necessary for some positive action to be taken looking to operating coal mines. Suggest early conference of Governors for concerted action."

Governor Goodrich of Indiana said:

"Will give careful consideration to your suggestion. It occurs to me that any action along the line suggested in your message might complicate negotiations now pending in Washington. I suggest before reaching any definite conclusion on the matter that we defer reaching any definite decision until next week and await the outcome of the conference at Washington."

Governor Black of Kentucky simply said:

Governor Cornwell of West Virginia telegraphed:

"Inasmuch as comparatively few mines in this State are idle and production of entire State more than 75 per cent. of normal, no such action as you suggest necessary here."

Governor Sproul of Pennsylvania wired:

"Conditions here not so critical as you describe. Large proportion of our miners now working. I would hesitate before I would make scale what you suggest. Might complicate conditions in Washington conference and possibly work harm."

Special to The New York Times.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Nov. 21.—Governor James Cox does not think that the States in the soft cold strike district should attempt to operate the mines at this time. If that is to be done it should be by the Federal Government, he says. However, it is recognized that something must be done in the near future and that if the Federal Government does not act the States will be forced to do so.

Governor Cox sent the following telegram to Governor Harding:

"If the conference at Washington does not bring immediate adjustment, Governmental intervention will have to take place, in the shape of operating the mines, but this intervention should be by the Federal Government. If the conference fails and the Federal Government does not take charge, then in my judgment the States will have to do it."

Governor Cox today received a telegram from Fuel Administrator Garfield which reads:

"I have today telegraphed Governor Harding of Iowa as follows: 'Your messages of Nov. 19 and 20 received. I appreciate the gravity of the Iowa situation. Railroad Administration advises that all Iowa requests have been handled in accordance with preference list and records last night showed no domestic or public utility needs unfilled, though demands deemed nonessential have been refused. I suggest close cooperation with Regional Coal Committees and immediate reference to them of any fuel emergencies. Every effort is being made to protect the situation by preferential movement of coal from eastern points.

"'It is impossible to comply with your suggestion that power to fix coal prices be conferred on you. If this were done similar requests from executives of other coal-producing States could not consistently be refused and Federal control which is essential in the national emergency would be lost. This control exercised under act of Congress necessarily excludes independent State control of same subject matter. Please note that Government price restrictions will be applicable to sales of coal produced in Iowa whoever is in control of mines. I am repeating this telegram to Governors of all coal-producing States.'" ernment intervention becomes a necessity. But if the representatives of the operators and miners feel that such an agreement is being approached they are disguising their optimism.

It is apparent that both sides are employing every method at their disposal to gain an advantage, and are fighting hard to obtain as many concessions as possible in the event that a common understanding is reached. The fact that Secretary Wilson was called in late today, after a deadlock had been reached, was considered in some quarters as a favorable sign, and indicating a tendency to realize that something had to be done within the next two or three days.

The sessions of miners and operators began this morning at 10 o'clock, when the operators stated that their offer of 20 per cent. increase on day work and 15 cents a ton for pick and machine miners was as far as they would go. The miners flatly rejected the offer.

As a counterproposal the miners then offered to accept a general increase of 40 per cent. on tonnage, yardage and dead work, a seven-hour day with a half holiday on Saturday, and that all internal differences shall be referred back to the respective districts for adjustment, without the qualifying conditions contained in the so-called Washington contract.

This proposal the operators rejected without much debate. They refused to consider a seven-hour day, or the proposal concerning internal differences being referred back to the respective districts for adjustment. Such a provision, they held, would mean that there would be continual strife in various fields and would in effect invalidate the principles of the agreement, putting it in the power of the miners in various districts to make all sorts of impossible demands.

Operators Offer New Terms.

There the dispute rested for some time. Finally during the afternoon conference the operators offered a general increase of 20 per cent. and withdrew two other conditions which they had included in their offer of yesterday. These were that supplies for the miners should not be provided at less than cost, and that the national officers of the miners be made responsible for the carrying out of the contract.

Again the miners rejected the offer and no progress was made during an hour more of debate.

At this point, according to Mr. Brewster of the operators, the operators offered three methods for compulsory arbitration.

They were:

1. That the President appoint a tribunal to adjust the differences.
2. That a tribunal be formed to be composed of four members appointed by the operators, four by the miners, and one member to be selected by the eight so appointed.
3. That a tribunal be formed composed of three members selected by the operators, three selected by the miners, and three by the President of the United States.

Miners Refuse to Arbitrate.

These offers of a method of arbitration, said Mr. Brewster, were all rejected by the miners.

It was at this point that Secretary of Labor Wilson was called in by mutual consent of all of the conferees.

During the conference Acting President Lewis of the United Mine Workers was seen in the anteroom and was asked if the miners had accepted the offer made by the operators.

"No, we have not," he said. "And that is only half of the answer. We are not going to accept the proposal made."

Victor output reaches normal

The shortage in Victrolas will soon be relieved

Plans for expanding the plant to meet the tremendous increase in demand have been fully matured and are under way—astonishing increases are assured within the next few months.

The value of the Victor Talking Machine Company's output for October was the greatest in its history. The unprecedented shortage of Victrolas will therefore soon be relieved.

During the war practically 90% of the $36,000,000 Victor investment was devoted to war work. This was responsible for the almost total disappearance of Victrolas from the market.

The armistice was signed in November, 1918, but it was not until March, 1919, that the Victor Company could clear its plant of war orders. And as it requires at least four months to manufacture Victrolas in the way the Victor Company manufactures them and in the way they should be manufactured, the rapidity of our recovery to normal output will be appreciated by all who know about manufacturing.

The Victor Company is the only talking machine company in the United States which has a complete plant for the manufacture of complete talking machines. All others are operated more or less by a system of contract construction—the fabricating system.

THE SECRETARY OF THE NAVY

NAVY DEPARTMENT
WASHINGTON

22 April, 1919.

Dear Sir:

The work carried on during the war by the Navy Department in developing anti-submarine devices and equipping vessels for anti-submarine operations had an important effect in restricting enemy submarine operations.

This result was made possible by the splendid assistance and co-operation of the many distinguished scientists, engineers, and business men who were in one way or another associated with the Special Board on Anti-Submarine Devices, which had been appointed by the Department to supervise work of this nature.

The Navy Department wishes to express its appreciation of the valuable assistance rendered by you in this connection.

Very truly yours,

Franklin D Roosevelt
Acting Secretary of the Navy.

Eldridge R. Johnson, President,
Victor Talking Machine Co.,
Camden, N. J.

As this plant happened to be exactly what the Government required to produce bombing hydro-aeroplanes and other submarine detecting devices, the Victor plant was chosen for the place of honor and sacrifice, while our less fortunate or less competent competitors were ignored and allowed to continue.

This is the true story, the cause of the shortage in Victrolas, which our competitors have not been slow to take advantage of.

Many of our exclusive dealers stood by their convictions, while some have not and have put in competing lines which in many instances are inferior. This was their privilege, but we wish to point out that the advertisements which are appearing announcing several lines of "standard" talking machines are misleading.

There can never be several standards. The shortage of Victrolas and the lure of greater profits has induced the endorsement of inferior goods.

The Victor Company is the original manufacturer of the Victrola and holds all the original patents. In the last twenty-three years the Victor Company has originated all the startling improvements in the type of talking machine which it manufactures. Other manufacturers have simply followed, manufacturing instruments which are largely imitative.

The Victor Company is the only company in the United States fully equipped to make standard talking machines of the gramophone type—the Victrola is a gramophone not a phonograph.

There is only one standard talking machine and that is the VICTROLA.

There can be but one standard in any line, and the Victor Company produces the standard in talking machines.

NOTE—By reason of the above circumstances it is important that prospective customers visit a store where Victor goods are given fair presentation.

REDFIELD REBUKES THE LABOR UNIONS

POINTS TO RECENT STRIKES

Country Was Ignored in Stopping of Coal and Steel Production, He Says.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Nov. 21.—"Gossamer profits," so modest that they should not excite public apprehension, as affirmed by the Chicago packers in their defense against the onslaughts which have been leveled at them recently, were again under attack by William B. Oliver, Chairman of the Federal Trade Commission, in an address today at the closing session of the annual convention of the American Specialty Manufacturers' Association. The speaker cited their invasion of the food supply field in an alleged effort to monopolize it.

"The five Chicago packing houses operate through 574 corporations and trade names, dealing in six or seven hundred items, hundreds unrelated to the packing business," he said. "The wholesale grocers are contending against the invasion before the Interstate Commerce Commission. Many of you gentlemen are threatened, some of you have already suffered. Their entry is marked by a dislocation of the usual orderly conduct of business. The momentum of a great organization and of great resources, and the willingness to operate at a loss while gaining a foothold, makes their appearance in any line of business a real cause of apprehension."

William C. Redfield, former Secretary of Commerce, took the labor unions to task for failing in their obligation to the nation in its hour of need and pointed to the recent steel and coal strike orders.

"Are the interests of two groups of workers greater than the interests of the whole nation as respects those two great commodities?" he asked. "We may not answer this question by saying that those interests are greater than those of the workers, for that in its turn puts the worker above the nation. It is, of course, conceivable that conditions may have been so inhuman, so desperately bad, as to involve almost a national crime in permitting them to continue.

"No such condition is shown or in any satisfactory measure alleged, and the fact that in many places a large majority of the steel workers were steadfast, as were the nonunion miners in many sections, would go to show that no cruelty or distress prevailed such as has been suggested. We seem reluctantly forced to admit that the stoppage of production was deliberate, undertaken at a time when production was vital to the nation, in order that two separate, relatively small groups, not unanimous among themselves, might have their own gains enhanced even through the nation's distress."

He went on to point out that no class of workers had an unlimited right to strike, that the cry that this was a free country could not be used to protect those who sought to bring harm to the nation or any of its citizens.

SAYS LABOR FLIES RED FLAG

ST. LOUIS, Nov. 21.—Asserting that organized labor had lost sight of its obligations to the public, Charles Piez, of Chicago, formerly of the Emergency Fleet Corporation, gave it as his belief that the red flag of radicalism had been raised above the red, white, and blue in the American Federation of Labor, in an address delivered before the final session of the American Mining Congress here today.

"At this time organized labor is stronger in membership and stronger in solidarity than ever before in its history," said Mr. Piez. "There is evident in its methods and its aims none of the care and consideration that should attend the exercise of great power. It has thrown caution to the winds and is prepared to wreck the State itself in its blind intent to follow the course laid by radicalism.

"The executives of the American Federation of Labor have yielded too much to the desire for numbers, and they have, therefore, before them a large job of housecleaning to re-establish themselves in the public confidence."

Mr. Piez advocated deportation of troublesome aliens. He said labor organizations must no longer be exempted from legislation enacted to safeguard the public against the extortion of combinations. He commended the provision contained in the Cummins bill for compulsory arbitration in railroad labor disputes and further advocated restrictive legislation of a sort that would not prevent strikes when they were necessary as a last resort to secure justice.

PRINTERS' HEADS HERE.

Three of International Council Arrive to Study Situation.

Three members of the Executive Council of the International Typographical Union arrived here last night to take action toward ending the deadlock in the printing trades caused by the persistence of the members of Typographical Union No. 6 in remaining away from work in sympathy with the seceding pressmen and assistants. The three, who went to the Hotel Imperial, were W. W. Barrett, First Vice President; James J. Hoban, Second Vice President, and J. W. Hays, Secretary of the Council. Secretary Hays said that the members had only a faint idea of what the trouble in New York was, and until they had first-hand information they would not be able to state their plans.

The members of the printing trades in New York City face a serious period of unemployment following the adjustment of the present dispute between the employers and employes, according to a statement issued yesterday by the Allied Printing Trades Council. It is asserted that work is going out of New York on long-term contracts and that it cannot be brought back until those contracts expire. In a letter to the Trade Unions of Greater New York the Council urges them not to respond to the appeal for funds which is being made by members of the secessionist unions, as they are "outlaw organizations that are trying to destroy the American Federation of Labor and the principle upon which your own organization is founded."

The Printers' League issued a statement yesterday in which it is asserted that 160 of the 260 firms in the league were running their shops, thus increasing the number in the last three days by eighteen, among which were included some of the largest printing plants in the city.

It was announced yesterday that 400 members of the Lithographic and Printing Ink Makers' Union No. 2 had voted unanimously on Thursday night to remain out on strike until the Ink Makers Association had complied with their demands, which embody only a recognition of their union. John R. Ritchie, President of the local, said that approximately 125 of the 500 members of the union had returned to work in the sixteen shops where the employers had recognized the right of the ink makers to organize.

Fiorello H. La Guardia, President-elect of the Board of Aldermen, yesterday sent a letter to Hugh Frayne, Organizer for the American Federation of Labor, urging him to use his good offices to induce the two parties to the controversy to get together. He sent copies of the same letter to William Fellowes Morgan, President of the Merchants Association, and to Alfred E. Marling, President of the New York Chamber of Commerce.

Lose $8,000 a Day by Zone System.

Although no official figures on the company's receipts were given out, it was learned yesterday that the Public Service Railway Company of New Jersey was taking in $8,000 a day less under the present zone system than was the case with the 7-cent fare charge. At the same time, it stated, more people are patronizing the cars now than before.

The Nation's Greatest Asset

The children of today are the citizens of tomorrow. They are the nation's greatest asset. No labor so important, no duty so imperative, as that of making the children into 100% American citizens. We do not want bookworms, we want intelligent, well-informed, forceful men and women, who can do their own thinking. Only a small part of this education can be obtained in the schoolroom. Three-fourths of it must be acquired in the daily reading, entertainments and occupations in the home.

THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE is a new method of education in the HOME. Over 10,000 delightful educational pictures and brief, intensely interesting articles tell the children everything they need to know in plain and simple language. It expands every faculty of the child's growing mind and nature, and leads him into the great world of knowledge by easy and delightful steps. It gives the children an education which will meet the demands of life.

Curiosity—the Great Teacher

CURIOSITY is the beginning of all knowledge. Do you know any subject about which your child has not asked you a dozen questions? Let him ask as many as he likes, and be sure to answer them correctly. That is the parent's most important and most easily neglected duty. If you discourage your child's curiosity you will injure his mind, and the bright boy or girl becomes stupid or indifferent. Through curiosity Columbus discovered America. THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE is the simplest and most natural method of helping the child to educate himself. IT ANSWERS EVERY QUESTION A CHILD CAN ASK IN PLAIN AND SIMPLE LANGUAGE. So captivating is this great original work to the mind of a child that he absorbs with little effort the profound truths and great facts of the world of knowledge while reading its delightful pages and looking at the thousands of striking educational pictures.

Your Child Is Unique

Your child is like no other child in the world. He has his own peculiar taste and need for both physical and mental food. Some kinds of food agree with him and some do not. THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE is the right kind of nourishing food for the child's mind during the growing years. Give your child this remarkable, original work, and watch carefully which of the 16 Great Departments interests him most. Nature, Science, History, Biography, Astronomy, Physiology, Art, Literature, Poetry, or Manual Training. It will prove THE KEY to his natural bent, and the kind of work or profession in which he will most easily succeed.

Your Child's Chance

In round numbers, what is your child's chance to become successful? If uneducated, he has one chance out of 150,000; with a common school education, 4 chances; with a high school education, 87 chances; with a college education, 800 chances; WITH THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE in the home, every chance. It is not a luxury, it is an absolute necessity. It is an INVESTMENT in your child's future which will pay dividends as long as he lives. In over 650,000 homes today the children are being educated with THE BOOK OF KNOWLEDGE. Give your child his chance to compete with them.

Government Sales Store to Offer $1.99 Holiday Food Package—Arrest Alleged Sugar Profiteer.

A lowering of the retail price of Thanksgiving turkey was promised yesterday by the Retail Butchers' Association of New York in a communication sent to Arthur Williams, Federal Food Administrator. According to Mr. Williams, the butchers have agreed to accept a margin of profit 5 per cent. under that allowed them last year on holiday fowl, thus bringing the price down almost equal to what it was last year.

The butchers reached their decision following a conference with the Food Administrator on Thursday wherein he pleaded with them to make some allowance for the spirit of the occasion and reduce their profit on Thanksgiving turkey. In asking this, Mr. Williams told the butchers he realized that for them to accept the same margin of profit as last year was a concession in view of the fact that their overhead costs were so much higher. He was very much pleased to learn late yesterday that the association had voted to reduce the margin.

"It may not mean so much to people who do not have to count their pennies," said Mr. Williams, "but this little reduction by the butchers is going to bring joy to a good many families where the Thanksgiving turkey is purchased with pennies that have been eked out by a year's careful saving. Of course, the reduction will only be made in the profit on the cheaper grade of fowl. I have asked the dealers to make none in case of the fancy birds.

"I can't tell yet what the price will be, but I am told that at present live turkeys are costing at the farm two cents a pound more than last year. It may be increased before Thanksgiving. I am mighty glad the butchers have come to the front like this, and let me tell you we cannot give them too much credit for it. Turkey of any kind is going to be expensive this Fall, especially since I am informed there is practically no cold storage fowl to be had."

The Government sales store at 22 West Nineteenth Street announced yesterday the composition of the Thanksgiving package which it is offering for the holiday. It contains:

1 large can apples	.40
2 cans of peas	.18
3 packages spaghetti	.14
2 cans tomatos	.16
4 cans pork and beans	.16
1 can corned beef	.45
2 cans stick candy	.50
Total	$1.99

Dr. Jonathan C. Day, Commissioner of Markets, announced yesterday that in the near future the city would have for distribution at cost a large quantity of navy wearing apparel, including underwear, socks, shirts, &c. The Commissioner was unable to state at present just when such a sale would take place, nor where.

In order to relieve the congestion of the mails during the holiday season the War Department yesterday made public an order here commanding the Director of Sales to discontinue to accept orders for goods from the army stores to be delivered by parcel post after Dec. 10.

Charged with profiteering in sugar by selling it at 18 cents a pound, Herbert H. Thornton, 30 years old, who, with his father, Joseph Thornton, conducts the Carlisle Tea Company at 360 Lewis Avenue, Brooklyn, was arrested yesterday by United States Marshal James M. Power. It is alleged that he sold 100 pounds of sugar at the illegal price to Fred Rattner, who keeps a grocery store in Fulton Street, near Grand Avenue.

ARREST PAYING TELLER.

Alleged Embezzler Gave Dollar Tips—Woman Assistant Also Accused.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Nov. 21.—Ralph Deicken, whose dollar tips to barbers and expensive clothes gained him the title of the "Beau Brummel Bank Clerk" was arrested today on a Federal warrant charging him with embezzlement of $27,000 from the Ridgely Farmers State Bank where he was employed as paying teller until a month ago.

Miss Jessie Conner, bookkeeper, was arrested on the same charge. Miss Conner, it is alleged, assisted Deicken in covering up his defalcations.

BRING your PRINTING PLANTS to Cincinnati

Cincinnati is the logical location for large printing and publishing plants. Besides the advantages it offers to all industries Cincinnati possesses many advantages particularly important to publishers and printers. Cincinnati is a paper market second to none. It is the headquarters of the largest printing ink industry in the United States. It is centrally situated with unusual transportation advantages; possesses splendid power facilities; enjoys good city government; labor relations are satisfactory; living and housing costs are reasonable; and its population is practically entirely native-born Americans.

The Center of Paper Manufacture. Within a radius of 50 miles are 29 large paper mills producing daily 1600 tons of book and cover papers. Cincinnati is a distributing center for newsprint, and nearer than any other large city to the great paper manufacturing centers.

Leads in Ink Production. Being the headquarters of the ink industry all the requirements of publishers and printers can be entirely satisfied in Cincinnati at the lowest prices obtainable anywhere.

Dependable Labor. Cincinnati's workmen are All-American. Eighty-five per cent are native-born. The Cincinnati Typographical Union has never broken a contract. Lower living costs than in other large cities, and reasonable rents together with attractive opportunities for education and recreation attract and hold a fine type of skilled workmen such as those of the printing trades.

Economical Distribution: Center of Postal Zones. Cincinnati's central location as to population gives it great advantage as to postal rates. Transportation facilities by rail and water are convenient, rapid and economical.

Building Sites and Construction Costs. Building sites to meet every requirement are numerous in Cincinnati. Nearness to production centers of building materials makes construction costs very reasonable.

Unlimited Power. Our ten million dollar power plant assures adequate, dependable and low cost power to all industrial establishments locating or re-establishing in Cincinnati.

SUPREME COURT ENDS PROHIBITION CASES

ROOT CONTINUES ARGUMENT

Maintains Wartime Ban Was Designed to Remain in Effect Only During Hostilities.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—The validity of the Wartime Prohibition law and the Volstead act for its enforcement was put squarely before the Supreme Court today with the closing of arguments attacking and defending both measures. There was no intimation as to when an opinion might be rendered, but owing to the importance of the issue, an early determination was considered probable.

The court will recess until Dec. 8 on Monday, so it is not likely the case will be decided before that time. National constitutional prohibition becomes effective Jan. 16 and if an opinion is not rendered by that date, it would make no difference what the court decided, as the country then would have passed through the wartime prohibition period.

Arguments today were confined entirely to the appeal of Jacob Ruppert, one New York brewer, from the dismissal of proceedings brought to prevent Federal revenue officers from interfering with the manufacture of beer containing more than one-half of 1 per cent. alcohol. Elihu Root, counsel for Mr. Ruppert, in attacking the validity of the Wartime Prohibition act, William D. Guthrie, appearing also for Mr. Ruppert, asserted the "mere fact that some American troops were still abroad did not expand or increase the powers of Congress" and that the act was obsolete, as demobilization had been completed and the war ended.

There was no abatement of the interest in the arguments today, all the space in the courtroom allotted to spectators being occupied, with a long line of persons waiting outside in the hope of gaining admittance.

Mr. Root told the Court that Mr. Ruppert and members of the Brewers' Association had more than $1,000,000 worth of beer made under authority of the Lever act and before the Volstead act was enacted, which they now were unable to sell.

Replying to Government contentions relative to the intent of Congress in passing the Wartime Prohibition act, Mr. Root quoted a statement made in the Senate by Senator Sheppard of Texas, Prohibition leader, that the act was designed to remain in effect only during hostilities and pending demobilization.

"The Court cannot close its eyes to the facts made known to all the world by the highest evidence in this matter," said Mr. Root, "and not determine whether by those facts Congress has the constitutional right to override the rights of the states given by the Tenth Amendment." Arguing that Congress had no authority to "go out into the country after the war was over and where soldiers had been merged into the civil life and override the laws of the States," Mr. Root asked:

"Where are you to draw the line if you are to step over the line of absolute necessity into space? If it is to be within the competency of Congress to regulate the districts because they are permeated by Federal officials, then there is no limit to the authority of Congress."

By permitting the liquor interests one year to dispose of their stocks and adjust their affairs, Mr. Root said the Eighteenth Constitutional Amendment came "very near being a contract."

"This year of grace," he added, "was allowed by Congress and the States, even when the war was flagrant and the demands for the highest exercise of power was at its height.

"But when this war is over this Volstead act takes away this time of grace," said Mr. Root, adding that even during this specified period the liquor interests "have been heckled and harried by statutes for the real motive of advancing prohibition for a few months before the constitutional amendment was to take effect.

"God grant," he concluded, "that the Constitution may remain effective for the imposition of limits on that official power which, if not limited by the courts of the country, will destroy liberty as effectively as German autocracy has done."

"The fact remains," Assistant Attorney General Frierson said, following Mr. Root, "that we are legally in a state of war, and the solemn duty rests on Congress to keep the country prepared to meet any complication that may arise before the conclusion of peace."

Replying to an inquiry by Justice Day, Mr. Frierson said the exchange of the ratifications of peace was the test for the ending of the war.

"If that is the test, why is it in some acts and not in ohers?" asked Justice Day.

Mr. Frierson conceded it was omitted in the Prohibition act.

Mr. Frierson charged that beer involved in the Ruppert case was made in violation of the Wartime Prohibition act. Beer, he declared, did not necessarily have to be an intoxicating beverage to be prohibited by the act. "My contention is that Congress used the word 'beer' and did it without any qualified words and did not leave the question of fact to be settled by experts," he said.

ZION CITY DESTROYS BEER.

Officials Empty 138,997 Seized Bottles Into a Sewer.

ZION CITY, Ill., Nov. 21.—From a platform six feet high, 138,997 bottles of 2¾ per cent. beer today were emptied into a trough that ran to a sewer. Mayor W. H. Clendenin poured the first bottle and Chief of Police Becker and his aides finished the operation. The ceremony was postponed several days ago to permit construction of the platform and trough so as to prevent "contamination" of the city's streets. The empty bottles were sold to a junk dealer for $2,148.

The beer was ordered destroyed by Judge Claire C. Edwards of the Waukegan Circuit Court, after it had been confiscated when seized from smugglers from Wisconsin.

The time chosen to begin the ceremony was 9 o'clock, when Zion's big bell is tolled and every resident kneels at his work and offers a short prayer.

A. B. Forde, lawyer, opened the first two bottles of beer and poured them into the big trough after he had delivered a brief address on prohibition.

At 10 o'clock Wilbur Glenn Volivia, head of the Christian Catholic Apostolic Church, joined the beer pourers. He worked for several hours.

Puts Off Liquor Case Arguments.

The hearing of arguments on an application for an injunction to restrain the Eastern Hotel Corporation and twenty-nine saloonkeepers from selling liquors in violation of the Prohibition Law was postponed by Judge Learned Hand in the United States District Court yesterday until Dec. 12.

MARY PICKFORD WINS SUIT.

Jury Says She Owes Nothing to Mrs. Wilkening on $1,080,000 Contract.

The jury in the court of Justice Platzek that heard the suit of Mrs. Cora C. Wilkening against Mary Pickford to recover 10 per cent. of the $1,080,000 she received under a two-year contract made with Adolph Zukor in 1916, returned a verdict yesterday for Miss Pickford.

The case was first tried a year ago when a jury gave Mrs. Wilkening the full amount sued for on the ground that she caused the Zukor contract to be made. The Appellate Division ordered a new trial on the ground that the evidence did not justify a verdict that Mrs. Wilkening was employed as Miss Pickford's agent to negotiate the contract.

At the present trial Miss Pickford denied that she had employed the plaintiff, and her mother, who usually acts as her agent, said that Mrs. Wilkening said that she expected nothing but the prestige that would come to her if Miss Pickford signed a contract with any producer through her.

The parties were not in court when the jury reported after an hour and a half of deliberation. Mrs. Wilkening will appeal.

DECIDES 2.75 BEER IS NONINTOXICATING

Asserts Congress, in Enforcement Act, Re-exercised War Power When Emergency Was Ended.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Nov. 21.—On the ground that beer of 2.75 per cent. alcoholic content is not intoxicating Judge John C. Pollock of the United States District Court today handed down a decision granting a temporary injunction to restrain the United States District Attorney and the Collector of Internal Revenue from interfering with the manufacture and sale of such beer by St. Louis brewers.

Judge Pollock's decision, while confining itself to a ruling on 2.75 per cent. beer, calls attention to the fact that war was being waged at the time the Constitutional prohibition amendment was submitted by Congress to the State Legislatures and that Congress at that time did not attempt to abrogate to itself the passage of a prohibition act as a war measure. The State Legislatures voted on ratification, the decision said, on the promise of Congress that after the necessary number of States had ratified the amendment a year would be permitted to lapse before it should be enforced by the Government. Congress therein recognized the rights of the States, even in war times, the decision said, and it had not now the right to infringe on State powers with reference to prohibition enforcement.

In passing the Enforcement act, the decision said, Congress attempted to re-exercise war powers when the war emergency no longer existed and tried to justify by one section of the Constitution an act which was forbidden by another section.

The decision further points out that Congress, in this instance, has passed a law which "does not pretend to concur with the State laws of Missouri, but is in direct ocnflict with it." It says that the laws of Missouri do not prohibit the manufacture of the brewers' product and that the brewers have paid large sums into the State treasury from the proceeds of a business which was recognised by the State as legal.

The Judge cited the words of President Wilson in his veto message on the Prohibition Enforcement act as proof that to all practical intent the war was over. He asserted that this act took away the police powers of the States and violated the Eighteenth Amendment to the Constitution.

The injunction was made effective at once and will remain in force temporarily until a ruling on the entire question of the validity of the wartime prohibition act is handed down.

Allow Kreisler to Play at Lawrence.

LAWRENCE, Mass., Nov. 21.—The Lawrence Post of the American Legion announced after a meeting tonight that it would not interfere with Fritz Kreisler's concert here next Sunday, but asked that the violinist play no German music. It was the sense of the meeting that "no other enemy alien be allowed to give a concert in Lawrence until the Treaty of Peace is signed."

COLORADO STRIKE CHIEF OBEYS COURT MANDATE

Johnson Calls Off New Walkout and Intrusts His Case to Federal District Attorney.

DENVER, Col., Nov. 21.—George O. Johnson, District President, United Mine Workers of America, early this morning announced that the strike of the bituminous coal miners in Colorado which has been ordered for midnight tonight had been called off in accordance with the injunction issued late last night by District Judge Clarence J. Morley of Denver.

The temporary injunction held that the strike was in direct violation of the State Industrial Commission law, which provides that no strike shall be called on any account without thirty days' notice thereof being filed with the commission in order that the merits of the controversy might be investigated.

President Johnson, who had attended an all-night conference of union representatives with United States District Attorney Tedrow, W. I. Reilly, member of the State Industrial Commission, and Attorney Farrar, representing the Colorado Fuel and Iron Company, issued the following statement in connection with his order canceling the strike order.

"I have complied with the court orders. I have intrusted our case to United States District Attorney Tedrow with the hope that he will compel the coal operators to likewise obey the mandates of the United States and District Courts of Colarod.

"I believe that the United States court order at Indianapolis recalling the nation-wide strike makes it mandatory on the part of the operators to re-employ all men who went out on strike."

ARREST 7 NEW YORKERS.

Detroit Police Get $50,000 in Loot from Alleged Gunmen.

DETROIT, Nov. 21.—Jewelry, clothing, and silverware, said to total upward of $50,000 in value, stolen in a long series of burglaries, was recovered last night, the police announced today, with the arrest of seven men, whom the authorities declare are members of a gang of New York gunmen.

According to detectives, one of the men in custody confessed to forty house robberies here and a large number in Cleveland. The loot, it is stated, was found in an east side tailor shop operated by Hine Rosen, one of those arrested. The others under arrest gave their names as Joseph Miller, Leo Levy, Benjamin Klein, George Lewis, Robert Conpardi, and Joseph Kinchiner, all of New York.

The arrest of the men, the police declared, frustrated a plan to aid their alleged leader William "Jack" Shapiro, held in the county jail on a burglary charge, to shoot his way to freedom last night.

BOARDER FIGURES IN RYERSON CASE

Letter Written Shortly Before His Death Indicates He Was Jealous of Wife.

POISON SEARCH CONTINUES

Analysis of Organs Will Take Another Week—Father Denies Accusing Any One.

Special to The New York Times.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Nov. 21.—Indications that there had been matrimonial difficulties between Theodore Ryerson, Jr., whose body has just been exhumed, and Mrs. Ora Starr Ryerson, his wife, were brought to light today when the dead man's father produced a letter in which Mr. Ryerson spoke of efforts to have a certain boarder removed from his house and of his wife's opposition to this.

The letter was written in New York on Feb. 12, 1919, two months before Ryerson's death, and reads as follows:

"Dear Father: No word from any source up to this time. I am quite comfortable. Will move tomorrow night to the Hotel Commodore, next to the Grand Central Station. I enclose key to house; also your letter. Be sure to get The Daily Home News each night to see if anything gets into print.

"I enclose rough draft of affidavit to War Department for your approval. I think that this man ought to be punished. Florence seems more concerned in keeping him in the house and attempting to prevent my taking the matter up with the Government than anything else. Her harboring him in direct opposition to my written notice and her statement that if he left she would go, too, seems to me there is little chance of arranging a quiet settlement.

"My letter to her said that I would wait until Nov. 17 before starting any action. Keep me posted; tell mother not to worry. If this matter goes through I will soon be home again with you all. I am sure we will all be very happy.

"With love to all,

"DORY."

Ryerson mentioned the name of the man referred to in the foregoing to his father. He is a Government agent then located at the Wright-Martin aircraft plant here. Prosecutor Stricker's detectives know this man, but have not made his name public. He was present in the room when Dr. Hults arrived and found Ryerson dead.

Mrs. Ryerson, when informed about the letter regarding the objectionable boarder, reiterated her denial that there had been any serious trouble between herself and her husband.

Theodore Ryerson, Sr., again stated that he had received several anonymous letters stating that his son had been poisoned. One of these was written on stationery of the Green Club of New Haven and was signed "M. J. A." He added that he has placed affidavits of the highest importance in the hands of Prosecutor Stricker, but the latter again refused to say whether he intended to make any arrests in the case before the chemical analysis has been finished.

Mr. Ryerson was careful to reiterate today that he had made charges against no one in particular, and that he was unable to say whether or not any of the individuals mentioned so far were really connected with the case.

Dr. Charles V. Hults, the attending physician, in a statement declared that his only reason for refusing to sign a death certificate was that Ryerson was dead when the doctor arrived.

Dr. Hults also denied that he said the man appeared to have been strangled. He said that the face was purple and that Ryerson might have been strangled, but that he also told Mr. Ryerson, Sr., that death might have been due to heart failure. The latter said in his statement only that the doctor had told him it looked as if the man was strangled.

Analysis of Ryerson's vital organs has been started by Dr. L. D. Riggs of the Squibbs laboratories, but he said today that it might be a week before he is ready to report.

TRY OUT FARMAN PLANE.

French Makers Demonstrate Pusher Type at Roosevelt Field.

A demonstration of a new three-passenger, pusher type of airplane developed for commercial exploitation by Henri and Maurice Farman, the French pioneers in aeronautics, was given yesterday at Roosevelt Field, near Mineola, Long Island. Officials of the American Flying Club and a number of other invited guests were taken up for short flights by Louis Gaubert, a French pilot who is credited with having brought down the second German plane in the war.

The placing of the propeller to the rear of the pilot and passengers increases the view of those in the plane and does away with the draft caused by the propeller. The plane has a maximum speed of 75 miles an hour. The motive power is obtained from a twelve-cylinder 130-horsepower Renault engine.

Among those who took a flight was Lucien Coupet, who recently flew with eight passengers from Paris to Dakar, South Africa.

REPUBLICANS GIVE $23,701.

State Organization's Campaign Expenses Reached $28,700.

With the cost of campaigning touching new high levels, the Republican State Committee, according to George A. Glynn, its Chairman, never had so little money for an Assembly campaign as this year. According to the statement of campaign contributions and disbursements which was sent to Albany yesterday afternoon to be filed with the Secretary of State on Monday, $23,701 was received in all. When the campaign ended the State Committee was $5,000 in debt. The total disbursements during the campaign was $24,151, while unpaid bills and commitments aggregated an additional $4,549.

The largest contribution, $3,700, was made by the Union League Club. Conservation Commissioner George D. Pratt contributed $2,500 and ex-United States Senator Chauncey M. Depew $600.

The amount actually spent for campaign purposes was a little more than $16,000. A majority of the Assembly districts received no aid from the Republican State Committee.

have a weekly page of appropriate things to be read to the little ones before they are able to read for themselves. Nothing in publishing is harder to produce of a high order than a children's page. Strange how all ages read it, isn't it? Are we all just children grown bigger and older?

think the paper is all theirs. Their heads are into the adventure stories, the Boys' Page, the short stories, things to make, Stamps to Stick, games, trapping and everything that delights and helps your boys. If your eye is on their future this is the kind of reading you will wish them to have.

The Girls

find the Girls' Page "after their own hearts." The Family Page also interests them, and, strange to say, they like the adventure stories quite as well as do the boys, although every issue has a special girls' story. Y.C. receipts, dainty things to make, pin-money ideas, special articles and other things of interest.

MR. TAFT POINTS THE WAY.

Ex-President TAFT discusses the deadlock over the Peace Treaty in The Philadelphia Public Ledger. He is hopeful that in the regular session of the Senate, soon to be here, a workable Peace Treaty, including a workable League of Nations, will emerge. He bases his belief on the fact that four-fifths of the Senate have by their votes proved themselves in favor of a League, though differing on details, and it is incredible that with such a state of sentiment a compromise cannot be reached. He shows that eighty Senators so registered themselves, and that the entrance of Senator GLASS of Virginia will increase the number to eighty-one.

Naturally the President is blamed by his predecessor for unskilled handling of the Treaty, for refusal to compromise in the early stages of the fight, and for his belief that "by a 'frontal attack he could reduce a 'plain majority against the Treaty of 'a dozen or more votes into a minor'ity of the Senate." The fact is, however, that even when Mr. WILSON was making his "frontal attack" he intimated his willingness to accept reservations that did not destroy, nullify, or mangle the Treaty, and so did Senator HITCHCOCK.

It is to be noted, moreover—and we may be sure that an observant people has not missed the point—that to every suggestion now made at Washington that a compromise on proper reservations may be reached and the Treaty saved, Mr. LODGE, and even Mr. LENROOT, make answer that it is too late; and Mr. LODGE insists that if his reservations are not accepted none will be. That has been the obstructionist spirit from the beginning.

When Mr. TAFT leaves this untenable ground he speaks with clearness and force. He disposes of Mr. LODGE's resolution concerning peace by pointing out that it will have no effect except as putting on record the opinion of Congress that peace has been created by the Treaty "without our agreeing to it." It will not be a law, it will not be a treaty, it will not even be "an authoritative declaration" by a governmental agency having power to bind us, and cannot even be transmitted to Germany unless the President chooses to transmit it.

The ex-President shows that, whatever may be the final language of the resolution, the Republicans will put themselves in the wrong if they insist on retaining "abrupt, undiplomatic, and bumptiously offensive language." Such language does not add anything to the safeguarding of our rights, and politeness will not subtract anything therefrom. The demand that the other Powers must accept our series of reservations not only comes under this head, but is entirely unnecessary, since the adoption of reasonable reservations will sufficiently safeguard us without the acceptance of them by any other nation. We cannot be bound by anything that conflicts with our reservations, once we have made them, and the attempt to challenge the European Powers to make sure that they see them is gratuitous and useless. At the same time it will make it harder for the other nations to assent to our position. This change, he says, will be one in form only, and will "relieve "our reservations from the churlish "spirit they now reflect."

Considering the Shantung clause and Article X. as the only "sticking points," he is hopeful of a compromise. He proposes the qualification of Article X. as a necessity if Republican votes are to be had, and the reconstruction of the Shantung provision in a way to obtain the same result—whatever that may be—without offending any further the already irritated sensibilities of Japan. With the preamble changed from the offensive to the polite, and these two modifications made, Mr. TAFT is unable to see why the Anglo-Saxon genius for compromise cannot find a way for the adoption of a peace and League which the country wants and which eighty Senators say they want.

LIGHT ON THE JENKINS CASE.

In the vigorous note of the State Department calling upon the Mexican Government to release Consular Agent JENKINS, who had been arrested and imprisoned at Puebla on a charge of intimidating witnesses in what appears to be a trumped-up case of collusion, there is an assurance that the United States Government accepts as true the story which JENKINS tells of his kidnapping. It is a simple and straightforward story, and there is nothing in it to justify the suspicion that the Consular Agent conspired with the bandit CORDOVA, or with any one else, to defraud either Government. The Mexican authorities, he says, made no effort to obtain his release, and caused him "every possible inconvenience."

As the bandits and insurgents in that part of Mexico are followers of FELIX DIAZ, or sympathizers with him, the statement of the real object of the principals, as reported by the Consular Agent, is plausible and may be said to carry conviction: that they wanted to demonstrate how powerless the Carranza Government was to protect an American citizen even in one of the chief cities of the country. This makes a situation in which it is advisable to move with deliberation, at the same time not omitting any act to protect the Consular Agent from indignities by the Mexican Government. Its treatment of him was inexplicable until he threw light upon the motive. To discredit him seemed the surest way to extricate the Mexican authorities from an awkward embarrassment. They believed they were the victims of a plot and sought to involve the Consular Agent in it. But he, too, was a victim.

The Mexican Government can make amends for its outrageous behavior only by ceasing to molest Mr. JENKINS, agreeing to reimburse him for moneys extorted from him, paying him damages for injuries he has suffered, and acknowledging to the State Department that it failed to give him the protection to which he was entitled as the American Consular Agent.

REACTION IN BERLIN.

We have had recent proof in this country that inclement weather is a potent preventive of mob action, but it is hardly to be supposed that the snowdrifts in the streets of Berlin were wholly responsible for the nonappearance of the expected rioting when HINDENBURG and LUDENDORFF testified before the Parliamentary commission of inquiry into the conduct of the war. There were enthusiastic crowds of reactionary supporters, including many students, who waved the old black-white-red banner of imperial glories; there were counter-demonstrations by crowds of workmen; but an actual conflict was avoided, and the endeavor of soapbox orators to excite the crowds was thwarted by a heavy snowstorm. The snow had a great deal to do with it, but it could hardly have prevented a reactionary demonstration if such a thing had been organized with the competence which is undoubtedly at the command of the army officers centred in the Eden Hotel. Spontaneous enthusiasts shouted but did not fight; when the real reactionary demonstration comes—and evidence that it will come soon grows stronger every day—there will be real fighting.

HINDENBURG and LUDENDORFF appeared before the committee. But they testified, in effect, merely so far as they wished, though the committee paid HINDENBURG the favor—perhaps not undeserved, in view of his services to the country—of sending him in advance the six questions prepared for him. But HINDENBURG'S answer paid little attention to the questions. He read a statement which roved over the entire field and evaded detailed response. Cross-examination of him and of LUDENDORFF was perfunctory; and after the first day's inquiry the committee announced that neither of the Generals would be asked to appear again.

A great deal remained unexplained after that first day of testimony; and while much of it can be supplied from the evidence given by other witnesses, the committee could have gained some profitable information, or at the very least some profitable refusals of information, from a further questioning of the two Generals. That it let them go must be put down as a victory for the reactionaries. They had said that it was unseemly to subject the great war leaders to the cross-questioning of mere deputies; and they had their way. The committee was afraid to ask more. And HINDENBURG, leaving for his home at Magdeburg, was greeted by the crowds as "the next Reichspräsident."

HINDENBURG as President would be merely a seatwarmer, as they know well in the Netherlands, where royalists of all shades are scheming for the return of some Hohenzollern or other. Supporters of the Crown Prince, who has assumed a seasonable cloak of constitutional principles and democratic fervor, are said to be alarmed. The demonstrations for his loyal HINDENBURG may inspire the august WILLIAM to attempt the recovery of his throne. Outsiders may think that there is more enthusiasm for HINDENBURG than there would be for WILLIAM, but the cult of the old German monarchists is a strange one, and those who cheered the Field Marshal would be as likely to cheer the Kaiser. But while HINDENBURG as President might do for WILLIAM what GEORGE MONK did for CHARLES II., he would be less likely to turn over his place to the Crown Prince; loyalty to the head of the House of Hohenzollern is less conspicuous on the island of Wieringen than elsewhere.

Meanwhile the Baltic army, repulsed by the Letts before Riga, is reported to be on its way back to Germany. It is well drilled, well equipped, and experienced in war. Perhaps the soldiers are coming home because they have tired suddenly of a campaign in which no immediate profit is in sight; perhaps those who have always controlled that army have decided that it would be more useful in Berlin. When that army is within striking distance of the capital we may see a demonstration that mere snowstorms cannot quell.

THE COAL NEGOTIATIONS.

The coal miners' spokesman says that the operators' proposal of betterment of working conditions is ridiculous. It has a right to be, since it is an answer to the miners' preposterous proposals, and both are bargaining proposals. What will count more than adjectives used on either side is the opinion of Fuel Administrator GARFIELD. He will have to consider wages, profits, and prices together, and name a figure fair for producers and consumers alike. The miners think that the increase of wages should come out of the excess profits which they allege. The operators think that the increase ought to come out of excess wages which the miners have received, but have not included in their cash wages. Electric light, rent, coal, mining supplies appear to have been furnished to the miners below cost, and often at nominal rates. They have not valued them because they cost them so little, but they dislike to pay for their perquisites. There are many cases in which union dues were more than half of the rent paid, and cheap lodging without union dues would make an attractive combination to non-unionists.

It is useless to shirk the fact that wages and profits alike should meet the reasonable expectation of operators and miners if consumers are to get coal. When the reasonable relation of these items of cost is adjusted the strike will be in more danger than by legal procedure. The economic adjustment of the strike is best left in the hands of the Fuel Administrator. He won the confidence of the operators over their first strong opposition, and is entitled to the confidence of the miners also. He is no tenderfoot in the trade, and is a "good" capitalist, without prejudice against workers. The Governors who are intervening would better wait until they are invited. Some of them have been rebuked locally, both by courts and by those whose co-operation they had invited.

This is a national difficulty, not a local matter. It calls for one adjustment, with whatever minuteness of detail may be found necessary; but no State can relieve itself at the expense of its neighbors. If local action should succeed in producing a surplus of coal, it would be subject to distribution by the Administrator. Thus there is no inducement for local settlements; and the national organization of miners could not permit it. If contrary to their interests they would reject it, and if favorable to them locally it would obstruct the general settlement. While there is negotiation there is hope of agreement, which is better than the alternative of Government intervention.

AN ADEQUATE ARMY.

In the session just ended Congress gave serious and patient consideration to the question of army reorganization. There have been many hearings by the Military Affairs Committees of Senate and House. Officers from General PERSHING down who were qualified to express an opinion have been called, and they have been encouraged to speak out. So much frankness and wisdom Congress has never heard from the army before. The army has learned lessons from the great war and desires to profit by them. Most of the officers appearing before the committees have declared for a comparatively small regular army, considering that the times are out of joint, and for some system of universal training. As a result the General Staff bill, approved by Secretary BAKER, which called for a regular force of 576,000 men, including all noncombatant units, was laid aside by the House. The Senate never took it seriously. Another reorganization measure, the work of Senator CHAMBERLAIN and Representative KAHN, is also out of favor; not because it does not contain excellent features, including a provision for a regular army of about 225,000 men, but because expert opinion indicates that it can be improved materially.

The opinion of the House Committee on Military Affairs seemed to be that a combat army of 250,000 regulars would be adequate, with a total strength in all branches of 285,000 men. With regard to universal training the committee had an open mind. In the House it was apparently a matter to be handled gingerly; members generally approved of universal training, but were somewhat doubtful concerning the judgment of their constituents. It is intimated that the Senate Military Affairs Committee will begin all over again in the regular session, drafting an entirely new bill. Significant is the fact that the adviser of the committee will not be Major Gen. FRANK MCINTYRE, whom Secretary BAKER recommended, but Colonel JOHN M. PALMER of the General Staff, who has been an outspoken critic of the bill for a large regular army to which the Secretary had committed himself. As a member of the War Plans Division of the General Staff Colonel PALMER has advocated universal military training, an organized citizen army, and a minimum regular establishment, which he would place at 280,000.

Thus upon the size of the professional army the House and Senate, assuming that Colonel PALMER'S views are accepted by the latter, will be of much the same opinion. He would have the regular establishment a nucleus of the defense forces, as appears from the following statement:

> The main feature of the military establishment of the United States should be a trained citizen army organized territorially in divisions, army corps, and field armies, in such a manner as to permit immediate mobilization in the event of emergency.

Colonel PALMER rejects the short term of training proposed in the General Staff bill. He would make the minimum period six months, after which there should be five years' association with a citizen army organization, followed by membership in an unorganized reserve to be called out only in emergencies. The training corps would be composed of regular army officers supplemented by volunteers from the citizen army, which in the main would consist of veterans of the European war. Every detail of Colonel PALMER'S plan is worked out carefully with a view to giving the country a mobile force of several million men who could be rapidly mobilized. Others have had the same end in view, but no one else has given the subject so much study or been so tremendously in earnest about realizing the plan of a people's army.

BUSINESS AND THE SENATE.

It is curious to see the extreme divergence of feeling between the Republican majority of the United States Senate, that has just failed to ratify the Peace Treaty, and the evident, admitted, notorious, publicly expressed desire of the American business world. The mercantile bodies, the Chambers of Commerce, the intelligent representatives and students of the commercial, financial, and economic interests of the United States have been eager for the ratification of the Treaty.

That ratification would mean certainty. It would re-establish business confidence. It would begin the reintegration and reconstruction of commercial relations between this country and foreign countries, particularly including Germany. Mr. LODGE and his friends in the Senate have scorned all base questions of international commerce and trade. To them the industrial, financial, and commercial future of the United States and of the rest of the world is of minor consequence. It must be a strange party that is benefited by international commercial confusion and doubt.

SUNDAY PLAYS.

Once more the problem of Sunday plays. This time, like the Ghost of buried Denmark, it comes in such a questionable shape as to invite conversation. One of our most serious-minded managers proposes to give dramas of the highest artistic quality to a group of subscribers. Out of respect for the Sunday law, no tickets will be sold at the box office. At first blush the serious-minded playgoer will see in this a worthy project.

Upon a scrutiny of the local practice in such matters the serious-minded playgoer will probably continue to blush. On every Sunday night the vaudeville houses are crowded, but the temples of legitimate drama are dark. Trained seals, Salome dancers, and musical monkeys enjoy full protection of the law, but plays by SHAKESPEARE or SHAW are barred. They are barred, that is, if they are given in the English language. Translated into other tongues the same plays may be given. When HEINRICH CONRIED was Herr Direktor of the Irving Place Theatre the tenderness of his conscience was such that he used to advertise his Sunday offering as "Grosses Sacred Concert"—a description at which SHAW at least would have stared and gasped. Even SHAKESPEARE might have raised an eyebrow at finding that he might enjoy equal privilege with seals and monkeys provided only that he assumed the virtuous outside of a Malvolio.

One precedent comes nearer the present case. The late Stage Society, which was one of the many unofficial casualties of the war, gave Sunday performances open to its members only—and open only at the back door. The performance was disguised as a rehearsal. Any one coming in at front was dealt with by the police. The present attempt is apparently to approximate this precedent. It will probably prosper in proportion as it succeeds in doing so.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Everybody Has His Wild Moments. Major Gen. Sir FREDERICK B. MAURICE, in the course of his discussion of conditions in Germany, printed yesterday, compared the mental attitude of those who today demand the severest of treatment for the defeated Germans to that of a man who, having killed a poisonous snake, proceeds to pound it to a jelly. Such an impulse, or nervous reaction as he called it, was excusable, he said, but it was neither sensible nor dignified.

"Excusable" was hardly the word to use in characterizing conduct not only easily and perfectly understandable by every human being still capable of any nervous reaction at all to strong stimuli; it is defensible as one of many survivals of a past when man's view of the world and its inhabitants, other than himself, was much different from the one taken of it and them by us now—in our cooler moments.

It is true that the continued beating of a dead snake is useless, and therefore neither sensible nor dignified, so far as concerns punishment of the creature for being poisonous or as prevention of further injury by that particular snake. Primitive man, however, would have seen a real utility in doing it, and for him, believing what he did about the powers of snakes apparently dead, it was the part of wisdom to make revival and survival of the enemy as nearly impossible as he could. He would have had ideas, too, about the spirit or ghost of that snake—ideas long since abandoned by our reason, but still effective at times when the lower and older mind chances to have its way, the higher and newer one having stepped aside.

Of course, it is not desirable that modern folk should do too often what adults did always in the childhood of the race, but they cannot help doing it occasionally, and, the Germans themselves having in the war demonstrated that as a military nation they have not advanced far beyond the manners and morals of the stone age, it is little wonder that they excite in others the ancient urges.

Crime Is Always Personal. More likely than anything else to end the sort of diffused and excessive animosity to Germans which General MAURICE referred to and condemned will be action like that which the French are taking in bringing to trial the individual Germans against whom evidence as to the commission of particular crimes has been secured. The punishment, after conviction, of these criminals almost at once will mitigate, and finally obliterate, the feeling that, as "the Germans" were guilty of a long series of misdeeds, ranging from pillage to murder, so "the Germans" should be held responsible for those misdeeds and treated accordingly.

Herein lies the one good argument, or at any rate the best argument, for bringing the former Kaiser before an international court, finding out precisely what part he took in bringing on the war and in deciding how it should be waged, and then imposing on him whatever penalty his use of power deserves. Nobody is thirsty for the wretched man's blood or would be angry if he escaped a capital sentence, but there is a wide and deep feeling that justice will not be content with his mere dethronement—with his retirement to live in wealth and ease the life of a country gentleman.

"The Germans," if they were wiser, would be the first to demand that his responsibility be fixed, for they would realize that whatever of responsibility was placed on his shoulders would be taken from theirs.

Her Fate Recalls Her Glory. One need not have been "the first white child born on Manhattan Island," or even the oldest of New York City's present immigrants from abroad or from the American backwoods, to remember when the name of the Mary Powell was familiar to every metropolitan ear as that of the finest and fastest steamboat using the nearby waters. Still, to the youngsters of this day she is hardly more than a memory—not even that to the majority of them—and they would find it hard to believe what place the Mary Powell had in minds and hearts hereabout, back in the '60s, '70s, and '80s of the nineteenth century.

At her best she was nothing at all remarkable for either speed or magnificence, judged by modern standards of both as exemplified in steamships, but no such standards were applied to her when she earned the fame so lavishly accorded to her, and New Yorkers watched her with gratitude as well as interest as she rushed up and down the river, its unrivaled mistress. Did she not give them about the least questionable, or least questioned, claim to superiority over the rest of the country?

The Mary Powell was an improvement, not an invention, and her achievements had nothing of the heroical in their associations, so there is hardly excuse for lamenting, or even pretending to lament, that she is not to be preserved as a monument or memorial. Yet it is hard, or seems so, to those who recall, and in a way shared, her glories, that she has been sold for $40,000 to a "waste and metal company." Whether that means she is to be broken up or is to become the attending drudge when other vessels are destroyed, it is the end of her and an end equally saddening to all old-timers. Why didn't she break away from her dock, some stormy night, drift out to sea with nobody on board, and disappear with a dignity worthy of her record?

For "Roosevelt House."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Ann Ford Vrooman is Chairman of the Herkimer Village (N. Y.) committee organized to help in obtaining $1,000,000 to restore Theodore Roosevelt's birthplace at 28 East Twentieth Street and the adjoining house, 26, which have been acquired by the Woman's Roosevelt Memorial Association and will form "Roosevelt House." The Colonel's birthplace will be restored and the interior reproduced with the original furnishings, family portraits and other heirlooms. The house will be a repository for records of the Colonel, there will be a free circulating library containing his writings, and a permanent school of citizenship will be established. Mrs. Vrooman says in her appeal: "This call for $1,000,000 is a call to all American women. The women of America helped to preserve the home of Lincoln. The women of America purchased and restored Mount Vernon. The women of America are now asked to restore and perpetuate the birthplace of Theodore Roosevelt. Every donor and junior donor will receive the emblem of the association, which is a small rose gold finished pin bearing the likeness of Colonel Roosevelt. The names of all who give $1 or more are recorded and preserved in the 'Book of Donors' at Roosevelt House. Boys and girls are junior donors by giving 25 cents."

THE AMERICAN HORSE.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Your article of Nov. 9 entitled "The Peerless Arabian" does a grave injustice to three distinctly American products, each "peerless" in his sphere—the American standard-bred horse or trotter, the American saddle horse, and the Morgan.

Despite the fact that the war could hardly have been won without the American horse, despite the fact that for short hauls the draft horse is essential to industry and cannot be displaced by the motor truck, and despite the fact that the farm horse is and probably must ever continue to be responsible for an overwhelming percentage of the agricultural products of America, the dazzling performances of the gasoline motor are blinding many to the continued importance of the horse.

The Arab has his merits, but the comparisons of your article are without reasonable foundation; and even for cavalry purposes there are few who would class the Arab with any of the three distinctively American products above mentioned.

The endurance contest to which you refer was staged by the Arab Club of America with little notice to the country. Its conditions were most unusual in some particulars, such as penalizing a horse according to the amount of feed consumed. A good cavalry horse should be a good feeder.

The members of the Arab Club are good sportsmen. They have much to be proud of in the result of the recent contest, and they deserve great credit for their liberality and their efforts in inaugurating this important event.

The Arabian contestants were owned by a wealthy fancier and doubtless were in the pink of condition. There were no entries from the saddle horse sections.

Of the Morgan horse, Castor, a ten-year-old Morgan, was taken out of a lawn mower to enter the contest without other training. He made a magnificent showing, and Major C. A. Benton, one of the judges, expressed the opinion that he would have won with proper conditioning and handling. Castor was bred by the United States Government at its Morgan horse farm in Vermont.

Rustem Bey, the horse who finished first and was disqualified after the race because he was slightly lame, was one-half American trotter and one-half Arab.

In the last hundred years many efforts have been made to establish the Arab in a place of usefulness in the United States, yet admirable as he is in his place, his showing has been as nothing in comparison with the vast and glittering achievements of the American trotter, the American saddle horse and the truly American Morgan in the world of industry and the world of pleasure.

Mr. Johnson's Campaign.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

The adventures of Mr. "Pussyfoot" Johnson seem to be occupying a good deal of space in the London press. After being "ragged" by the medical students on Tuesday he is afterward commended by them for being a good sport.

The whole episode is very refreshing reading after the Centralia outrages. It shows that men holding widely different opinions are capable of high-spirited action tempered with a perfect understanding of the ethics of fair play.

Mr. Johnson is likely to incur a good deal of difficulty in convincing the British people that prohibition is the only road to salvation. Prohibition is after all only the lunatic fringe on the really great movement of temperance. When Mr. Johnson says that "drink is the greatest curse of the human race" he is talking light-headedly. He means that drunkenness is the greatest curse, but like all good fanatics he is at no great pains to choose his words carefully. In the City of New York there are unfortunately a good many subway accidents every year, but we do not abolish the subway for that reason; we merely seek to safeguard the public by taking every possible precaution. Drink in itself is no more a curse today than it was nineteen hundred years ago at the marriage feast of Cana in Galilee.

By a curious turn in the wheel of fortune Mr. Johnson has now become something of a popular hero. We must all admire the good sportsmanship he has shown, but it will be a pity if he imagines that he can even convince the public of the crime of moderation.

A. WHITRIDGE.

THE PRINCE OF WALES.

God keep thee, fair Prince, with thy radiant brow,
Both the pride and the hope of Great Britain, the heir
To the throne of an empire. Oh, let us bestow
The heartfelt farewell thy youth must inspire,
And feel, in the hearts of our people, the glow
Of their friendship that softens this crystalline air
Of cold Autumn. For thine is the springtime of life,
The fresh flower of peace from wild Winter's mad strife,
The glories that lead toward the portals of heaven,
O'er fields where, for long, were hell's chariots driven.

And the cluster of plumes that embellish thy crest,
Waving high o'er the glittering star on thy breast,
The three feathers of Wales—we acclaim them as ours!
Great Britain, America, France—these three powers
That conquered, with all who have fought by their side,
For our freedom, for truth, for the glorious tide
Of prosperity rising and washing our shores,
Since the Temple of Peace has reopened her doors.

Of Winter's fierce tempest, of Summer's swift breeze,
That break o'er the prow. May its name, the Renown,
Be an emblem of fame that shall cling to thy crown,
For we honor the greatness, the purpose that sways
The fine flower of manhood that England displays.

God guide thee. The blessing Columbia gives
To the heir of a King, if he reigns, if he lives,
Is not born of monarchical splendors or thrones,
But the blood of our heroes, the tears and the groans
Of the wounded who fought for a glorious cause,
To preserve their undying belief in our laws.
For the soul is immortal. The flesh passes by,
The fair vision of youth may be lost to the eye,
But the spirit of man must be lifted above,

Welfare Campaign Planned for Personnel in Remote Regions.

A welfare campaign for the personnel of the Red Cross in Europe has been planned under the direction of Mrs. Robert E. Olds, the wife of the Red Cross Commissioner for Europe. Mr. and Mrs. Olds sailed for Europe yesterday.

Quarters for the workers are being selected by a special committee and eighteen francs has been set as the maximum weekly charge for board and room in Paris. A courier service, with headquarters in Paris, has also been established. Workers in outlying parts of Poland and Montenegro get their shopping done in Paris through the couriers and weekly packets of books and magazines are carried out from the French capital.

H. J. Rogers was chosen yesterday to succeed Ethan Allen, who has resigned as manager of the Atlantic Division of the Red Cross. Mr. Rogers has been acting manager since July 1. Miss Ellen Louise Adee has been named as assistant manager.

RAISES TAX DANGER SIGNAL.

Travis Says State Expenditures Menace Business Progress.

Citing budget requests for next year of $138,000,000, which is $42,000,000 more than the last appropriation, with only $123,000,000 available to meet the demand, State Controller Travis last night warned a meeting of the Broker's Association of Accountants and Auditors that this growth, the greatest in the State's history, he said, meant a tax that may become not only a source of irritation but a positive handicap to business progress and a detriment to investments.

"The seriousness of this phenomenal rise," the Controller said, "is enhanced because the majority of taxpayers usually lack an intimate knowledge of what the State government is doing. They vote upon a referendum appropriating vast sums of money without a thorough understanding of what they cost. For example, how many realize that every $1,000,000 borrowed for some vast public enterprise costs $2,000,000 in interest before the debt is finally cancelled?"

HOSPITAL FUND GIFTS.

Fifth Day of Drive Shows More Than a Third of a Million Subscribed.

The United Hospital Fund closed the fifth day of its campaign yesterday with a little more than one-third of the $1,000,000 sought subscribed. The contributions for the day amounted to $78,133, bringing the total up to $379,658.

J. P. Morgan & Co. stated that their contribution of $25,000, which was announced a few days ago, would be renewed each year as long as the present emergency continued to exist. Three $5,000 subscriptions were announced from Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt, Jr., Thomas Ryan, and Wm. Iselin & Co. Mrs. E. H. Harriman sent a check for $3,000, and W. E. Roosevelt subscribed $2,500. Other subscriptions of $1,000 each came from Miss Edith Scoville, Mrs. H. B. Hyde, Mrs. John S. Kennedy, Mr. and Mrs. Manton B. Metcalf, Halle & Stieglitz, Fleitmann & Co., Walter Jennings & Co., Cornelius N. Bliss, Jr., J. Horace Harding, Frederick Strauss, George H. McFadden & Bro., and the Farmers' Loan & Trust Co.

EXPORTS UP, IMPORTS DOWN

Results in October as Compared with Previous Month.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—American exports in October, 1919, were valued at $632,000,000, an increase of $33,000,000 over those in September, and of $130,000,000 over those in October a year ago, according to a statement today, by the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce. Exports for the ten months ended with October were valued at $6,501,000,000, an increase of $1,440,000,000, compared with the corresponding period last year.

October imports totaled $416,000,000, a decrease of $20,000,000 from the high mark of September, but an increase of $169,000,000 over those in October, 1918. For the ten months' period imports amounted to $3,113,000,000, a gain of $543,000,000 over the corresponding period the year before. The figure for the first ten months was higher than that recorded for any previous full calendar year, the statement said.

SEES LAKES UNDER BRITAIN.

Could Control Them by Canadian Canal System, Says Clinton.

ALBANY, N. Y., Nov. 21.—Great Britain would have complete control over the Great Lakes in case of any trouble with the United States if the proposed Canadian waterway system from the Great Lakes to the sea is completed, George Clinton of Buffalo declared today before the New York State Waterways Convention. He strongly opposed participation by this country in the Canadian project.

Resolutions adopted included opposition to further interference or control by the Federal Government of the State barge canal system, declared against Government aid in the proposed Canadian canal, and favored the deeper Hudson project and the development of unused water power in the State.

SCHOOL LUNCHES END JAN. 1

Board of Estimate Does Not Recommend Luncheon Workers' Positions.

After next January there will be no more school luncheons for the children attending the public schools of the city. The Board of Estimate yesterday refused the request of the Board of Education for the recommendation to the Aldermen of the establishment of positions for luncheon assistants, cooks, and helper, and for the position of manager of school luncheons with a compensation of $1,800 a year.

As matters now stand, the $50,000 voted for school luncheons last Winter will revert to the city if not used by January, 1920. This sum was voted for the purchase of foodstuffs and equipment and is not available for salaries.

Harvard Fund Passes $10,000,000.

Early difficulties resulting from incorrect addresses are being overcome, it was said yesterday, and a total of 25,000 graduates is expected on the list of subscribers to the fund.

GIVE IMPERATOR TO THE BRITISH

Shipping Board Recommends Turning Over Six More Former German Ships.

EXCHANGE FOR TANKERS

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—The former German liner Imperator was turned over to the British Government early this afternoon by officials of the United States Shipping Board. With the approval of President Wilson, John Barton Payne, Chairman of the Shipping Board, has recommended that the six other ships taken from German ports after the armistice and allocated to this country be delivered to Great Britain in return for the Standard Oil tankers now held in the Firth of Forth.

The exchange of the tankers for the six German ships would be "without prejudice" and subject to ultimate decision of ownership, it was said at the Shipping Board this afternoon. This means that the controversy between the United States and Great Britain over the tankers will have to be threshed out later. How late this may be is a question. The fact that the Senate refused to ratify the Peace Treaty may involve long delay. The Inter-Allied Maritime Council, which has handled the allocation of the ships taken from Germany, is a creature of the treaty. Until the final signature all its decisions must of necessity be temporary.

Just why the Imperator was turned over at this particular date was not fully explained at the Shipping Board. However, in shipping circles two reasons are advanced. One was that the Standard Oil Company was insistent that its tankers be returned and that Great Britain was equally insistent that she should have the Imperator. The other was that the Imperator's size would make her unprofitable for the Shipping Board to operate, and that, therefore, it would do comparatively little harm to American shipping interests to surrender her.

It was learned today that Chairman Payne has sent cables to Frank Polk, Under Secretary of State, recommending that the six ships be given to Great Britain in exchange for the tankers. No answers have been received, it was said. For some time Mr. Polk, who is in Paris, has been negotiating with the Inter-Allied Maritime Council concerning the ships.

Great Britain has maintained for some time that she was entitled to the Imperator. The great liner and the other ships were allocated to this country for use in bringing home American soldiers. The British understanding, so that Government asserts, was that she should have the ships for transport service when the Americans were through with them.

Not long ago announcement was made that England had arranged to let the Cunard Line operate the Imperator in transatlantic service. However, when the day came for turning over the ship to the Cunard officials the Shipping Board refused to surrender her and the other vessels to the British representatives in New York. It was believed this action had been taken because the Interallied Maritime Council had ordered from German ports to the Scottish harbor, tankers which were owned by a subsidiary of the Standard Oil Company and were in German ports when the armistice was signed.

Great Britain sent over a crew to man the Imperator and take her across the ocean, and these sailors are now at Ellis Island. It is said that other British crews will be sent to man the six additional vessels, taking the places of several thousand American sailors who have manned the transports. It is understood that a majority of the American sailors will now be discharged.

ROYAL BED SOLD FOR $2,000.

Returns for the second day of the sale of the furnishings of the big mansion of the late Captain J. R. De Lamar brought returns of $44,169, making a total of $71,421 to date. The costly and elaborate bed with canopy from the Yerkes collection was the most elaborate piece of the sale, going to the Lans Company for $2,000. It was a royal bed of the Louis XV. style, on a dais, made of French inlaid kingwood and mahogany, with heavy and ornate decorations in relief of gilded bronze covering the sides and legs, forming an ornamental decoration on the headboard, surmounted by a crest with a sleeping Somnus.

On the footboard, almost half life size, was the figure of a reclining woman in relief, supporting a canopy of the bronze, with little naked loves on either side and the setting sun as a background. The canopy, equally elaborate, of wood with the gilded bronze and silk damask draperies, went with the bed.

To Frank Campbell, who was one of the largest individual buyers, went the second elaborate piece of the afternoon's sale, the mammoth Japanese cloisonne vase, 7 feet high by 4 feet wide, too large for any but an immense house, for $510. Among the designs upon this was a group of life-size fowls in natural colors, a cherry tree, and the flowered red and white cover was surmounted by a life-sized eagle with spread wings. It is a signed piece by the artist, made presumably as a concession to the supposed taste of the American people for the Chicago World's Fair of 1893.

The highest price of the afternoon was given for a large Kirmin carpet, 27 by 19 feet, which went to Baumgarten for $5,500. A carved and gilded Louis XVI. salon suite, with Aubusson tapestry in silk, went to Seaman, agent, for $3,100; a French kingwood, gilded bronze and marble dressing table, by Linke, matching the elaborate bedstead, went to P. W. Rouss for $1,800. A Scotch Axminster carpet and a large Persian carpet went to Balozian for respectively $1,050 and $1,125.

The Louis XV. Gobelin tapestry and the great mosque carpet of Ardebil, from the Yerkes collection, will be sold with other of the most expensive and costly pieces of the collection today, the closing one of the sale.

WHISTLER LETTERS SOLD.

Collection of Documents Goes to Joseph Pennell, Biographer.

A very important collection of letters and documents from and relating to Whistler has been open to inspection in this city for the last month or two, and its sale is now announced through E. Weyhe to Joseph Pennell, the well-known friend and biographer of Whistler, in whose hands the numerous personal details in which the collection is rich will be secure from exploitation.

Besides these personal items, however, are many things of a public character which already have been used publicly and, for the most part, forgotten. There is, for example, the astounding brief prepared by Whistler for the Ruskin trial, with its wealth of pertinent quotation and wittily poignant comment. To reread Fors Clavigera in the light of its clear candle is an experience to make the galled Ruskinite wince even at this late day.

The brief and such items as Whistler's fine letter to Rose after the verdict, in which the moral victory is proudly recognized, have made the appearance of the collection in the public market an interesting occasion to collectors of Whistler material.

MARCH EXPLAINS HOSPITAL ORDER

Year's Limit for Treatment Does Not Apply to Soldiers Too Ill to be Moved.

NOR THOSE LACKING MEANS

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 21.—The War Department was deluged today with newspaper inquiries based on a protest of patients of Army Hospital 19 for tuberculosis at Asheville, N. C., against what they understood to be an order from the General Staff for the discharge of all soldiers in military hospitals after a year's treatment, regardless of their wishes or condition.

The patients sent identical telegrams to many newspapers, stating their understanding of the matter. Copies of the telegram were submitted by Washington correspondents this afternoon, with the result that a statement was issued by General March dealing with the situation, which will be made, it is understood, the subject of a further statement by the War Department tomorrow. General March's statement reads:

"All disabled military personnel, except officers of permanent army and special surgical cases, shall be granted discharge six months after admission to a hospital in the United States for definative treatment, if discharge is desired and applied for by the individual in writing. All disabled military personnel, except officers of the permanent army and those requiring multiple operations or special surgical treatment, or suffering from mental diseases, shall be discharged one year after admission to a hospital in this country after having been carried on the sick report for definitive treatment for the same period.

"Provided individuals too sick to be removed from the hospital without prejudice to their life or recovery, or who, upon the question of discharge being submitted to them in writing, certify that they cannot provide for the necessary care and attention for themselves, shall be retained until provision for their care and maintenance is made by the War Risk Insurance Bureau, Soldiers' Home, or National Home for Disabled Volunteer Soldiers.

"Provided, further, that nothing herein contained shall be deemed to rescind the provisions of Circular No. 188, authorizing discharge at any time of the disabled who have been cured or have attained maximum restoration, or those who furnish guarantees that specialized treatment will be continued as long as necessary."

Special to The New York Times.

ASHEVILLE, N. C., Nov. 21.—The 1,200 patients in United States Army Hospital No. 19 at Oteen, six miles from Asheville, are stirred with excitement by the recent order for the discharge of military patients. Those interviewed said that the order meant not only that they would be forced out of the hospitals, but that they could get no aid from the War Risk Bureau or entry into soldiers' homes unless they declared themselves practically paupers. They asserted that, even after this, they would be sent to locations less suited to treatment of tuberculosis than Oteen, which was constructed specially for tubercular cases.

Patients said that this order stopped all pay, since discharged men draw no pay, made them dependent on friends or public charity, and was a repudiation of the Government's promise to care for a soldier until he had recovered from disease contracted in the service of the country.

PASS COURT HOUSE PLAN.

Justices' Committee Approves Proposed Hexagonal Building.

The great round Court House planned in the Mitchel administration will not be erected. The new Court House will be radically different, it was announced yesterday by Justice Robert F. Wagner, Chairman of the Justices' committee formed to pass on the plans. Justice Wagner said that the new building would be hexagonal and that in every important detail the original plans had been changed.

"We will not have to raze any additional buildings on the property acquired by the city," he said. "There is room enough on the site that has already been cleared. Construction will probably begin next March. Our estimates of the cost are not above $7,000,000, and when plans are worked out it may mean an expenditure of only $6,000,000. Much of the costs can be met by the city selling the property it now owns adjoining the site."

State Architect Lewis F. Pilcher and Guy Lowell, who drew the circular plan, have drafted the new plans and will supervise the work. The plans will be presented to the Board of Estimate next month.

STOLEN SECURITIES WORTH $882,500 FOUND

Detectives Expect to Locate Half a Million More in This City Today.

In the general investigation into the thefts of securities in this city, Assistant District Attorneys Albert Blogg Unger, Alfred J. Talley, and John T. Dooling have located up to date, they declare, $882,500 worth of the securities. Of this amount, Mr. Dooling said last night, $500,000 worth was in Washington depositories, $140,000 in Philadelphia, and $242,500 has been located in New York.

The securities were stolen from messenger boys sent with them to other firms or to banks. Who criminally received them has not yet been determined.

Mr. Dooling told of the manner in which the thieves work. He said they had men in collusion with them in the offices of the places to which the securities were to be sent, and that these men, after receiving the securities, would sometimes steal them, and get them out of the possession of their lawful owners.

Large as the amounts are of stocks recovered or relocated in this city, it is expected that more will be located today, and it was said last night that probably a half million dollars worth of stolen securities will be relocated here before tonight.

Detectives August Mayer, Grover C. Brown, and Joseph Russo of District Attorney Swann's office, under the direction of Messrs. Talley, Dooling, and Unger, have gone into the various banks and brokers' offices and have succeeded in locating a very large number of securities already. These securities were stolen, but it is not contended that the concerns now having them received them criminally.

David W. Sullivan, head of the brokerage firm of Sullivan & Co., at 10 Wall Street, who was arrested on Tuesday on the charge that some of the missing securities had been traced to his office, where they had been pledged for trading accounts by three customers, he said, was indicted yesterday on the charge of criminally receiving stolen property. His bail had been reduced by Justice Delehanty of the Supreme Court from $75,000 to $45,000, which it is expected he will obtain.

Samuel Marder, a curb broker, of 87 Madison Street, and Hyman Horowitz, 5 Hester Street, were held in $10,000 bail each in the Tombs Court yesterday by Magistrate Cobb, pending further examination on Wednesday, on an affidavit charging suspicion of grand larceny. Detective Ransky of Deputy Commissioner Lahey's staff, alleged that the prisoners had tried to dispose of 100 shares of stock of the American Hide and Leather Company, which was owned by Miller & Co., 120 Broadway.

It was said at the District Attorney's office that two prisoners arrested at Washington would probably be brought here by extradition proceedings in connection with prosecution of the Wall Street robberies and disposal of the missing securities.

FILL SALOONS' PLACE, THE Y. M. C. A. IS TOLD

LLOYD GEORGE SENDS CABLE

Special to The New York Times.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 21.—That Americans must replace the punch of the highball with the punch of something far more worthy, and that it must hurry to find a substitute for the saloon formed the basis of an address before the industrial section of the International Y. M. C. A. Convention today by Homer L. Ferguson, President of the Newport News Shipbuilding Company.

"No matter what they say about the baleful influence of the saloon, it was a place where there was cheerfulness and where men were warmly received," said Mr. Ferguson.

"Of course, it was a good thing to get rid of it, but it imposes on us the obligation to furnish the men with something far more worthy in its stead, so they may keep their feet on the ground and their eyes clear and bright. There is a far greater work to do in this 'sweet dry and dry' than there ever was before."

"The saloon is gone, but equally iniquitous places remain," Mr. Mott said. "It is for us to provide competition that will win over such 'joints.'"

The preliminary findings of the Industrial Commission of the "Y," read today, recommend special forms of education and recreation for foremen, foreign born, and boys and the erection of Y. M. C. A. buildings in connection with large industrial properties.

"Every radical leader in the world is trying to make Christ his standard bearer," declared Dr. Robert E. Speer, noted New York Presbyterian minister, addressing the convention.

Dr. Speer speaking "On the Larger Christ," declared "the whole movement of Bourbonism in our country and in the world is trying to hide behind an image of Christ."

Dr. Kenyon L. Butterfield, President of the Massachusetts Agricultural College, told the county section that "increased satisfaction for the farmer in his way of living must be guaranteed if the world is going to be fed."

Thomas Benjamin of the Detroit Shipbuilding Company and H. E. Huffman and F. J. Williams of the Wilson Body Company, Detroit; A. M. Hall, a West Virginia coal miner; Tom Kelly, a logger of Mississippi; O. W. Buenting, General Manager of the Union Switch and Signal Company, and S. M. Carpenter, a lumber manufacturer of New York, also spoke.

Halsey Hammond, Secretary of the Bedford Branch, Brooklyn, presented to the conference the report on business administration.

DETROIT, Nov. 21.—A message of greeting from Premier Lloyd George was read to the Y. M. C. A. convention tonight in which he congratulated the Association on its war service and expressed the hope that its activities would figure as prominently in the reconstruction period as during the conflict. The Association's work, he declared, "will have the effect of drawing our two great countries evermore closely together in the service of humanity."

Nearly 1,000 workers who served the Y. M. C. A. overseas formed a permanent organization tonight.

On the Road
By DR. BERTHOLD A. BAER

A short time ago I traveled to Philadelphia on the Pennsylvania Railroad.

And returned the next day.

Though the train's speed reached as high as sixty miles an hour, every traveler seemed to be as unconcerned, seemed to feel as safe as in their Morris chair at home.

I knew the roadbed to be one of the best in the country.

I knew the equipment to be as good as human skill could make it.

I was convinced that the engineer was one of the most reliable men the Company could select.

The Pullman attendants were as polite and attentive as if they owned the road, or as if the success of the Company depended on their individual service and their giving satisfaction.

And in my mind I compared The Funeral Church at Broadway and 66th Street in that great City of ours, with the Railroad, its service and its personnel.

The Funeral Church is dedicated to the traveler who has passed away into worlds unknown.

Whoever enters The Funeral Church is imbued with a sentiment of tranquillity; quietude and feeling of peacefulness.

They know that whatever is required for that last journey will be the best obtainable. For, Frank E. Campbell will provide what is needed to soften the parting hour and leave a picture long to be remembered.

Like on the train, the people coming to The Funeral Church are made aware that every employee considers himself a part of the institution, and their only satisfaction lies in their possibility to serve.

FIRE AT SING SING; ARSON SUSPECTED

WATER SUPPLY WAS LOW

Firemen Handicapped by Temporary Severance of Main Pipe—No Attempts Made to Escape.

Special to The New York Times.

OSSINING, Nov. 21.—A fire at Sing Sing Prison, believed by officials to have been set b: convicts, started just after daybreak today, and destroyed three prison workshops and a large quantity of valuable stores. The fire was not brought under control for three hours.

Before Warden Edward V. Brophy tendered his resignation a week ago there were rumors at the prison that the convicts were going to start trouble. Their object, it was said, was to discredit the management at Sing Sing, under which their privileges were somewhat curtailed.

When the fire was discovered at 6:50 o'clock this morning by Keeper George Van Alken smoke was issuing from the cart and wagon factory, which is used as a storehouse. The big siren whistle used to signal escapes in a moment notified the countryside that Sing Sing was afire. The employes off duty immediately answered the alarm.

A call was sent for the Ossining Fire Department. Before the firemen and apparatus were admitted extra guards, armed with repeating rifles, were placed outside the river front fence, around the vehicle gates, and on the walls to reinforce the regular keepers.

The convicts, who had just been turned out of the cellblock and dormitory, were in the yard when the fire was discovered. There are about 1,300 imprisoned in the institution now and most of them were in the yard waiting for breakfast. They made no attempt to escape.

The prison was badly handicapped in fighting the fire, for on the day previous the eight-inch water supply main connecting the prison with the Croton Aqueduct was cut. Workmen were moving the pipe to get it out of the way of one of the new Sing Sing structures on the hill, so that temporarily the prison's only water supply was a small, local service.

The convicts knew of the diminished water supply, and Acting Warden J. W. Evers, who was in charge while Warden Brophy was in Albany on official business, said: "It looks as if some one took advantage of this. Things indicate the fire was set." He also said that "there seemed to be a reluctance on the part of the inmates to fight the fire, and only about twenty-five of them helped in the work."

The lowest estimate of the damage was $100,000, and some prison attendants stated that it would cost $250,000 to replace the structures and burned stores and machinery. One hundred convicts stopped work and hundreds more may be forced into idleness temporarily unless the raw material destroyed is quickly replaced.

Principal Keeper Martin Deeley began an examination of prisoners, seeking to learn the identity of those who know how the fire started.

State Superintendent of Prisons Charles F. Rattigan arrived tonight to conduct an investigation. He visited the prison about sundown, but has only started his inquiry. He said: "I only had time to question a few officers tonight and I will continue my investigation tomorrow."

MILK WILL NOT GO HIGHER.

Farmers Will Get More Money, but Retail Price Remains Unchanged.

The Borden's Farm Products Company announced yesterday that the price of milk to the consumer in December will be the same as in November, despite the increase which the distributer will pay the producer. Sheffield Farms Company has not announced its price, but it is generally understood that the November prices will prevail among all the distributers.

The farmers will receive in December $3.68 a hundred pounds for 3 per cent. milk, an increase of 35 cents a hundred pounds over November. This means the farmer will receive 7.8 cents a quart for 3 per cent. milk, and he receives 4 cents a point for milk testing above 3 per cent. butter fats. In December, 1918, the basic price was $4.06 a hundred pounds, or 8.6 cents a quart, the price being approved by the Federal Food Administration.

Arrangements are going ahead for the mass meeting of producers, distributers, and consumers at Hotel Biltmore Sunday night under the auspices of the Community Councils of National Defense. Federal Food Administrator Williams will act as chairman of the meeting, and there will be speakers representing all interests.

FIND BIRDSEYES GUILTY.

Two New York Lawyers and Montgomery Convicted in Pittsburgh.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Pa., Nov. 21.—Clarence F. Birdseye, Kellogg Birdseye and George F. Montgomery, all of New York, who were placed on trial in criminal court before Judge Ambrose B. Reid on Nov. 10, charged with conspiring to defraud the stockholders and policy holders of the Pittsburgh Life and Trust Company, and with wrecking that organization, were found guilty as indicted today. The jury returned its verdict shortly after the opening of court, after a night long deliberation.

Immediately following the verdict, District Attorney Harry H. Rowand announced that as soon as possible the former directors of the Pittsburgh Life and Trust Company would be brought to trial on criminal charges of conspiracy. The civil suit against the directors was settled. The former directors who will have to stand trial are W. H. Nimick, W. C. McAusland, W. I. Berriman, Robert Garlan, V. Q. Hickman, James Carothers, George W. Johnson, Wm. H. Self, Fred W. Kiffer, W. W. Blackburn and John H. Murdock; E. F. Acheson and James J. Donnell, former directors, have died since their indictment.

The trial of these men was delayed by suits against the Birdseyes and Montgomery in the New York courts. Civil charges against the three will be heard in New York Dec. 3 or 4. These suits were instituted to recover assets of the life insurance company. Later charges of grand larceny against the three will be heard in New York.

Attorney Rowand said today that these cases would delay the hearing on the criminal charges against former Directors of the company, as many of the exhibits must now be taken to New York to be used in the prosecution of the Birdseyes and Montgomery.

Following the return of the verdict against the three men today, Judge Reid directed that Clarence F. Birdseye renew his bail in the sum of $20,000; that Kellogg Birdseye do likewise in the sum of $10,000, and the bail of George F. Montgomery was increased from $7,500 to $10,000. A motion for a new trial will be filed for the defendants by their counsel, Attorneys John S. Robb and Ralph Tannehill, the latter announced.

Among the Pittsburgh men who will be tried later is a bank President and a prominent official of the Carnegie Steel Company.

RED PLOT TO KILL OFFICIALS BARED

ELLIS ISLAND INQUIRY

ROSE STOKES BEFORE JURY

Dismissed Teacher Decides Not to Appeal—Eight Suspected Communists Examined.

Information has come into the possession of the police that Reds have raised a fund of $68,000, and have condemned to death three officials who have been active here in the efforts to suppress criminal anarchy. Those marked for death, according to the stories that have reached the authorities, are James J. Gegan, head of the police bomb squad; Assistant District Attorney Alexander I. Rorke, and Charles F. Scully, special agent of the Department of Justice in charge of the suppression of anarchy here.

The police have been informed that three members of the I. W. W. and two of the Union of Russian Workers have been selected to decide upon the means to be employed in carrying out the death threat. According to the stories that have come to the police the fund is for the purpose of buying firearms and explosives to be used by the plotters here.

Mr. Rorke said last night that he had heard of a plot to kill New York officials who were active in the drive against criminal anarchists. The plot, according to his information, was not arranged here, but in a Western city.

The information upon which the police are acting was obtained through the arrests of several suspected "Reds" last Monday night.

Deportation Inquiry Begins.

The handling of suspected anarchists at Ellis Island under the direction of ex-Commissioner of Immigration Frederic C. Howe will be investigated by the Immigration Committee of the House of Representatives, which commenced yesterday an inquiry into the causes of delays in the deportation of alien revolutionary propagandists.

An investigation is also being carried on by the agents of the Department of Justice into the circumstances which make it possible for hundreds of Reds who have been ordered deported to remain in this country and to keep up their propaganda for the destruction of the American Government.

"Congressmen could not be engaged in a more important investigation than that of discovering the reasons why it seems impossible to get Reds deported," said Assistant District Attorney Alexander I. Rorke, who for the last year has been investigating and prosecuting anarchists and revolutionists in this city.

"Men whom we convicted last March and April, and who were turned over to the Government for deportation, are still in this country, out on bail, and have committed new crimes. I have not been able to find any satisfactory reason why they have not been deported."

Eighty Held on Ellis Island.

The members of the committee, who arrived here yesterday, are Congressman Alber Johnson of Washington, Chairman; Isaac Siegel of New York, J. E. Baker of California, W. N. Vaile of Colorado, King Swope of Kentucky, B. F. Welty of Ohio, J. C. Box of Texas, and R. J. Wilson of Louisiana.

The committee will begin its investigation at Ellis Island today. Chairman Johnson said that the committee intended to undertake a broad survey of the immigration problem, with a view to legislation which would permit entrance to this country only of men with the making of good citizens, as well as the more expeditious deportation of the bad ones. He said that they also sought light on the question whether the handling of dangerous aliens should not be transferred from the Department of Labor to the Department of Justice.

There are more than eighty men on Ellis Island at present who have been arrested for taking part in revolutionary movements and are now being held for action by the Department of Labor, in addition to scores who are free on bail. The main cause of the slowness in handling foreign-born Bolshevist agitators, according to the present immigration officials, is the fact that there is no communication between this country and Soviet Russia. They have not been deported to other sections of Russia, because of danger that their cases would be handled summarily if they fell into the hands of anti-Bolshevist Russians.

While the Congressional Committee began its investigation, the Grand Juries of the Bronx and New York were both hearing testimony on the anarchist and Bolshevist plots in this city. Mrs. Rose Pastor Stokes, the wealthy radical speaker, who is out on bail pending an appeal from her conviction for seditious activities for which she received a ten-year sentence in Kansas City, was a witness before the Grand Jury.

Several checks signed by Mrs. Stokes were found, it was reported, in the raids of the Lusk Committee on Communist headquarters two weeks ago. Assistant District Attorney Alexander I. Rorke refused to discuss the number or amount of the checks or the use for which they were intended. Charles Recht, counsel for Mrs. Stokes, said that the report that she had contributed $11,000 to radical publications was ridiculous.

Seek Communist Backers.

Assistant District Attorney Rorke said that he had issued subpoenas for a number of persons who might be able to throw light on the sources of income of the Communist Party and other radical organizations.

Ivan Novikoff, a printer, was arrested yesterday at his home, at 1,382 College Avenue, the Bronx, on a warrant issued by United States Immigration Commissioner Caminetti and taken to Ellis Island, to be held for deportation. He is charged with being a member of the Executive Committee of the Union of Russian Workers of America and Canada, which published circulars during the steel strike calling for the overthrow of this Government and asking all workers to join in a general strike to compel the Government to lift the blockade on Soviet Russia.

Miss Sonia Ginsberg of 1,233 Forty-first Street, Brooklyn, who was dismissed from her position in the public schools for belonging to the Communist Party, said yesterday that she did not mean to make a fight to retain her position.

Deputy Attorney General Samuel A. Berger questioned eight other teachers in the public schools of this city at his office at 51 Chambers Street yesterday. He said that they were all under suspicion of belonging to the Communist Party.

At a meeting of the Central Federated Union, held last night at the Labor Temple, Eighty-fourth Street, near Third Avenue, a statement of Associate Superintendent Tildsley was read, in which he recommends that a permanent license for Benjamin Harrow, a teacher in De Witt Clinton High School, be refused because he had recommended for reading by his boys an article on Bolshevism.

Get Jail Terms for Raising "Irish Parliament" Fund

BELFAST, Nov. 21 (Associated Press).—In the Crimes Court of Armagh today, Edward Donnelly, Sinn Fein organizer for Ulster; Edward Hughes, a farmer, and William O'Brien, a Galway University professor, all charged with unlawful assembly at Tynan in October, and with soliciting funds for the Dail Errean (Irish Parliament) loan, created a scene by declaring that they did not recognize the authority of the Court.

The accused men were carried into the court. Donnelly said the Dail Errean was a legal body in the eyes of Irishmen, and the only body that had the moral right to legislate for or to rule the Irish people.

"Your authority," he added, "is that of a usurper, backed by the military, machine guns, tanks, and rifles."

Donnelly and O'Brien were each sentenced to three months' imprisonment, while Hughes received a two months' sentence.

POPE MAKES APPEAL FOR POOR CHILDREN

Orders Prayers and Collections on Dec. 28—Praises American Relief in Belgium.

ROME, Nov. 21.—The Pope has addressed an encyclical to the Catholic Episcopacy of the world on behalf of poor children, victims of the war. He says he hoped that once the frightful conflict was over conditions in the countries so cruelly tried, especially in Central Europe, would improve, thanks to the efforts of all good people, but that that hope, in a great measure, has been disappointed.

"From everywhere," says the encyclical, "we hear the pitiful echo of indescribable sufferings through lack of food and clothing. Those who suffer most are weak and poor children, who do not know about the bloody struggle. They represent the future generation, which will suffer terrible consequences."

The Pope declares he was comforted on hearing of the birth of a noble initiative to succor these children.

"I immediately praised the effort, giving it all of our support," he continues. "As in the past we addressed a charitable appeal in favor of the poor Belgian children, exhausted by hunger."

Here the Pontiff alludes to the work done by the American Commission for Relief in Belgium, adding:

"In that case our appeal was addressed to the great Republic of the United States and was answered by a large number of Catholics and charitable institutions with great benefit for those innocent children. Such a result encourages us today to address a similar appeal to the entire episcopacy of the Catholic world in behalf of the children of the suffering population of Central Europe.

"The approach of the severe season, of Christmas and of the Festival of Holy Innocents recalls the children to us with more tender and loving solicitude. The imminent Christmas period seems a propitious time to address ourselves in behalf of the children to the charity of all the faithful, to humanity, and to all of those who do not despair of the salvation of mankind.

"Therefore, we order all Bishops of the Catholic world to arrange in their respective dioceses on Dec. 28, the Festival of Holy Innocents, public prayers and collections for this purpose.

"What we order the Catholics to do we hope will be an example to others, to all of whom we address a paternal request. We are sure it will be well received.

"Notwithstanding continual requests for succor from all parts of the world, we wish to be the first to contribute with 100,000 lire."

'PUSSYFOOT' PARTLY BLIND.

Prohibitionist Has Lost Sight of Eye Hurt in London.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—Three specialists who examined today the eye of William E. ("Pussyfoot") Johnson, the American Anti-Saloon League campaigner, which was injured during a students' demonstration against him recently, found him unable to see with the affected eye.

They discovered, however, a hopeful sign in the fact that a strong electric light held in front of the eye, although unseen by the patient, caused pain, indicating that there was sensitiveness in the injured organ.

WOULDN'T DISCUSS IRELAND

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—The Morning Post, discussing the report that when Lord Grey accepted the post of Ambassador to the United States he made certain conditions as to Irish home rule, says:

"It would indeed be an unprecedented and unworthy attitude for an English Ambassador to ask his Government for a fragment of British sovereignty to be presented at the White House—on a charger. It is difficult to believe any Englishman would be so wanting in the sense of respect due to his own nation as to propose such means of propitiating a foreign country. Whatever may be the solution of what is called the Irish question, it is at all events a domestic question. It concerns the British nation and the British nation alone."

IRISH DRUG CLERK STRIKE.

Called for Saturday Evening—Bank Clerks Also Threaten Walkout.

DUBLIN, Nov. 21.—Chemists' assistants throughout Ireland are being called on to strike Saturday evening. They demand higher pay. Nearly 200 employes in Dublin are affected, as well as all the members of the union throughout Ireland—that is, about 75 per cent. of the chemists' assistants in the country.

Another unusual strike threatened in Ireland is one of bank clerks. Some time ago the clerks formed a union which the Directors refused to recognize. Unless the Directors give way now, all the union membership, which includes the majority of the clerks, may be called out.

Montenegrins Reported on Way to Albanian Port.

GERMANY GROPING FOR POLITICAL LIGHT

By CHARLES H. GRASTY.

BERLIN, Nov. 21, via Paris.—All those who in a democracy like America argue for a limitation suffrage and become irritated at the sight of the proletariat in action, should visit Germany and behold the ruin that followed the carrying out of undemocratic ideas to their logical conclusion. That for many years—indeed up to the very day of the launching of the great war—this method of committing the Government to the hands of "the fittest" was so highly efficient that it brought practical results unmatched and perhaps unattainable in any democracy cannot be denied. But the system led straight over the precipice into the abyss, and there the people who were perhaps the most efficient in industry in the world are struggling in darkness and helplessness today.

On the Governmental side they never before had any real responsibility, having always contented themselves with the oligarchy which relieved them of the worry and trouble of domestic and international politics, while it conferred upon them all the advantages and benefits of material progress and prosperity. When the war was ordered from above by those to whom the people had been accustomed to look for guidance in all such matters there never was a question about it. The masses obeyed according to their habit. They swallowed the reasons assigned, and permitted Berlin to work them up into a frenzy of false patriotism. They blindly accepted the assurance that only by sacrifices to the limit could the country be saved from the enemies who ringed it about.

In effect the credulity and political incapacity of the people are more disastrous than if they had fully shared in the wicked intent of the military gang which exploited them. Behind an industrious people that gang was able to shield itself while it prepared its aggressions. Now after the war in which Germany has been utterly crushed the Germans are wholly lacking in the necessary mental and moral resources to meet their situation. They are as ignorant of the science of self government as any tribe of African Hottentots. In America nearly every individual has in a greater or less degree a knowledge of politics. He forms his opinions and in time of emergency these individual opinions are aggregated into the public opinion which becomes the controlling force and dictates official action.

In Germany no such thing is possible. To begin with, individuals have no political knowledge, and even if they had no instrumentalities exist in Germany for putting individual opinions together in the form of public opinion. There has been no popular press, but only newspapers subsidized by various interests. The Parliament has been a mere debating society, and in like manner all other representative institutions have been spurious. This is the formula for the present political situation in Germany. By this formula is to be interpreted all the crimes and follies of the war, and the confusion, blundering, and failures that have followed the armistice.

It is the lack of political perception and sensibilities in Germany that has been mainly responsible for the delay in working out some practical method for peace on the basis of the defeat of Germany and the new conditions created thereby in the world. It is extremely difficult to approach a people who won't and cannot know what has happened. They know they are hungry and humiliated, but they have not yet realized the significance and meaning of Germany's attack on the world and its failure. The people at large have as yet no sense of realities. Such a system could not possibly produce statesmen who think and talk in terms the rest of the world can understand.

In my judgment there is no immediate peril of the return of militarism, but there is danger of the people being driven by cold and hunger into Spartacism and then and thence on into Bolshevism, which would make necessary a military occupation of the country by the Entente powers. I do not think occupation and control by Great Britain and America would be deeply resented in the present circumstances, but of course such occupation would be very difficult to put into effect.

In the meantime the present German Government is doing fairly well when the antecedent conditions are taken into account. In fact, the most encouraging thing I have found in Germany is that the Government has been able to hold on for many months; that it is probably stronger than at any previous time, and that it is apparently trying to play the game according to the rules laid down by the Entente. Three coalition parties, Majority Socialists, Centrists, and Democrats, have a good working majority in the National Assembly. The Ministry is composed of men of mediocre ability, except Noske, but they go on steadily, solidly, day to day. The Ministry is spoken of sneeringly by nearly all those whom one meets in Berlin, but as a matter of fact it is better than might be expected in a country where political imbecility is the rule.

BATTLE ON DUMPING BILL.

Proposed British Measure Under Heavy Fire.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—A storm of opposition has been raised by the Government's anti-dumping bill, and the Asquithian Liberals are determined to make it an issue. They see in it a chance of driving a wedge between the Liberal Wing of the Coalition and the rest of the Premier's supporters, and there is already talk of calling a meeting of Parliamentary Liberals, at which both the Coalition supporters and the opposition members would be present.

The Westminster Gazette calls the bill protection in disguise and declares that the attitude assumed toward it is the acid test of Liberalism."

The Westminster Gazette raises the cry of the country's need of cheap goods and is much afraid of reprisals. It says:

"A similar law would be passed in foreign countries, preventing British manufacturers from exporting at a lower price than they sell here and the whole business of cheap lines of foreign goods, which are promoted by British as well as by foreign exporters, would be extinguished. So far as the United Kingdom is concerned, there could be no greater encouragement."

England, it asserts, would become under such a system the "least favored nation." The Star declares that the bill will be fought by labor as well as Liberals and stigmatizes it as the "worst bill ever brought into Westminster." It goes on: "It is brazen and brutal protection designed to rob the consumer and fill the pockets of profit."

The Evening Standard styles the bill "an apple of discord," but calls for its consideration without prejudice. It doubts whether the rank and file of labor, whatever leaders may do, will oppose the measure, which increases employment. It contends "the whole question must be looked at, not from the fetich point of view of the free traders and protectionists before the war." It adds:

"We need a flexible system which can be adjusted to the existing circumstances from time to time, and if we can get that without undue restraint of trade or by fostering monopolies or putting ourselves into the hands of a numerous bureaucracy, so much the better."

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 21.—Nearly 1,000 delegates assembled in this city tonight to be present tomorrow at the opening of a convention called to form a national labor party. The delegates were summoned by John Fitzpatrick, President of the Chicago Federation of Labor, and his associates in the labor movement in the Middle West, and without the approval of Samuel Gompers and the American Federation of Labor.

Composed of labor leaders, co-operative association sponsors, representatives of farmers' organizations, and the Non-Partisan League, its aim is the downfall of the Democratic and Republican parties in an effort to secure political control of the country.

Although Gompers has protested against the forming of a Labor party, Fitzpatrick and others who have been watching the Labor party of England are determined to attempt a similar organization here.

Fitzpatrick addressed a meeting of the Farmers National Council at the Morrison Hotel, in an effort to obtain the aid of the entire body of farmers, but he found little encouragement.

Benjamin J. Marsh, Secretary of the Farmers Council, who telegraphed to Gompers yesterday asking him to make an address at one of the sessions, received an answer that Gompers would not appear because he heard that the farmers had thrown their support to the labor party. Marsh denied that the farmers were supporting the movement as a body, and said they would not do so.

Max Hays of Cleveland, Ohio, who is to open the convention as Temporary Chairman, said that the party would probably adopt a platform embracing public ownership of railroads and most of the other big industries.

Governor Lynn J. Frazier of North Dakota is to be one of the speakers at the convention, which is to last a week. It is said that he is to be indorsed for President, with Fitzpatrick or Duncan McDonald for Governor of Illinois, either at this convention or another one to be held in the Spring.

WOOD TO ANNOUNCE HIS CANDIDACY SOON

MAY RESIGN FROM THE ARMY

General Himself Declines to Affirm or Deny Report—Busy Keeping Order in Steel Strike Zone.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 21.—The formal announcement of the candidacy of Major Gen. Leonard Wood for the Republican nomination for President of the United States may be expected within the next few weeks. This statement was made today by several close personal friends of General Wood. With the announcement it is believed General Wood will submit his resignation to the War Department.

When General Wood was seen this afternoon at his office in the headquarters of the Central Department and asked to verify this statement, he asked to be excused from making any comment at this time.

"I have nothing to say regarding my possible resignation from the army nor the other matter to which you refer," he said, pointing to a pile of telegrams from various parts of his strike-ridden district.

"Just at this present time," added General Wood, referring to the industrial situation in the Central Department, "I have a job to do and I am engaged, to the best of my ability, in doing it. My main business today is to support the Government of the United States with all my power to protect life and property and to maintain the law whenever the Federal forces in this department are called for such purposes."

While no statement has been made to date by General Wood to indicate the platform on which he will go before the country, there is no doubt concerning certain important features of his program. These have been indicated in his talks with friends and at meetings where he has spoken. At a recent small gathering General Wood said:

"The financial burden of the war is one of the great vital problems before our country that we must face in a square and straightforward way. I personally believe that this burden must be spread over a much greater period than we have previously considered to be necessary—over a couple of generations if necessary. If something of this kind is not done we shall have in this country a burden of taxation that will smother business, almost make impossible new enterprises, and which will make industrial slackers of great estates."

Concerning the labor and capital problem, General Wood has repeatedly expressed himself.

"The closest possible contact and the fullest understanding," he said in a recent talk to college men, "should be maintained between the employer and employe. We must do all we can to improve the worker's living conditions, to make his surroundings decent and attractive to himself and family. He should receive a wage that not only permits him to keep body and soul together, but enable him to lay by something for the future. But if these conditions are to be obtained and maintained, labor must recognize that high wages can only be maintained under conditions of high production and high efficiency. Capital must be paid in accordance with the risk of the enterprise."

One of the reasons why General Wood has not made any move to date to sever himself from the army, it was said today, is due to the industrial situation in his department. Not until that situation is cleared up and it is definitely established that the power of the Federal Government is no longer necessary in maintaining law and order do General Wood's friends expect him to make any move that would relieve him from responsibility in any situation due to strikes or otherwise.

NEED OUR AID IN AUSTRIA.

Allies' Resources Not Adequate, Says British Agent.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—Sir William Goode has returned to London to report to the Government concerning his work in Austria as British representative on the allied Reparations Commission. "If it had not been for magnificent services rendered without advertising, Vienna would have starved long ago, quite apart from any question of money," said Sir William today. He added that Philip Gibbs in recent special articles had pictured the suffering and general condition of the city with fidelity. He went on, "The British Relief Committee is making every effort to arrange for the immediate dispatch to Vienna of 30,000 tons of food now at Trieste.

Latest advices are that owing to a heavy snow fall railway traffic between Vienna and Triest is extremely uncertain, which makes the position even more critical. It is quite impossible for the European Allies by themselves to do anything which would be at all likely to be effective as the question is so much larger than anything which could be met by any suggestion of voluntary relief, and even larger than the financial resources of this country, France and Italy can meet.

"We must look to the United States for co-operation in a comprehensive plan if the problem of Austria is to be faced. This matter is now being discussed by the powers. It is an economic problem, not a charitable problem."

Ex-Bishop Kinsman to be Catholic.

Special to The New York Times.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 21.—Former Bishop Frederick J. Kinsman of Wilmington, who recently resigned from the Episcopal Church because he could not reconcile its teachings regarding ordination and the sacraments with his own, is about to enter St. Mary's Catholic Seminary here to study for the priesthood. It is understood that the Bishop was particularly anxious to enter the seminary here, so as to be near Cardinal Gibbons.

AWARD PIERMEN A WAGE INCREASE

CHECKERS TO GET $6 A DAY

Commission Finds Living Cost Unchanged—Coastwise Workers' Case to Come Up Later.

Holding that the cost of living had not shown a decrease since the tentative award in October and that under the terms of that award this condition justified a re-opening of the case, the National Adjustment Commission of the United States Shipping Board yesterday afternoon rendered a decision for an increase in wages to deep sea longshoremen from 70 cents an hour to 80 cents, and from $1.10 an hour for overtime to $1.20, effective on Dec. 1. This is an increase of 22½ per cent. over the scale of wages in force up to Oct. 1, last. The longshoremen demanded $1 an hour and $2 overtime.

Checkers are to get an increase of 50 cents a day, making their wage now $6 a day. The case of the coastwise longshoremen, of whom there are about 6,000 in this port, will be taken up in Washington on Dec. 5.

The decision of the Commission was reached at an executive session, following a public hearing in the Produce Exchange Building yesterday morning, at which several witnesses told of the continued high cost of living.

The October award of the Commission of 70 cents and $1.10 furnished the cause for the strike of the longshoremen, which ran for four weeks. The men who expressed themselves last night said they were pleased with the new award and thought there would be no further trouble. The rate of wages rung until Oct. 1, 1920. John F. Riley, President of the New York District Council, said that he thought the men would be satisfied.

T. V. O'Connor and Joseph Ryan, President and Vice President, respectively, of the International Longshoremen's Association, who represent the longshoremen on the Commission, voted for 85 cents an hour and $1.25 for overtime. Professor William Z. Ripley, Chairman, voted with the two members representing the steamship interests, and Mr. O'Connor afterward moved to make the award unanimous. Frederick Toppin, Vice President of the International Mercantile Marine, and Oakley Wood are representatives of the steamship interests on the Commission.

Twenty locals in this port had accredited representatives present at yesterday's meeting and there were also delegates from Hampton Roads, Boston and Baltimore. The steamship interests were represented by Clement H. Betts of Funch-Edye & Co., who declared that since the strike the longshoremen had not given the steamship companies a square deal in the way of efficiency. The cost of loading a ship is from $1.50 to $2 a ton, while in 1914 it was 35 cents a ton, he said.

PREDICTS PRESIDENCY FOR CLEMENCEAU

Viviani Says He Will Be Chosen in January—Longuet Fears Socialist Strikes.

PARIS, Nov. 21.—Interviewed by a representative of the newspaper Oeuvre relative to the political situation, René Viviani, former Premier, has stated that Premier Clemenceau will remain in his present office until January and then will become President of the republic. M. Viviani is quoted as denying any intention to become a candidate for President of the Chamber of Deputies in opposition to Paul Deschanel.

Jean Longuet, leader of the extreme wing of the Socialist Party, denies that his organization is planning radical action as a result of the recent elections.

"The Socialist Party does not intend to start a revolution," he said to The Associated Press. "The revolution was a scarecrow by which our adversaries tried to stampede voters. As a result of the new system followed in the elections, they robbed us of a great many seats in the Chamber of Deputies, but did not stampede the voters. We polled 1,700,000 votes, an increase of 600,000 over the number cast in 1914."

M. Longuet said that the situation was serious, however, because "workingmen defeated at the polls through the curious working of a new electoral law would naturally turn to direct action such as strikes to accomplish their end."

REDUCTION OF SPACE URGED

Today 7 columns of advertisements are omitted from The New York Times and 136 columns printed.

By preference, and also because of the scarcity of news print paper, The New York Times limits the number of pages published in its daily edition. Owing to the demand for advertising space, it is frequently impossible to include all the announcements offered for a given day.

Restriction of space by all advertisers, especially those wishing full pages, is urged.

REDS SEEK TO HIDE TRUTH ABOUT RUSSIA

WANT PEACE WITH ENGLAND

Every One Else Would Have to Follow Suit, Bolshevist Envoy to Dorpat Says.

By WALTER DURANTY.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

DORPAT, Nov. 20.—"The Soviet peace terms are precisely made public in the English Parliament by Malone," said the Soviet representative Litvinoff. "Neither here nor elsewhere am I instructed to set forward other conditions. We have put our cards on the table, and the whole world knows exactly where we stand."

He said this yesterday afternoon in the course of an hour's interview with Mynheer Vandenbosch, for the last seven years Dutch Consul at Reval, who has authorized me to telegraph a report of the interview to America. Vandenbosch talks Russian like a native. He came to Dorpat to see Litvinoff, with the object of obtaining the release of ten Dutch citizens, business men and one clergyman, still detained in Soviet Russia.

At first the conversation was rather formal, but as Vandenbosch expressed it, "when these Russians are talking their own language they are apt to let their tongues run away with them. As the discussion proceeded Litvinoff became animated and talked very freely, almost intimately. He strikes me as generally sincere, but somewhat of a visionary, and so wholly obsessed by belief in his own convictions as to be quite unable to appreciate the opposite viewpoint."

I may add that as a typical shrewd Dutch business man Vandenbosch himself has little use for Bolshevist doctrines entirely aside from their deplorable practical results in Russia and elsewhere. Regarding Dutchmen in Russia Litvinoff declared they were in Moscow under surveillance, but free to move about at will in the city and live in their own homes. They were in good health and adequately fed—one of his companions, Omblia, asserts that food conditions in Moscow have greatly improved. The Soviet Government, however, refuses to allow them to leave the country.

Fears Propaganda in Russia.

When Vandenbosch observed that the Soviet's offering to release prisoners was not in exchange for Russians held outside Litvinoff answered somewhat naively:

"Yes, but that is different. Our prisoners have been shut up, whereas in your country they are allowed to go about and see things. We cannot have them going out and making propaganda against us."

This dread of the truth about Russia reaching the outer world is deeply characteristic of the Soviet attitude in general and of Litvinoff's in particular.

He refuses to receive members of the American press here, saying: "If there were any 'good' newspapers represented, like the London Daily Herald or Manchester Guardian, it would be different. I am willing to talk with them."

Together with correspondents of The Associated Press and Chicago Daily News and Tribune, I have applied for permission to enter Russia. Litvinoff has not yet replied, but told Vandenbosch categorically that no one who was not friendly would be allowed to enter, so I have little doubt that the answer will be a refusal. That this is the case would seem materially to discount if not discredit all eyewitness statements regarding Russia that have appeared to date.

The Soviet army, Litvinoff said, was stronger than ever, which appears to be more or less true, though from what I have seen of muddle and lack of co-operation between the various parties in the Baltic—to say nothing of the Denikin-Ukraine situation—it seems as though the weakness of the opposition were the chief factor in the Soviet strength and that a small but homogeneous and properly equipped force would make short work of the revolutionary levies.

Litvinoff declared that he came out primarily to discuss an exchange of prisoners, but hoped that peace negotiations would also ensue. He said he was ready and willing to talk peace either with the Baltic States, White Russians, or Entente, and asked Vandenbosch—who is returning to Holland immediately—to get in touch with the White Russians in Scandinavia and urge them to open discussion with him (Litvinoff) during the two weeks he expected to spend in Copenhagen.

He declared that up to yesterday afternoon no peace discussion had taken place here—which concurs with a statement last night by the Esthonian Foreign Minister Piip—but Vandenbosch got a strong impression that the Soviet desired peace exceedingly. Indeed, Litvinoff's companions, who were also present, went so far as to express the opinion that England would make peace with the Soviet in the next few weeks. They spoke with great optimism and added that if England made peace every one else would have to follow suit.

One Profession Insincere.

Litvinoff declared that the Soviet was willing to accept the present territorial status quo in Russia—that is, that the various parties should be left in free and independent possession of the territories they now are holding. Here, and here only throughout the conversation it appeared, to Vandenbosch that the Soviet envoy showed insincerity and attempted to evade discussion.

Litvinoff expressed the wish to visit Holland with the nominal object of seeing how the Russians interned there were being treated and try to arrange their return home. What he clearly wishes is to get in touch with the outer world as much as possible and establish relations with the view of furthering peace negotiations in whatever way that offers.

Asked why if the Soviets were so inspired by humanitarian motives—this was always the reason he gave for the desire to make peace—they didn't stop the terror, Litvinoff replied that they were compelled to continue their own severity by the brutality of their opponents, whose cruelty was greater still.

Obviously, two wrongs do not make a right, but the argument has some value, as there undoubtedly have been regrettably harsh cases of reprisals on the part of the White Russians. On the other hand, the Soviets have a trick of leaving commissaries as spies behind them in towns they evacuate to report on the behavior of the inhabitants and later stir up trouble against the Whites. Thus, I was informed by a British officer in Yudenitch's army that when they occupied Gatchina they discovered a number of such persons, including one woman.

The testimony against them was unimpeachable—indeed they all admitted their guilt before execution—but the witnesses against them only gave information with the utmost reluctance and declared their lives and the lives of their relations would be forfeited if the Soviet learned their identity.

As the upshot of the whole conversation Vandenbosch was left with the impression that the Soviet was now making a supreme effort to throw dust in the eyes of the world and make a peace that would guarantee its position before enough of the truth was known to render it impossible.

Special to The New York Times.

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 21.—Robert O'Connor, United States District Attorney; Chief Inspector Connell of the Department of Justice, and Post Office Inspectors began today an investigation into the activities of local sympathizers of Eamonn de Valera, President of the so-called "Irish Republic," whose attempt to speak here in the inerest of the Sinn Fein movement was blocked by the refusal of the owners of the Shrine Auditorium to permit the use of the hall for the meeting Wednesday night.

Post Office Inspectors and Federal investigators were asked to trace the origin of letters, postcards and telephone calls sent to Los Angeles clergymen and other citizens who expressed their disapproval of de Valera's visit. The letters and postcards are of a scurrilous nature, and their senders are liable to prosecution for misuse of the mails. The telephone numbers from which some calls were made have been ascertained.

Letts and Lithuanians Join Esthonians in Invitation to a Peace Conference.

DEC. 1 THE DATE PROPOSED

Omsk Reported Half Destroyed by Bombardment—Clash Between Czechs and Semenoff.

DORPAT, Nov. 20 (Associated Press).—Letvia and Lithuania have definitely decided to join Esthonia in inviting the Russian Bolsheviki to send a delegation to Dorpat to begin peace negotiations, it was announced after the final adjournment this evening of the Baltic States Conference with Bolshevist representatives over the exchange of prisoners.

The invitation to the Soviet Government will specify Dec. 1 as the date for the proposed conference, the announcement stated.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—Moscow is surrounded by insurgents, and the Bolsheviki regard the rebellion as of capital importance, according to a Copenhagen dispatch quoting Helsingfors advices, which the Exchange Telegraph Company is today circulating with reserve. The dispatch states that Tomburg, in the Urals, has been sacked by a hostile army of 55,000 men.

Omsk Reported Half Destroyed.

NOVO NIKOLAEVSK, Nov. 17, (Associated Press.)—The Bolsheviki today bombarded Omsk for several hours from the opposite bank of the Irtish River. Between the periods of the bombardment, fires broke out in the town, which is reported to have been half destroyed.

General Janin with the Czech troops is operating to the eastward tonight. There is an indefinite report here that General Semenoff attempted to move his troops toward Irkutsk from Chita, but was driven off by the Czechs.

Col. Ward Says One Power Promised Intervention for Concessions.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Nov. 21.—Colonel John Ward, M. P., in a speech today said that while he was in Omsk he was a sort of amateur ambassador, and Admiral Kolchak and his council had such confidence in him that they put before him documents that were "simply astounding."

"To my own knowledge," Colonel Ward proceeded, "one power was prepared to undertake the task of securing order in Russia if she were only given absolute possession of fifty miles square of a particular region in the North Ural territory. She even promised that if she could get hold of another concession which involved merely a small part of Siberia she would undertake to frank the entire debt of Russia, old and new."

Russian officers will replace the Galician officers, and Galicians will be transferred to another sector on the front of the volunteer army.

Hylan for a parade of Jewish veterans of the European, Spanish American, and civil wars. The parade will start early in the afternoon at Rutgers Square, and will disband at Carnegie Hall, where a mass protest meeting will be held, at which prominent persons will make addresses.

DANSEY BOY'S BODY FOUND NEAR HOME

CLOTHING A FEW FEET AWAY

"MURDER," SAYS CORONER

Evidence, He Declares, Shows That Baby Could Not Have Wandered to the Place Unnoticed.

Special to The New York Times.

HAMMONTON, N. J., Nov. 21.—The body of Billy Dansey, the 3-year-old boy who vanished so mysteriously on Oct. 8, was found this afternoon near here.

The nation-wide search for the child believed to have been kidnapped ended at 3 o'clock, when George Eckhardt of Hammonton stumbled across a little skeleton in a clump of scrub pine 300 feet back of the limits of the farm of George Coons, three miles south from the home of Mr. and Mrs. Hercules Dansey, the lad's parents.

Scattered about the ground over a radius of fifty feet Eckhardt found the boy's clothing. Both the Hammonton authorities and Prosecutor Edmund C. Gaskil are convinced that the little fellow was stripped of his attire, attacked and then killed, although there were no fractures of the skull or other bones.

The spot where the skeleton was found was 300 yards from the nearest house, that of Coons. To have wandered to this location, Billy first must have passed through several farms and close to sections where people were always around. There are no roads or paths to the spot. Fifty feet from the body Eckhardt found the small brown sweater Billy had worn when he disappeared. Five feet to the right of this was the little baseball cap the child wore when last seen. About six feet from the skeleton were his blue rompers, while the rest of his attire was close by. The skeleton was partly covered by leaves as they had fallen, and been drifted around by the winds. There had been no effort at concealment apparently, other than that offered by the bushy scrub pine and the swampy undergrowth.

Thinks Child Was Murdered.

Dr. Charles Cunningham, County Coroner, who was summoned from Hammonton by Eckhardt, after making a survey of the remains and the condition of the clothing, said he was convinced that the boy had been lured back into the woods away from his home and then taken by a circuitous route to the spot where he was killed. It is Dr. Cunningham's further conviction that the murder occurred on the same day or night of the boy's disappearance.

The clothing of the boy was identified first by Charles White, father of Charlie White, Jr., little playmate of Billy Dansey. White's farm adjoins that of the Danseys. In letters that had been received by Prosecutor Gaskill and the police, "Kidnapper" had written that Billy had been mistaken for Charlie, whose father is wealthy.

Eckhardt had been tramping through the woods with his dogs after rabbits this afternoon. He was starting on a final beat back through the scrub pine when his dogs took up a trail that led deep into the brush. Suddenly they stopped and started to bark.

Believing they had caught a rabbit, Eckhardt hurried to the spot. He found them barking around a human skeleton. He brushed away the leaves that partly covered the bones and saw that they were those of a child. Eckhardt had been one of the many citizens of Hammonton who had helped in the quest for Billy Dansey, and he was sure he had ended the long search the instant he saw the size of the skeleton. He glanced around through the brush and found the clothing which he recognized by the descriptions that had been given out during the search.

News Spreads in Hammonton.

Eckhardt hurried to Hammonton and brought Dr. Cunningham back with him. Other citizens were summoned, and soon the news of the find went through the town until there were hundreds hurrying toward the spot. After making an examination Dr. Cunningham had a hundred-foot section roped off and placed Officer Joseph Prosper of Hammonton in charge.

He took the skeleton and clothing back to Hammonton and to the morgue of John Prosch, where he made closer examination of the remains. He could detect no evidences of any fractures about the skull or other bones.

"Everything points to deliberate murder," Coroner Cunningham said after the examination. "The child could not have toddled along over several farms and into the woods where the remains were found without being seen by many people about the farms. I am convinced that he was taken to the spot from some other direction after being lured into the dahlia field to the east of the Dansey farm.

"The fact that the clothing was stripped from the body and the way it was scattered around shows the work of a murderer. The bones were stripped clean of flesh by vultures and animals, so that I could not observe marks of violence. The bones lay out straight in their normal position."

Prosecutor Gaskill was not notified until 6:30 o'clock tonight of the finding of the body. He sent J. P. Wilson, his chief of detectives, to the spot at 8 o'clock and started a probe by which he hopes to bring the murderer to justice.

"It will be a hard matter to secure clues, because of the time that elapsed since the murder was evidently accomplished. Bloodhounds would not assist us now, because the scent is old, but we shall use every available means to bring about the capture of the murderer. There is certainly very convincing proof that the boy was killed and we shall proceed on this theory," said Mr. Gaskill.

"They Murdered Him," Cried Mother.

There was a pathetic scene at the home of the parents of the boy tonight when the news was broken to the father and mother that the body of the little boy had been found. They were not informed that the authorities were convinced that the boy had been murdered, as it was felt that the shock might prove fatal to the mother.

"My poor boy. They've murdered him," exclaimed the overwrought woman when the news was broken to her. She then became hysterical and a physician was summoned to attend her.

Later neighbors unfolded the story of the finding of the body to the father, Hercules Dansey. He bore up bravely under the strain and accompanied friends to the Morgue where he identified the clothing as that worn by "Billy" on the day he disappeared from home. He did not see the skeleton.

BOTH TEAMS IN GOOD TRIM

All Regulars Available for Contest—Fair Weather and Dry Field Are the Overnight Predictions.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Nov. 21.—This city is congested tonight with the greatest crowd which has ever assembled here on the eve of a Harvard-Yale football battle. In every hotel, where all the reservations were taken weeks ago, impatient chattering crowds of visitors are fighting their way to get the ear of the room clerks in the hopeless search for a place to sleep. Many of the hotels are placing cots in the rooms. The price of rooms has gone soaring, but the hotel people say they are not profiteering. They have boosted the cost of a single room to the price of a double room in order to force those guests who have been fortunate enough to have single reservations to take in some of the homeless ones.

In the long stretch of years that Harvard and Yale have been waging gridiron warfare the interest in the game has never been at such a high pitch. There is no speculating in tickets here, for the simple reason that there are no tickets with which to speculate. Harvard men who were unable to get their usual allotments are offering as high as $50 a pair for seats, but they are not to be had. The ticket situation is desperate, for the supply of 49,000 tickets does not begin to meet the eleventh hour demand. Thousands of men have flocked to the Hub hoping that their influential Boston friends could pry some seats from somewhere, but these same thousands are going to be disappointed.

The larger hotels, in order to satisfy the demand for accommodations, have engaged all the available rooms in the hotels in nearby cities. The Copley Plaza is caring for many of its patrons in hotels as far away as Worcester. The last big crowd Boston entertained was here to see the parade of the Yankee Division last April, but even that gathering did not compare with the hosts of Harvard and Yale graduates who have come tonight to see the clash between the football elevens of John Harvard and Eli Yale.

Rival Teams in Seclusion.

Far from this madding crowd the Harvard and Yale elevens are resting tonight. The Yale players, at the Belmont Springs Country Club, have not been thinking much about football. A number of friends or relatives of the players were at the club tonight and there were dancing and music. In fact, everything was done to keep the men in good spirits. The subject of football was taboo. The dancing didn't last long and the football players were in bed at 10:30 o'clock.

Harvard palyers are tucked away in the quiet Country Club at Manchester-by-the-Sea, where they are out of the reach of everybody but their relatives and the coaches. The Harvard squad enjoyed itself with music until bedtime. Trainers Johnny Mack of Yale and Pooch Donovan of Harvard confined the physical exercise of the players to brisk hikes over the country roads.

The Yale players are in tip-top shape with the exception of Thorne Murphy, the brilliant back field player, whose great work was suddenly halted when his left ankle was wrenched in the game at New Haven against Boston College. Everybody has a lot of sympathy for young Murphy. This is the last football game of his college career, and if he does not get into tomorrow's game he will be graduated next June without having won his football letter. It has been six weeks of mental anguish for Murphy, hobbling around the Yale bowl on crutches. It is pretty certain, however, that Murphy will get into the game tomorrow to try for a field goal if the circumstances warrant it. Out in the stadium this morning, when the Yale team were familiarizing themselves with the tricky air currents of the amphitheatre, Murphy tried his kicking foot, and his aim was true and he booted several over the goal posts.

The picturesque figure of the Yale players when they came to Cambridge this morning for their final visit before the big battle was John Timothy Callahan, the Eli Captain.

Allen Probably Will Start.

The only position of doubt on the Yale eleven is right end. Allen probably will start the game, because of his defensive work, but Robinson will be able to take his place at the first sign of a renewal of Allen's old injury. Jack Desmond's leg is in such bad shape that he will be unable to start at left end for Harvard, and Phinney will start the game. Arnold Horween will start the game for the Crimson at full back.

Bostonians are pretty confident that Harvard is going to win. They pin this belief on the fact that the Crimson plays a more modern game than the Blue. The betting today made Harvard favorite at 10 to 7, and tonight there were many wagers placed at 10 to 8. The Harvard followers argue that the Crimson had not found itself in the tie game with Princeton, and will be a much stronger aggregation when it faces Yale tomorrow.

The conservative Harvard men, however, are whispering about to beware of the Bulldog. The sting of the Princeton defeat has left its mark on the Yale team, and when Captain Callahan's eleven faces Harvard in the Stadium it is going to be a desperate, fighting aggregation. Yale will stick to old-fashioned football. It will try to hammer and batter the Harvard eleven into submission by sheer brawn. Yale men tonight are glad to take the short end of the bets, because they believe that this Eli team has the aggressiveness and power to overcome what it lacks in a wide-open attack.

Yale will try to crack open the Crimson line from the start, with Bob Lay at the head of the attack, occupying the same battering ram position of interference for the runner which Tack Hardwick and Bradlee occupied in Harvard's driving attack a few seasons ago. Lay is expected to be an important figure in Yale's drive tomorrow.

Harvard Relies on Casey.

The Elis figure that if they can stop Eddie Casey, Harvard's elusive half back, that they can win the game. Casey will not weigh much more than 150 pounds when he goes into the game tomorrow afternoon. He doesn't look like a dangerous player, with his white face and thin wiry body. Yet in this flash from Natick, Harvard pins its hope. Casey is one of the best backs of the year. He is playing his last game for the Crimson and wants to wind up his football career in a blaze of glory.

With a dry field tomorrow and the fair weather which has been promised, it looks as if the field would be in excellent shape. Yale men expect to see great feats performed by Fido Kempton, the Yale quarter back. Here are the two players who should furnish the thrills—Casey for Harvard and Kempton for Yale. The eyes of 50,000 spectators will be riveted on these two men when the old rivals line up on the chalk marked battlefield.

It is sure to be a memorable game. It is the big struggle for which both elevens have been pointed. There have been weeks of hard, bitter training to get the players in shape for the clash.

With the blast of Referee Bill Langford's whistle tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock, a pigskin chase will get under way which football men expect will go down in football lore as one of the bitterest battles ever waged by the old rivals of Cambridge and New Haven.

ELIS PRACTICE AT STADIUM.

Special to The New York Times.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 21.—The Yale team worked out in the Harvard Stadium this afternoon, and, presenting the same lineup that started the game with Princeton a week ago, did some fast work on the splendid stadium footing. Dr. Sharpe declared tonight that he is more convinced than ever that Allen is the man to remain at right end, but he has some misgiving that this player's shoulder will bother him, and, in consequence, Robinson will be kept in readiness for a possible early entry. The Yale coaches did not disguise their satisfaction over the condition of their eleven and the Blue camp is very confident tonight.

The Harvard team did no work at all today. In the morning the players were obliged to make the trip back to Cambridge in order to attend their classes, but they were all back at the Essex County Club early in the afternoon. Coach Fisher ran the team through plays, although no one was in football togs, and this evening the entire squad sat through a long lecture on plays and instruction in generalship.

After dinner tonight Coach Fisher made his announcement of the Crimson's lineup. He has decided not to start Jack Desmond at right end, and this means that Steele will be shifted from the left wing to the right, and Phinney will start at left end, where he has been all the week. Ralph Horween is sure to get into the going early if Harvard's rushing is not productive of a touchdown. Desmond's entry will come when Harvard is in particular need of extra line power.

FOOTBALL REACHES ITS CLIMAX TODAY

Yale to Meet Harvard in East, While Ohio State Plays Illinois in West.

This is the day on which a majority of the football coaches and college students of America join in one mighty chorus to the effect that "If we can win this one, the rest of the season doesn't matter." The sentiment applies perhaps least of all to the titanic Blue-Crimson struggle in the Cambridge Stadium, for both Yale and Harvard have already experienced an unfortunate encounter with the claws of the Princeton Tiger, whose significance cannot well be overlooked. Yet, even here, there is an atmosphere of "this first of all," a tradition of "sine qua non," a divine right to rule over the realm of football no matter how many of the common people may have proved an infinite superiority by actual achievement.

The time is past when a team could go through an entire season, pointing for only one game, without suffering some sort of reverse on the way. Too light a schedule results in an unfitness for supreme tests, while even the best elevens, facing one worthy opponent after another, necessarily fail to attain the same form in every battle, a fact which goes far toward explaining the apparently paradoxical condition of this year's records. Yet the old order still holds sway to the extent that, in most of the real homes of football fanaticism, a muttered "this is the day" may be heard, while freshmen are being instructed in the best and quickest ways of procuring much firewood in case of necessity.

Apart from the Eastern classic at Cambridge, football interest in general will turn largely in the direction of Columbus, Ohio, this afternoon, for the meeting of Illinois and Ohio State has an important effect not only on the Western conference title, but on the mythical championship of the entire country. This should be a wonderfully even battle, for while Chick Harley's magnificent team made the better record earlier in the season, it seems to have passed the top of its development, whereas Illinois is just rounding into its best form, and is believed by many to be the strongest combination of the year.

Syracuse in the West.

Two other games today have something of a national significance, for a fairly direct comparison between Eastern and Western strength will be possible after Syracuse and Indiana have met at Bloomington, and Rutgers and Northwestern decide their argument over at Harrison Field, Newark, this afternoon. In the former case, a victory for Indiana would be a severe blow to Eastern football, for Syracuse is admittedly as strong as any college that could be picked to represent this section, whereas the Westerners by no means top the heap in their own preserves. But unless Buck O'Neil's men are decidedly handicapped by their long journey, they should succeed in upholding the honor of the Empire State.

Rutgers also is more than a possible winner over Northwestern. The latter team has faced all the strongest opposition in the conference, and succeeded in holding both Michigan and Wisconsin to a single field goal as the margin of victory. Deprived of three of their stars through injuries for the greater part of the season, the Chicagoans have nevertheless done well, and appear today for the first time in their full strength. Foster Sanford's charges, on the other hand, have improved greatly since their disastrous affair with Syracuse at the Polo Grounds, and can also call upon a lineup which has been seldom available at one time.

Locally the big game today is on South Field, with Columbia and New York University settling an old rivalry. Neither of these teams has made an impressive showing this year, playing in-and-out football, with little evidence of steady development, but both are ready to fight to the limit today to prove at least a right to the city crown. Since Stevens defeated them both with ease, the spirit of this afternoon's opponents is more significant than the result could possibly be.

Across the river the unbeaten Hoboken Engineers finish their schedule with a game against Worcester Poly. Stevens should win, in which case the little institute will have the proud record of being the only eleven in the East with an absolutely clean slate, unmarred by either a defeat or a tie. Arguments in such a case are futile, for the Stevens team cannot seriously be considered among the top-notchers, since it wisely adhered to its own class throughout its schedule. Yet an honorable rank can scarcely be denied a combination which beat both Columbia and New York University, both of whom beat Amherst, which in turn defeated Wesleyan, conqueror of Williams, and admittedly one of the best of the New England colleges.

Lehigh vs. Lafayette.

But it is outside of New York that some of the most climatic football scenes are to be staged today. Down at South Bethlehem, for instance, Pennsylvanian meets Pennsylvanian in the historic battle of Lehigh and Lafayette. Both of these teams have enjoyed unusually successful seasons, and there is little to choose between them. Lehigh numbers Rutgers and Carnegie Tech among its victims, while Lafayette overwhelmed Cornell and practically played Princeton to a standstill. Lehigh also made things exceedingly interesting for Pittsburgh and Penn State, and Lafayette's only defeats were by Princeton and Pennsylvania. It looks like a toss-up, with Lehigh enjoying the advantage of the home field and the prestige of a victory on the occasion of their last meeting.

Another pair of traditional rivals are the little Quaker colleges, Swarthmore and Haverford, whose annual meeting takes places today on the grounds of the former, near Philadelphia.

Pittsburgh and Carnegie Tech decide another city championship when they meet this afternoon on Forbes Field, and, although the Panthers should add one more victory to their record, the result is by no means a foregone conclusion. Rochester versus Hamilton and Union versus Rensselaer Poly are two minor contests of significance in New York State, and the West Point cadets get a final test with Springfield for their crucial encounter with the Navy next Saturday. In addition to the Western games already mentioned, the meeting of Michigan and Minnesota and of Chicago and Wisconsin will be watched with more than ordinary interest.

STEVENS HAS CONFIDENCE.

Undefeated Hoboken Team Expects Easy Game with Worcester Today.

Coach Durborow of Stevens is rather skeptical about today's game with Worcester Tech, as too much confidence reigns in the Stevens camp. The Hoboken team finds it hard to realize that Worcester might prove a formidable foe, and can only see an easy victory against the Bay State eleven.

Instead of putting the men through the customary light signal drill yesterday the coach pulled a long workout on them, winding up with a full hour's scrimmage. Incidentally, this was the team's last practice, as today's game is the final one of the year.

This year's team is practically the same as the undefeated eleven that represented Stevens before the war, but the team will lose four stars due to their graduation. They are Captain Bloss, quarter back; Deghuee, half back; Swenson, end, and Heinen, guard.

Following today's game the student body will serenade the team at dusk with a parade and snake dance around the annual bonfire, after which they will pay their respects to the team at the reception and dance given by the Gear and Triangle Society.

OHIO STATE CLASHES WITH ILLINOIS TODAY

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Nov. 21.—On the eve of their titular clash for the Western Conference football honors both Ohio State and Illinois camps tonight rested confident that their respective elevens were geared to the highest notch of the year. With the arrival of the Illini here early today both elevens ran through light signal drills early in the afternoon.

The clash between Ohio State and Illinois—the "Yale-Harvard game of the West"—promises to be the most bitterly fought of the season. Ohio State will go into the titular clash with its record unblemished, while Illinois has suffered one defeat, having lost to Wisconsin. The Buckeyes triumphed over Michigan, 13 to 3, in their first conference game of the season, defeated Purdue, 20 to 0, and humbled Wisconsin 3 to 0, a week ago. Illinois defeated Michigan, 29 to 7, defeated Purdue, 14 to 7, and lost to Wisconsin, 14 to 10. Victories over Iowa, Chicago, and Minnesota also were scored by Illinois.

The elevens will go into the championship fray practically on even terms, although some critics believe the Buckeyes have a slight edge because of the prowess of Chick Harley, all-American half back and star of the Ohio squad. The game will mark the end of Harley's intercollegiate career, one of the most brilliant in Western gridiron history. Playing in twenty games during his three years of competition, Harley has scored 191 points for Ohio. He won four contests of major importance almost single-handed through his kicking ability and spectacular playing.

Record-breaking crowds are expected to witness the final games of the season. Every seat for the Ohio-Illinois game was sold several days ago. Offers as high as $75 have been made for a ticket. The clash between Wisconsin and Chicago is expected to draw 25,000, which will swell the gate receipts to $37,000. The Michigan-Minnesota combat also will attract a capacity crowd.

Light rains which fell intermittently through the early evening were forerunners of others promised early tomorrow, according to the weather man. The biggest crowd in Ohio State football history at home was assured days ago, and tonight desperate seekers of tickets were making ready to camp in front of the gates of Ohio Field in hopes of obtaining standing room after the ticket holders are seated. It is possible that 20,000 spectators may be accommodated, according to L. W. St. John, Director of Athletics, tonight.

With but little Illinois money in sight and the odds as high as 2 to 1 demanded on Ohio State, few wagers are being made. Local supporters demand at least even money.

Ohio State players tonight ran through their smoothest signal drill of the year. Coaches were loath to express themselves on the outcome of the game, but it was indicated that the prospects for a Buckeye victory were much brighter than at the beginning of the week. All of the Scarlet and Gray regulars will be started except Holtkamp, center.

The Illinois chances were no less favorable. The team was reported in the best of shape, except for Full Back Crangle, injured during the week, whose place will be taken by Captain Kopp.

Tomorrow's contest is the sixth between the two elevens since Ohio State was admitted to the Conference. Honors to date are even, each having won two and lost a pair, while the 1915 melee was a tie. Illinois has scored 50 points to 23 for Ohio State.

The probable line-up:

Myers	L. E.	Carney
Huffman	L. T.	Ingwersen
Pixley	L. G.	Mohr
Nemneck	C.	Depler
Trott	R. G.	Applegran
Spiers	R. T.	Petty
Flower	R. E.	Reichle
Stinchcomb	Q. B.	B. Fletcher
Harley	L. H. B.	R. Fletcher
Bliss	R. H. B.	Walquist
Willaman	F. B.	Kopp

Wisconsin regards Chicago as its most important foe of the season and, as a result of playing Ohio to a standstill a week ago, feels confident of a triumph over the Maroons. The teams appear to be evenly matched, although Chicago probably will have a slight margin in playing straight football. The Badgers, however, excel in the aerial game.

Minnesota is figured to defeat Michigan, although the Wolverines are determined to make amends for the showing in previous games.

Although Northwestern, Iowa, Purdue, and Indiana closed their conference schedules a week ago, these teams will be in action tomorrow. Iowa will take on Ames at Iowa City, Indiana will meet Syracuse at Bloomington, Northwestern will face Rutgers at Newark, N. J., while Purdue will have Notre Dame as its foe at Lafayette.

RENOWN ELEVEN WINS.

Despite the absence of the Prince of Wales, whose engagements for the day kept him elsewhere, the sailor soccer players from H. M. S. Renown, where he has his home while not ashore, put up a magnificent exhibition against the team of the Crescent Athletic Club on the latter's grounds at Bay Ridge yesterday, and came away with a one-sided victory by a score of 8 goals to 1. John Bull's sea dogs, made up of petty officers, gunners, and able seamen, gave ample evidence of their skill in the first period of play, establishing a lead of 3-1 by half time. Not satisfied with this, they piled on the agony in the second half by adding five more points.

The lineup:

Lang	G.	Graham
Hearn	R. B.	Rae
Edwards	F. B.	Swallow
Coulton	R. H.	O'Rourke
Merritt	C. H.	Maclennan
Drew	L. H.	Humphrey
White	O. R.	Titus
Young	I. R.	Waters
Salvage	C.	Van der Wolf
Hudson	I. L.	Tallent
Mundy	O. L.	Messinger

Goals—Hudson (4), Salvage (3), Young, H. M. S. Renown; Van der Wolf, Crescent A. C. Time of halves—45 minutes.

Referee—C. E. Creighton. Linesmen—A. Noel, H. M. S. Renown, and L. H. De Baum, Crescent A. C.

Special to The New York Times.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Nov. 21.—Coach Dobie sandwiched a long formation drill this afternoon between the hard scrimmage of yesterday and another which will take place tomorrow afternoon against the lusty Squad B eleven. Some time was used in defensive work, but most of the attention was given to perfecting the attacking formations used yesterday. Many changes were made in the team, and particularly in the backfield.

Dobie is forming a fast and powerful attacking machine, and is training several men in the duties of each place so that the team can not be disorganized by injuries to any of the backs.

Rawlings is able to take part in all the scrimmages now, and is being given an almost equal chance with Clark on the left side of the backfield formations. Though playing but little this year, on account of injuries, he has done fine work whenever given a chance. On the other hand, Alford, one of the best of the backs, has had to drop out of the squad for the season. This leaves Koehler an almost certainty for a place in the backfield, with the plebe, Waters, as his understudy. On the right flank of the backfield formation, Cruise, Watters, Haase, and Benoist are still fighting it out.

COLUMBIA READY FOR N.Y.U.

Traditional Football Rivals Will Meet at South Field Today.

Columbia and N. Y. U., traditional rivals for the championship of the city, will clash in their annual battle this afternoon on South Field. It will be the fifth meeting of the two since 1915, when football was restored at the Morningside institution after a lapse of ten years. Each team has won two games, Columbia coming out on top in 1915 by means of Howard Miller's drop kick from the 48-yard line and also capturing last year's tussle. The Violet eleven was the winner in 1916 and 1917. Today's game, unless it is a tie, will break the deadlock for a year at least.

Both teams contented themselves on the eve of the battle with a light signal drill, and a final lingering touch to both offense and defense. Columbia worked out under the eyes of a dozen coaches, most of them former stars who flocked to the standard at the eleventh hour. "Red" Lamberton and Billy Moore of Princeton also lined up with the Blue and White coaches, Lamberton paying particular attention to the punters. Both Eccles and Wesley received a long session at kicking, while Dawson, Telfer, Lamberton, and Dal Cochran, Captain of the 1917 eleven, looked on. Eccles finally received the assignment and will start at quarter back.

Charlie Shaw, the speedy left half back, will be the main absentee from the Columbia lineup. Johnstone, the midget of the squad, will take Shaw's place and will start his first game of the year. One other important shift was announced in the line last night. Hinch, whose retirement to the scrubs had been forecast, was returned to his position at right guard at the last minute. Scovil, who was to have filled his shoes, will be at his old post of right tackle, Modarelli will shift over to left tackle, and the veteran Tower will wear a blanket on the sidelines. The latter has been at left tackle practically all season, and his retirement caused much surprise last night.

N. Y. U. will have nearly its full strength for the important game. Jack Adams apparently will be fit enough to resume his post at left end. Jackson will take Galloon's place at quarter back, and Cohen will be at full back. Captain Howard Cann, whom Columbia will be watching with a sharp eye, mindful of other years, will start at right half back.

Interest is running high among both students and alumni. The Columbia undergraduates returned a N. Y. U. visit earlier in the week by marching to Ohio Field yesterday in a body and cheering the Blue and White freshmen, at the same time snatching up any wagers in sight. Even money was the quotation.

Not a reserved seat ticket could be purchased yesterday at either university. N. Y. U. has bought up the entire north stand, across the field from the Columbia cheering section. At least 12,000 people are expected to attend. General admission tickets will be on sale this afternoon before the game, which will begin at 2 o'clock.

The lineups probably will be as follows:

COLUMBIA.		N. Y. U.
Kennedy	L. E.	Adams
Modarelli	L. T.	Sultzer
Forsyth	L. G.	Horrigan
Kienninger	C.	Brin
Hinch	R. G.	MacComber
Scovil	R. T.	Storey
Weinstein	R. E.	Levin
Eccles	Q. B.	Jackson
Moszczinski	L. H. B.	Weinheimer
Johnstone	R. H. B.	Cann
Applebaum	F. B.	Cohen

SHIFTS IN N. Y. U. LINEUP.

Gargan Strengthens Eleven for Today's Battle with Columbia.

Yesterday's session on Ohio Field constituted the last practice of the season for the New York University football team. The Violet eleven had an hour of snappy signal drill in preparation for the game with Columbia today and then left the field to the freshmen for their contest with the Blue and White yearlings.

The general condition of the men is good and Coach Gargan expressed his satisfaction at the great strides the team has made this week. This is the last contest for the uptown eleven.

When the Violet team faces Columbia today there will be four changes in the lineup that opposed Stevens last week. Horrigan has been shifted from tackle to his old place at right guard, and Martindale will play the tackle position. Jackson, who won the fight for the quarter back place over Gilloon, will start there today. Another change in the back field is the replacing of Tyne by Cohen at full. The wings will be considerably stronger today, due to the presence of Adams at his old post at left end.

COLUMBIA CUBS VICTORS.

On a muddy field, which made playing difficult, the New York University freshman football team fell before the first year eleven from Columbia yesterday on Ohio Field, by a score of 20 to 0. The game was loosely played, and there was a great deal of fumbling.

Although the Violet team was defeated, it put up a fine game. To the Blue and White's two first downs, the New York freshmen made sixteen. The poor field made it hard for the Violet backs to get started, but they completed many forward passes while the downtown team completed none.

The lineup:

COLUMBIA, (20).		N. Y. U., (0).
Russell	L. E.	Throop
Mulligan	L. T.	Moberg
Walder	L. G.	Robertson
Wacker	C.	Snyder
Lovell	R. G.	Edgar
Meyer	R. T.	Hill
Jennings	R. E.	Stanard
Norris	Q. B.	Bates
Burtt	L. H. B.	Mitchell
Blundell	R. H. B.	Lynch
Pullyn	F. B.	Keiser

N. Y. U.	0	0	0	0— 0

Substitutions—N. Y. U.: Leahy for Bates, Galloway for Stanard, Bates for Galloway, Pollock for Hill.

LEHIGH ELEVEN ON EDGE.

Ready for Lafayette Game, Season's Climax for Both Teams.

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Nov. 21.—The Lehigh football team had its last practice of the year this afternoon, running through signal drill and kickoff formations on the field of Taylor Stadium, where tomorrow a record-breaking crowd will see Lehigh and Lafayette engage in what is, for both institutions, the climax of the season. Every seat in the stadium is sold.

This will be the fifty-third time these old friends and athletic rivals have met. The series began in 1884 and for some years they played two games a season. Of the totals, Lafayette has won twenty-five and Lehigh twenty-three, with four tie scores. Tomorrow Lehigh hopes to advance in totals; Lafayette plans to avoid a Lehigh record of four straight games. Since Tom Keady became coach, in 1912, Lehigh has won six out of seven games. Lafayette achieved a signal victory in 1915 when the supposedly superior Lehigh eleven was beaten, 35 to 6. The greatest Lehigh triumph was a 78 to 0 score in 1917.

The teams that will represent Lafayette and Lehigh are equally matched in weight. Lehigh's line is a trifle heavier, but Lafayette has something of an advantage of weight in the backfield. Both elevens have ends of exceptional calibre. Lehigh enjoys an advantage in having more reserve material, but this has proved a drawback in making it difficult to choose a 'Varsity personnel.

C. C. N. Y. FACULTY FAVORS FOOTBALL

C. C. N. Y. is practically assured of the resumption of football next Fall as a result of the first official conference held last night at the college among students, alumni, and Faculty. Dean Carleton F. Brownson was the principal speaker, and offered his unqualified support in the movement to restore the gridiron game after a lapse of ten years. It was regarded as a foregone conclusion, following last night's session, that, with the support of the Dean, there would be no opposition encountered when the Faculty votes on the proposal within the next few weeks.

Sidney Unger, former manager of the soccer team, the sport which has been designed to supplant the interest in football during the ten-year period, presided last night. Unger was the originator of the movement to restore the game. Dean Frederick B. Robinson of the College of Business Administration was unable to attend, but sent the meeting a letter favoring football for next year. Speakers included Coach Lionel B. MacKenzie of the C. C. N. Y. track team, and Walter Williamson, athletic director.

A campaign was launched at the conference to solicit financial support from City College alumni to the extent of $10,000, which it is estimated will be needed to prepare a schedule for 1920, equip the team, engage coaches, and improve the Lewisohn Stadium. More than $1,500 was obtained last night, including $250 in the form of a pledge from the Students' Council and $50 from each of the eight classes of the college. Several prominent alumni promised liberal contributions.

Although the fifty-five selected delegates at last night's preliminary meeting voted unanimously to reinstate football, it will be necessary to hold a general mass meeting of students to provide for the Faculty concrete evidence that the college is solidly behind the movement. This mass meeting is scheduled for next Thursday night, Nov. 27. The appeal for funds to initiate the restoration will be continued throughout the week, and it is hoped by the next meeting to have assurances that the greater part if not all the money needed will be subscribed. There are more than 2,000 students at C. C. N. Y.

It is expected that after next week's meeting the work for preparing the schedule for 1920 will get under way immediately. C. C. N. Y. men hope to enter into active competition for Greater New York City football honors with Columbia, N. Y. U., and Stevens, and will also probably arrange games with the smaller teams in the East such as New York Aggies, Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, Connecticut Aggies, and Rhode Island State College.

HARD FIGHT FOR PITT.

Special to The New York Times.

PITTSBURGH, Penn., Nov. 21.—The stage is set for the biggest game of the local season from the standpoint of community spirit, that between the Pitt Panthers and the Carnegie Tech Plaids. The two coaches, Glenn Warner and Walter Steffens, put their charges through their closing paces today.

The Techs were out in full force, with the exception of big Abe Levy, who was hurt in an auto wreck this week and is in the hospital. Warner sent his Blue and Gold men through a light practice and drilled them on a new set of signals. It is not likely that the Panthers will stage anything tomorrow that Warner has worked up for Pennsylvania State on Thanksgiving Day, as the latter will have scouts in the side lines. And then, again, several of the regulars will be out tomorrow, resting for Hugo Bezdek's Blue and White eleven.

This will be Steffens's last appearance as coach at Tech, and he is very anxious to wind up his Pittsburgh career with a victory against the Panthers.

LOUGHLIN LYCEUM WINS.

Jack Eller, former hurdling champion, carried the Loughlin Lyceum relay quartet to victory last night in the struggle for the Metropolitan A. A. U. half-mile title, decided in the Seventy-first Regiment Armory, in connection with the games of the New York Edison Company Employees' Association. Eller, running as anchor for the Brooklyn contingent, was forced to his utmost to snatch victory from Frank Conway, who ran the final furlong for the Morningside A. C. quartet. The time for the Loughlin Lyceum team was 1:38 1-5.

Eller started with a fair-sized lead. On the second relay, R. W. McDonald of the Loughlin Lyceum took the lead from W. O. Harper, Knights of St. Antony, and touched off to Phil Hauser about ten yards in front of Homer Ashley of the Morningside A. C., who had followed McDonald past the Knights of St. Antony runner. On the third relay the distance remained the same, but in the final relay Conway went away like the wind in chase of Eller and picked up ground almost with every stride. Eller summoned all his strength as he saw his rival gaining, and just managed to lead Conway home. The Knights of St. Antony team finished third and the Glencoe A. C. fourth, but because of some illegality in the make-up of the team the Knights quartet was disqualified and third place awarded the Glencoe A. C. runners.

Another outstanding feature was the Metropolitan A. A. U. standing high jump championship. This resulted in the first individual indoor athletic championship for the New York A. C. since the club resumed championship competition. Ted Clark, wearing the Mercury Foot, was the winner, with a leap of 5 feet 1 inch, while Bernie Wefers, Jr., another Mercury Footer, making his first jumping competition in four years, finished runner-up for the title with a leap of 5 feet.

The summaries:

65-Yard Dash, Handicap—Won by B. Weisiger, St. Christopher Club, 10 feet; H. La Monte, Columbus Club, 9 feet, second; R. W. McDonald, Loughlin Lyceum, 8 feet, third. Time—0:07 3-5.

1,000-Yard Run, Handicap—Won by Arthur C. Reilly, Knights of St. Antony, 5 yards; George Buttner, Jersey Harriers' A. A., 5 yards, second; L. Gaskell, Kings County A. A., 30 yards, third. Time—2:26 2-5.

880-Yard Relay Race—(Metropolitan A. A. U. Championship)—Won by Laughlin Lyceum, (J. J. O'Brien, R. W. McDonald, Phil Hauser, and J. J. Eller); Morningside A. Standing High Jump—(Metropolitan A. A. U. Championship)—Won by Ted Clarke, New York A. C., with 5 feet 1 inch, Bernie Wefers, Jr., New York A. C., 5 feet, second; Sam Kronman, Clark House A. A., 4 feet 9 inches, third, Harry Haase, Glencoe A. C., 4 feet 7 inches, fourth.

300-Yard Run, Handicap—Won by T. E. Homey, West Side Y. M. C. A., (14 yards); J. Weller, Jr., Anchor A. C., (14 yards), second; E. H. Church, West Side Y. M. C. A., (18 yards), third. Time—0:33 3-5.

Two-Mile Run, Handicap—Won by Raymond P. Whearty, Fordham University, (225 yards); Harry A. Wigger, Paulist A. C., (scratch), second; Raymond Fox, Paulist A. C., (225 yards), third. Time—9:38 4-5.

Erasmus Vs. Poly Prep Today.

A scholastic football game which will have an important bearing on the Brooklyn boronugh championship will be decided this afternoon at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn. The contending teams will be Erasmus Hall High School and Poly Prep School.

COMISKEY DIRECTS ATTACK ON JOHNSON

Intends to Do Everything Possible to Drive Big Ban from Baseball.

CHICAGO, Nov. 21.—Open warfare between President Ban Johnson of the American League and the faction composed of Charles A. Comiskey, owner of the Chicago Club; Harry H. Frazee of Boston, and Colonel Jacob Ruppert of the New York Club, flared up tonight when Comiskey issued a statement charging President Johnson with endangering the integrity of baseball.

"We have reached the conclusion," Mr. Comiskey said, "that Mr. Johnson is endangering not only the value of our properties but the integrity of baseball, and we, therefore, intend to do everything possible to rid organized baseball of the impediment which we believe is now attached to it.

"Jacob Ruppert of New York, H. H. Frazee of Boston, James Dunn of Cleveland, and myself are the present Directors of the League. We are the owners of properties worth at least several million dollars. Mr. Johnson has no property interests in the American League or in any of the individual clubs constituting that League. It is fair to presume, therefore, that we are interested in preserving the integrity of the League if for no other reason than that we are interested in conserving the properties in which we are vitally interested."

Comiskey said the Board of Directors had attempted to inquire into President Johnson's "perpetual franchise" to act as President of the League, but that President Johnson at no time appeared before the Directors.

The annual meeting of the League, for which the Board of Directors issued a call to be held in New York Dec. 10, was called, Mr. Comiskey said, "because Mr. Johnson had not seen fit to issue a call for the meeting."

REFUSES TO SHOW PAPERS.

Johnson Advises Attorney That Club Owners May See All Documents.

CHICAGO, Nov. 21.—President Ban Johnson of the American League today refused to allow Nicholas E. Lenssen, a New York attorney representing Harry Frazee of Boston, Charles Comiskey of Chicago, and Jacob Ruppert of New York, to inspect the records and other documents of the league.

President Johnson said that if Messrs. Ruppert, Comiskey, and Frazee individually or collectively desired to inspect the records of the league, they could do so as club owners or directors of the league, but that no outsider would be granted that privilege.

The American League executive declared there is no way to compel him to disclose the affairs of the league to any one not affiliated with it. Mr. Lenssen made no comment on the refusal of his request other than to say that he would report to his clients.

Hamilton to Meet N. Y. M. A. Eleven

Hamilton Institute's football eleven will clash with the New York Military Academy team this afternoon on the latter's gridiron at Cornwall-on-the-Hudson. On the result of this game hinges an intersectional clash between the Hamilton eleven and the team of the East Aurora High School of Chicago. Bob Nolan's local team wil lsecure this important game if it defeats the New York M. A. eleven this afternoon. The Hamilton eleven has suffered defeat only once this season of the four games played to date.

GREAT CROWD SEES HORSE SHOW CLOSE

JUDGE MOORE BIG WINNER

One of the finest and most successful exhibitions held by the National Horse Show Association in more than a decade came to a close at Madison Square Garden last night, and appropriately enough the curtain came down before one of the largest crowds of the week, not even excepting the one which was present for the visit of the Prince of Wales. The gathering filled the great amphitheatre from top to bottom and included the foreign delegates to the International Trade Conference, members of the United States Chamber of Commerce, the New York Chamber of Commerce, and the Merchants' Association of New York, who were the guests of the Executive Committee.

The Horse Show was held this year for the benefit of the Salvation Army, which will revelve the gross receipts of the show from all sources. The amount of the receipts will not be definitely known for some time, but it is expected that the post-war gift to the Salvation Army will approximate $90,000, a considerable increase over the amounts which were given to the United War Work campaign last year and the American Red Cross the year before.

The estimate is based on the attendance during the week, which set some new records for the Horse Show. It is estimated that fully 50,000 persons took in the exhibition, the high peak being reached Wednesday afternoon, when the Prince of Wales was the guest of honor.

Judge Moore Biggest Winner.

Although blue ribbons were distributed quite widely among the numerous exhibitors during the week, the leading honors easily went to Judge William H. Moore who was the biggest winner at the show with twenty-seven first prizes, including championships won on the final day. His nearest competitor was the Ennisclare Farms of Ontario, owned by Lieut. Col. Herbert C. Cox, which captured seventeen blue ribbons. Mrs. F. P. Garvan of New York was next with eleven firsts.

Judge Moore quite easily dominated the hackney harness classes with such fine horses as Seaton Saxon, Seaton Fleetwing and others, which practically swept everything before them. The Ennisclare Farms were almost as successful in the classes for hunters and jumpers. The numerous entries sent to the show by this exhibitor included some of the finest fencers that have been seen at a local horse show in several years, and spoke well for the development of this type of horse. Many of the classes were easy prey for the Canadian horses, with the result that second show honors were easily won, despite the fact that the Cox horses were mostly of the one variety. Mrs. Garvan won the third honors with one of the finest collections of hackney ponies shown in several seasons.

The final day was a day of championships, and developed the best contests of the week. There were some surprises for those who thought that certain classes would be easily held by horses which had seemed to dominate their classes in the earlier tests.

Takes Two Championships.

Though Judge Moore had a lead that made first honors safe, he added two championships to his list during the evening. The first of these was the championship for harness horses over 15 hands 2 inches, in which he took both first and second. The winner was his Ruxton, a bay gelding, while Micah was held in reserve.

This success was followed by another in the championship for harness pairs over 15 hands 2 inches. This fell quite easily to the Moore entries, Bountiful and Micah.

However, in the course of deciding the championships the Moore entries were not without their failures. Miss Isabella Wanamaker scored two victories, one for harness horses under 15 hands 2 inches, and one for harness pairs at the same limitation. Her Eve, a chestnut mare which had scored very impressively in the qualifying class, was the winner in the first of these tests, defeating Judge Moore's Seaton Cyrano after the judges had given close consideration to both contenders.

In the class for harness pairs for the James McLean Cup, Miss Wanamaker won the championship with Netherhill's Pride and Eve, which defeated Judge Moore's Seaton Cyrano and Raeburn.

The championship in the class for pony four-in-hands fell easily to Mrs. F. P. Garvan, with the Hamilton Farms entry in reserve.

King Daly Scores.

In the championship class for heavyweight hunters the honors were awarded to King Daly, owned by Isaac H. Clothier, Jr., although this one had not won in any of the qualifying classes. The judges made the award, however, and later verified it. The Whip, owned by the Ennisclare Farms was held in reserve.

Miss Constance Vauclain captured the championship for middleweight hunters with her Arbite, while the Ennisclare Farms was awain second with Crag- Farms was again second with Crag- of the best jumpers at the show during the qualifying tests.

The closest contest of the evening came in the judging for lightweight hunters in the championship class. The judges were undecided between the Ennisclare Farm's Shot and Charles D. Lanier's Down East, winner in this class last year. After both horses had been sent around the ring at a fast pace, Frank A. Bonsal, who was presiding in making the awards, rode first one and then the other of the horses and made his decision from his own tests. He awarded the championship to Down East.

Keen Competition.

Some of the keenest competition of the afternoon session was seen in the two championship classes for saddle horses, the one for horses not exceeding 15 hands 2 inches and the other for horses of 15 hands 2 inches and over. The saddle horses, as usual, had dominated the show throughout the week in the matter of numbers, and as these are the horses of general use, there was much interest among the exhibitors as well as the spectators in the final awards. Some excellent specimens had been shown in the various qualifying classes and accordingly brought together a pick of the show.

The first of these title classes was for the Charles E. Cox Cup, for horses not exceeding 15 hands 2 inches. The championship was finally awarded to Twilight Hour, a black gelding owned by Hugh Bryson Wick of Cleveland, with Allah, owned by Miss Clara S. Peck, held in reserve.

When the field in the championship competition had been reduced to three the judges spent nearly half an hour reaching a decision. Twilight Hour was sent out to show himself again, while Allah also pranced beside him. Even the judges were unable to make up their minds, and once more sent for one of the entries which had been passed over. In the end Twilight Hour was awarded the championship amid loud applause.

Bohemian Actress Wins.

The final award in the second of these classes furnished a real surprise, for the championship went to Bohemian Actress, a bay mare which had never been exhibited in the Garden before, and, therefore, was generally regarded as a débutante. Bohemian Actress is owned by Charles W. Leonard of Boston, President of the Readville Fair. Mr. Leonard had been best known to horsemen through his interest in light harness horses. He had never exhibited before at the Garden.

The surprise in the victory of Bohemian Actress arose out of the defeat of Donnacona, owned by the Misses Field, and which had been regarded as the eventual winner. Donnacona had made some brilliant conquests earlier in the week. His last victory was over Miss Eleanora Sears's Radiant, which in turn had defeated Twilight, champion of last year.

Donnacona thus came into the ring for the final test a favorite among those who had watched the judging throughout the week. He is a flashy black with a blaze face, and won rounds of applause as he went around the ring, changing his gait repeatedly. As in the former class, the judges sifted the contenders carefully, and finally sent a thrill of surprise through the crowd by pinning the first award on Bohemian Actress. The winner is a pretty bay with white hind feet, and made an excellent appearance, though some of those along the rail were inclined to disagree with the judges on the matter of manners of the two contenders. The winner was ridden by J. Davis, who also rode Twilight Hour, and thus established a record, as it was the first time that the winners in these two classes had been ridden by the same rider.

Victory for Hamilton Flame.

Mrs. F. P. Garvan's Hamilton Flame, a champion of two years ago in the class for ponies in harness, was again at his best when this championship was decided, at the opening of the afternoon session, and once more added to his fame. Hamilton Flame had scored both in single and double harness events, and among those which he had defeated were Masterpiece and a number of other good ones.

Hamilton Flame had no easy victory, for Fulange, owned by Miss Janice Liggett of Chestnut Hills, Mass., made an excellent appearance, and, like the winner, had scored over strong contenders earlier in the week. Fulange was held in reserve after the championship had gone to Hamilton Flame.

Mrs. Garvan had the satisfaction of adding another championship to her list a short time later in the contest for harness pony pairs, in which Hamilton Flame was again a winner. This time he shared the honors with Hamilton Dianthus, this pair having been one of the attractions among the ponies entered in the show. Miss Liggett again took second, her Fulange and Fulgora being the pair to bow to the prowess of the entries owned by Mrs. Garvan.

The championship for roadsters and trotters went quite easily to the handsome Ebony King, a black stallion owned by John R. Thompson of Chicago. This was one of the horses which had been much talked about during the week, and victory met with an outburst of applause.

There was considerable interest manifested in the class for thoroughbred saddle horses. Though this was not a championship class, it brought out some exceptionally fine animals. Despite the great many fine horses exhibited at the show not many can lay claim to being thoroughbreds. Those exhibited yesterday were all registered in the Stud Book. The first award went to Leading Lady, a chestnut mare owned by Harvey S. Ladew of Glen Cove, L. I. Dr. Russell, owned by Frank Donovan of Brookline, Mass., took second, and third went to Sorcerer, the property of H. J. Graham of Tuckahoe, N. Y.

TOM M'TAGGART IS AGAIN VICTORIOUS

BOWIE, Md., Nov. 21.—The string of victories which Lawrence Waterbury's Tom McTaggart began to roll up while racing in New York is being continued in Maryland without a break. This five-year-old son of Chuctanunda, which did not come out until late this year, is proving to be a very useful racer, and though meeting with greater opposition on each part, he has so far proved equal to all the tests he has been called on to meet.

Tom McTaggart won the Premier Purse here today, a race at a mile, which was the so-called feature on a card that offered very little in the way of class. Except for the few good ones in this event, the races today were given over exclusively to cheap performers with the usual result in such cases, that long shots ran in and form was upset, as far as form can be had on such bad horses.

The field in which Tom McTaggart had to compete included Kashmir, War Smoke, War Zone and others which have raced well throughout the year, but the winner disposed of them quite as handily as he has of other fields of cheaper horses with which he has started. with which he has started.

Turf and War Smoke got out in front for a few paces at the start, but once around the first turn Ensor moved up with Tom McTaggart, caught the leaders and then proceeded to move away with ease. The winner outclassed his field all the way from this point to the finish, and though his margin of victory was less than two lengths, he had the race in hand and Ensor did not make a move on him in the stretch, despite the driving finish of Kashmir.

Kashmir was always well up in the race and easily took care of second place. When Rice made a bid for the victory in the stretch Kashmir moved up so rapidly that he left the balance of the field far behind. He was six lengths in front of War Smoke at the end and the latter had the same advantage over War Zone. War Zone did not show any signs of the speed which he had displayed on various occasions earlier in the year and against better horses. Turf was kept under restraint for more than half the distance and when he was called on he failed to respond.

R. T. Nickerson's Daydue finally scored a victory today after threatening to do so for many months. Meantime Daydue had been sifted down from one class to another until he finally landed among some cheap ones today and found the field slow enough for his plodding legs. At that he had an advantage of but half a length over Broom Peddler in a mile and twenty yards test, while Crumpsall was third.

Bowie has been providing a long shot a day, and today was no exception. It came in the second race for two-year-olds when W. Fenwick's Betsinda outfooted a field of cheap youngsters and won, the mutuels paying $65.10 to holders of $2 tickets. Pirate McGee was second and First Consul third.

BARNEY SCHREIBER DEAD.

Special to The New York Times.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 21.—P. Barney Schreiber, aged about 50 years, for many years one of the country's most prominent breeders and owners of thoroughbreds and a leading bookmaker, died suddenly of apoplexy in a Cincinnati hotel today. He was born in Germany and came to this country when a boy, going to Kansas City, where he was employed in a clothing store as a clerk.

While working in that capacity Schreiber became interested in racing. As a bookmaker he rapidly accumulated a fortune and branched out as an owner of a racing stable and breeder. While operating his book on the Western tracks he bought a farm near St. Louis and there maintained for several years a stud of mares and stallions from which he bred many winners. Schreiber bred and owned during his career Gehrmniss, Banorella, Schwalbe, Ethel Carr, Corrigan, Pinkerton, Safola, and Saintolat, the dam of Royce Rools. At the height of his prosperity as a bookmaker he bought an interest in several race tracks, including the Tamenoran and other courses in California. He had made his home in Lexington, Ky., for the last few years.

O'DOWD HAS SHADE OVER MIKE GIBBONS

Special to The New York Times.

In the sixth round he brought his right over against O'Dowd's cheekbone, and, while he shook up the champion, he injured his principal fighting asset so severely that he involuntarily dropped it and winced as though suffering great pain. It was reported that he had broken a bone in his right hand. Thereafter he used his right sparingly, but in the ninth round he landed a wicked chop with it flush on O'Dowd's jaw, which sent the champion reeling backward for two or three steps. That was the last flash of the right. In the tenth it was throbbing so painfully that he used it only for blocking purposes.

From the tap of the gong in the first round it was apparent that both were out for blood, but neither boxed wildly. They fought savagely but carefully, and neither gave his opponent an opening for a knockout blow during the entire ten rounds.

The Phantom landed more clean blows beyond any doubt; he made his opponent miss often, and time and again he displayed his wonderful skill as a boxer by dodging five or six blows aimed at his jaw by merely a slight movement of the head. But O'Dowd did 75 per cent. of the pacemaking. He was on top of Gibbons most of the time. He rushed him to the ropes frequently, and in the exchanges at close quarters he more than held his own.

The crowd which had gathered to see the fight was the greatest money assemblage ever gathered in the Auditorium, and it is estimated that the receipts were more than $40,000. Of this amount Gibbons received 30 per cent., out of which he paid $15,000 to O'Dowd. Gibbons also had the motion picture concessions and agreed to give O'Dowd 25 per cent. of the film receipts.

The fighters met under a flood of light for the motion pictures and examined the bandages carefully. It was stated that both men were entering the ring at 158 pounds.

Curley Ulrich of St. Paul was introduced as official referee, and George Barton of Minneapolis and Ed L. Shave of St. Paul, sporting writers, were selected as judges and occupied seats at the ringside.

O'Dowd appeared to be in better physical condition following the fight, and the crowd gave him a rousing ovation.

Packey McFarland of Chicago was the only ring notable who was introduced besides the principals. He declared in response to a call for a speech that he had "decided to stay fat because he feared that if he attempted to fight again he would lose the little brains he had left."

English Boxer Sees Heir to British Throne on Board H. M. S. Renown.

Jimmy Wilde, England's sensational little flyweight boxer, who is scheduled to make his first American appearance in a bout against Jack Sharkey, of the west side, at Milwaukee, Dec. 6, was one of the visitors to H. M. S. Renown, headquarters of Prince Edward of Wales, yesterday. Wilde, accompanied by his wife and Captain Edward Tupper, Seaman's Leader of Great Britain, boarded the Renown at 2 o'clock, and subsequently had a chat of about fifteen minutes with the heir to the British throne. Prince Edward is a Wilde enthusiast and, it is understood, is keenly interested in the British boxer's ring career. Before leaving Mrs. Wilde secured Prince Edward's signature in an autograph book.

DISCUSS HANDBALL EVENT.

Western Delegates and Fred Rubien Confer on Tourney Plans.

Plans for the national A. A. U. handball championship tournament, singles and doubles, which will soon be conducted by the Los Angles A. C., were discussed yesterday by Frederick W. Rubien, Secretary-Treasurer of the A. A. U., and Robert S. Weaver and N. S. Griffin, of the Southern Pacific A. A. U. The tournament was awarded to the Southern Pacific Association, of which Mr. Weaver is President, at the recent national convention of the A. A. U. in Boston.

The Western delegates were on their return trip to their homes in Los Angeles and stopped off in this city to discuss final details for the tournament with Mr. Rubien. The dates have not yet been decided. The Western delegates will remain in this city for the purpose of attending the cross-country running carnival at Van Cortlandt Park this afternoon, when the Intercollegiate A. A. A. A. championship, the P. S. A. L. championship, Columbia interscholastic and collegiate freshmen races will be held. The delegates will leave for Los Angeles tomorrow.

TUGGLE DEFEATS SLOAN.

Experience Helps Veteran Billiardist to Victory by 200 to 157.

It was experience against youth in last night's game in the American Amateur Billiard Association's Class C 18.2 balkline tournament for the championship of the metropolitan district. Experience conquered. Fuller's Academy, where the match was played, was crowded with enthusiastic spectators when Dr. Thomas Tuggle and Cecil Sloan crossed cues. Dr. Tuggle won by a score of 200 to 157. Sloan is the 19-year-old player who has shown so much promise, in spite of the fact that he has not won a game in the tournament. It was his fifth defeat, and finished his schedule.

McManniman Takes Lead.

M. P. McManiman took the lead in the Brooklyn handicap billiard tournament at the Brooklyn Billiard Academy last night, when he defeated Charles P. Mathews. The score was 180 to 156. Mathews played for 200 points, while McManiman played for 180. The winner averaged 5 10-34 and the loser 4 19-34. McManiman's best runs were 29 and 27, while Mathews made 19 and 18 in his best innings.

SERVATIUS GAINS VICTORY WITH CUE

Captures Close Match from C. Steinbugler in Brooklyn Billiard Tourney.

A surprise was sprung in the National Association of Amateur Billiard Players' Class C 18.2 balkline tournament at the National Recreation Academy in Brooklyn last night. Charley Steinbugler, who had been playing exceptionally strong billiards, was defeated by the veteran, Louis A. Servatius. The latter had not been playing any too well in this tourney for the metropolitan championship of the association, and it was generally believed that he would fall a victime to the experiness of Steinbugler's cue. Therefore, his victory by a score of 150 to 142 upset the dope.

Incidentally, the defeat cost Charley Steinbugler the lead. He is now tied with Sidney Brussel for second place, each having won four and lost one game. Robert Steinbugler, Charley's cousin, forged into the lead when he took the measure of Frank Boyd in the second game of the evening, winning by a score of 150 to 110.

The game between Servatius and Charley Steinbugler was one of the best of the tourney to date. It was distinguished by the closeness of the match. As Servatius stepped to the table for his thirty-ninth inning he was trailing by a score of 142 to 136 and ran out the game with an unfinished run of 14.

MATURO WINS AGAIN.

Defeats Wolfort at Pocket Billiards in Two Exhibition Matches.

James Maturo was not in his best form during his two pocket billiard games against Fred Wolfort at Maurice Daly's Academy yesterday afternoon and last night. The Denver expert did not play as consistently as he has in some of his other exhibition games against the Brooklyn professional. Maturo won both blocks, but his victories were not as impressive as some of those he scored earlier in te week. He won in the afternoon by a score of 100 to 48 and took the evening game 100 to 53. The total score of the match is: Maturo, 1,000; Wolfort, 609. The last two games in the match will be played this afternoon and tonight.

BARTON WINS AT SNOOKER.

Bill Wathey met his second defeat in the tournament for the snooker pool championship of the American Amateur Billiard Association last night. He played George Barton at John Doyle's Academy and lost by a score of 125 to 92.

In the three-cushion tournament Charley Adair won from Chris Maxwell, 25 to 14. Maxwell could not get going and Adair experienced little difficulty in winning. The game consumed thirty-nine innings.

Raymond Crane and Ben Howe were opposed in the pocket billiard tournament and Crane won, 50 to 47.

PLAN NEW GOLF TOURNEY.

Metropolitan Pros May Contest for Long Island Title.

Unless the golf professionals of the metropolitan district run into unexpected opposition they will institute next season a Long Island open championship as a brand new event on the schedule. Alex Pirie, Secretary of the Professional Golfers' Association of America and pro at the North Shore Country Club, has summoned all the pros of this neighborhood for an informal get-together luncheon Monday at 1:30 at the Hotel McAlpin. Although no definite official business will be transacted, the purpose of the assembly is to learn the sentiment for the proposed championship.

The idea of a Long Island open tournament for the title has been passed around for several years, and this present season there was an attempt to inaugurate the event. Willie MacFarlane, pro at Port Washington, broached the subject among the pros at their championship tourney in September at the Engineers' Club, but the matter was deferred because of the lateness of the season. Long Island is getting to be dotted plentifully with golf clubs, and there is a feeling that a tourney on the island, in addition to the annual Metropolitan Open Championship should be inaugurated. Pirie said last night that the matter would come up for official sanction at the next meeting of the P. G. A.

Another topic for Monday's meeting will be the proposed tournament for members of the P. G. A. who are not quite good enough golfers to enter the association championship series. The entry would be limited to assistant professionals, shop helpers, cady masters, and others who each year are playing good golf throughout the country. In the metropolitan district there are such assistants as Johnny Farrell, who is Tom Kerrigan's right hand man at Siwanoy; Tommy Harmon, assistant to Irving Stringer at Ocean C. C., and Fred Canausa at Oak Ridge. Farrell tied with George McLean at Shackamaxon in the qualifying test of the P. G. A. championships, but was beaten in the play-off. Other assistants who contribute excellent ability on the links are Ray Cole of Sunset Hill, St. Louis, Jim Barnes's helper, and Leo Diegel of Detroit, the sensational assistant who finished second to Barnes in the Western Open Championship at Cleveland and who was second to Ross in the Ohio open.

The local professionals are not overambitious to the extent of proposing a nation-wide tourney for the assistants and helpers, but they see a need for such an event for the youngsters of the Metropolitan district.

THE OPERA

By Richard Aldrich

"Faust" at the Metropolitan.

"Faust" was given at the Metropolitan Opera House last evening, making an early entrance into the repertory, with the same cast as that heard in the opera last year. The one new feature of the performance was the first appearance of the new French conductor, Albert Wolff, who is later to come before the opera-going public as the composer of one of the new operas promised for the season's repertory, his setting of Maeterlinck's "L'Oiseau Bleu." He has very recently arrived from France and is not so very long free from the army. His hand was soon made evident in the spirit which was manifested in the doings on the stage and in the orchestra; a spirit manifested in rapid and elastic tempos and a resulting vivacity of movement in those portions of the score where vivacity of movement is called for; also in a notable vigor of accent, stress of rhythm and dramatic emphasis; and sometimes in a superfluity of orchestral tone. Nor was there much finesse in his conducting last evening. So far as the animation and accent were concerned, they were all to the good of the whole effect; and "Faust" has hardly had a performance in recent years that has had so much of these qualities. As for the balance of tone and the manifestation of finer shades in the orchestra, that may be a matter in which Mr. Wolff will find a better proportion when he has made a better acquaintance with the acoustics of the auditorium and the capacities of the players under his baton.

The performance was not an unalloyed joy so far as the vocalization of some of the principal characters was concerned; Mr. Martinelli's voice had not its best quality, nor the sustained and even power that he has shown at his best; Mme. Farrar sang as she has been singing this music in recent years. She is a Marguerite with fascinating qualities in appearance and in details of her action, which she has made an expression of individuality; but her singing is not such as to contest the memories of many admirable predecessors in the rôle.

Mr. Rothier's Mephistopheles had all its well remembered excellences, among which good singing is something to be prized highly. Mme. Delaunois gave a pleasing and effective impersonation of Siebel. The Valentin of Mr. Couzinou was not one of the ornaments of the occasion, heavy in action and dull in vocal quality and expression.

The chorus sang with much spirit; but there were moments when their tempo did not agree with the conductor's, to the disadvantage of the effect. The opera was given last evening without the "Walpurgis Night" ballet and its elaborate setting, which have prevailed in the performances of the last two seasons.

The Philharmonic Society.

Dvorak's symphony in F, which the Philharmonic Society made the chief item in its concert yesterday afternoon, was originally announced as played for the first time in this country; but consideration of safety first led to a change of the announcement to the effect that the performance was guaranteed to be the first only in New York.

It is of no great importance whether either one of these announcements is true or not, except to those who set store by the accuracy of the record. But the fact is rather curious that there seems to be no record of any previous performance in this country. Mr. Humiston, the writer of the program notes, also had some difficulty in determining the actual number of the symphony in the list of Dvorak's works. It is put down on the score as the third; but with the assistance of Mr. Kovarik, first viola of the orchestra, a fellow-countryman, friend, and pupil of Dr. Dvorak's, he has shown that it is in reality the fourth symphony composed and the sixth published by the composer. Composed in 1876, it was published in 1888, four years before he came to this country.

It is singular that so fresh and charming a composition was not secured for performance immediately in the days when Dvorak's presence here stimulated interest in his works, and new ones under his name were eagerly welcomed by conductors in this country, then, as now, hospitable to novelties. It is wholly characteristic of Dvorak's naif and spontaneous melodic vein, his facility in developing it without anxious thought for novelty of expression or for any form of utterance that was not native to him, perfectly unsought. Its instrumentation is in his richly colored style. The first movement, suggesting nature, an out-of-doors feeling, and the rhythmically throbbing and sunny scherzo are those that give greatest pleasure today.

There is no seeking for depth, for profundity of idea that was not waiting for utterance; such was not Dvorak's way. It is possible that this symphony has come to light a little too late for a long life here. The mode has passed it by, and its charm is too insubstantial to survive the change. But it was agreeable to hear and no doubt will be heard again with pleasure.

Mr. Eddy Brown again was the soloist and played Bruch's G minor concerto. The other orchestral numbers were the Parisian version of the Bacchanale from "Tannhäuser" and Chamrier's "España."

GEORGE HARRIS SINGS.

Tenor Gives Serious Lyrics on War Themes in Aeolian Hall.

George Harris, the tenor whose recitals have before brought new songs, and especially those in singable English, to critical attention, gave a matinée in Aeolian Hall yesterday at which he presented serious lyrics on war themes by Josef Hofmann and Daniel Gregory Mason. The famous pianist's setting of Colonel McRae's "In Flanders Fields," at which half a dozen musicians have tried their hand, was sombre and restrained, avoiding fervent climax. Mason's "Well He Slumbers, Greatly Slain," also was less effective than its peaceful mate, "My Love Has Gone Into the East." An older "Pas d'Armes du Roi Jean," by Saint Saens, preceded a French group by George Hue, and there were others by Schubert and by Russian composers in Mr. Harris's own translation.

Beryl Rubinstein, Pianist, Plays.

Beryl Rubinstein, pianist of famous name, appeared in recital at Aeolian Hall last evening before an audience that filled the little hall and left late arrivals to be turned away. A former prodigy, and still a young man, he presented a program of the giants in piano literature, Beethoven's sonata "Appassionata," which others have played within the week, grouped with the Bach-Liszt fugue in G and the Brahms-Paganini variations. Besides some Chopin and later Liszt pieces, he gave three of his own, entitled "Guitarre," "The Man in the Moon" and "Uncle Remus."

Two Tenors Back from Buenos Aires

Two operatic tenors arrived yesterday from South America on the Lamport & Holt liner Vestris, Guilio Crimi of the Metropolitan Opera Company and Tito Schipa of the Chicago Grand Opera Company, who have been singing in Buenos Aires. G. Marinuzzi, conductor of the Chicago Grand Opera Company, also arrived on the liner and left for Chicago.

Vaudeville on Blackwell's Island.

The Keith Vaudeville Circuit will provide its annual Thanksgiving entertainment on Blackwell's Island next Thursday morning. Among the performers will be Harry Cooper, who has been for twenty consecutive years a holiday entertainer on the island. E. F. Albee, head of the Keith Circuit, will provide cigars and candy for each of the inmates.

L. J. Selznick to Produce a Play.

Lewis J. Selznick, the motion-picture producer, will enter the field of legitimate theatrical production in the near future. His first play will be "Bucking the Tiger," a comedy by May Tully and Achmed Abdullah, based upon the latter's novel of the same name. Rehearsals will be started this week.

CONVICT RENT STRIKERS.

Three Women Members of Tenants' League Guilty of Intimidation.

Three rent strikers were convicted yesterday of conspiracy in the Court of Special Sessions by Justices Kernochan, Herbert, and Salmon, for having prevented the execution of dispossess notices, for having struck the landlord, for having intimidated the other tenants, and for various other acts. All three were tenants in the apartment house at 1,284 Park Avenue and members of the Tenants' League of East Harlem, one being the Treasurer. They are Annie Breitman, Fannie Belzer, and Hilda B. Wesser. They will be sentenced next Friday.

Testimony revealed that Abraham Levow, the owner of the property, had been attacked and spat upon when he called for the rent of members of the league. It was said that the three convicted women prevented the landlord from collecting rents, and collected the rents themselves, which they kept, and then placarded the house with the strike notices. The court declared that leniency would be shown if the women would disclose the names of those who are responsible for the formation of the Tenants' League, of which they are members.

LANDLORD FINED $100.

Failure to Heat Apartments Brings Jail Threat from Magistrate.

One of the largest fines to be imposed upon a landlord for failure to supply tenants with heat, was paid yesterday by Isaac Ellman, a real estate broker, who lives at 2,317 Mermaid Avenue, Coney Island, and who owns a row of apartment houses there. Magistrate Geismar, in the Coney Island Court, gave him the alternative of paying $100 or serving twenty days in jail. The complainants were Mrs. Lottie Klinger and William Grubb, who said that their children were suffering from colds as a result of a lack of heat.

The leases were read by the Magistrate, and when he saw that they provide for heat from October until early Spring, he imposed the fine, with the remark: "As long as I am sitting on the bench, tenants who are paying large rents and who are entitled to heat, will get it, and plenty of it. If they don't, the landlords will be sent to jail."

STEEL MILLS FACE CLOSING.

"Essentials" Only Get Coal in Mahoning, Shenango, and Pittsburgh.

YOUNGSTOWN, O., Nov., 21.—Mills of the Mahoning and Shenango Valleys, the second largest steel producing region, today faced the possibility of closing, following orders by D. T. Murray, local fuel director, cutting off coal supplies to all factories. Smaller mills will be forced to close in two or three days, it was said. The larger plants have supplies for periods varying from ten to thirty days.

PITTSBURGH, Nov. 21.—The Fuel Distributing Committee today supplied coal to "essential" consumers only. Members of the fuel committee said there was no immediate danger of a shortage.

FRAZIER ASKS INJUNCTION.

Wants Judge Restrained from Enforcing Return of Lignite Mines.

BISMARCK, N. D., Nov. 21.—William Lemke, Vice President of the Non-Partisan League, acting as attorney for Governor Frazier, filed an application in the State Supreme Court today asking for an alternative writ of prohibition and a temporary injunction to restraint District Judge W. L. Nuessle "from attempting to enforce his order" that the State return the seized lignite coal mines to their owners.

The petition states that the Governor could remove Judge Nuessle for his interference with the military forces and that Judge Nuessle's "interference, orders, and inflammatory remarks tend to invite bloodshed and civil war."

THE SCREEN

What the rather formal words American Committee for Devastated France really mean is shown in "The Heritage of France," a motion picture presented by the committee at the Strand Theatre yesterday afternoon. The film is a vitalized record of the work of the committee. For many, an officially prepared and printed report would be lifeless, but moving pictures can make people see with their own eyes the destruction caused by the war, the wrecked homes and barren fields, the ruined schools and factories, the desolation of a country to which refugees are now returning with nothing but hope and determination which will enable them to begin their lives again if the means and materials they lack are supplied. Moving pictures can make people realize that it is the work of the Committee for Devastated France to supply these means and materials, to make it possible for the re-established refugees to do for themselves; and, because of the interdependence of a village in France and a town in America, for the world, what they are eager and able to do now that no man's land is their own again.

So where the printed report, or even many earnest addresses, would fail to follow men and women into their homes and offices, moving pictures can succeed, and undoubtedly those composing "The Heritage of France" will have far-reaching success. Through them one is able to imagine France as it was in 1914, and then feel the shock of war's violence as he sees every standing work of man and nature reduced to wreckage by the forces of an invading host. His spirit rises from the tragedy of it all when he is given glimpses of the people returning to the places from which they were driven, when he sees them at work again, and when he witnesses the agents of the committee extending co-operation and guidance wherever it is needed.

Most spectators, too, will be impressed with the scope and detail of the committee's work. Its uniformed women are shown welcoming refugees home, encouraging them in the presence of their demolished houses, supplying them with food and tools, teaching their children in schools, treating them in hospitals and dispensaries, in this particular and that fulfilling the plans of a great organization which apparently is an organic body with a beating heart rather than an impersonal machine.

And because the history of devastated France and its struggle to recover from the war is a great human story the film record is compellingly interesting. Propaganda pictures often bore even enthusiasts, but "The Heritage of France," dissociated from its purpose of furthering relief work, is of a quality and strength to make any except a few exceptional photoplays seem spotted and weak. Without any staged narrative it would be dramatic, but its appeal is increased by the story of a family running through it.

At the Strand yesterday the pictures were supplemented by a spirited talk by Miss Anne Morgan, Vice President of the committee, who told what she and her associates had done and hoped to do. She appealed to America for $2,000,000 with which to finish the job undertaken. Myron T. Herrick, President of the committee, presided, and other speakers were Major Gen. O'Ryan and Ole Hanson.

The Prince of Wales was invited to be present, and many persons in the audience expected him, but he was unable to come.

WEBSTER PORTRAITS, $1,200

Portraits of Daniel Webster and his wife, Katherine Leroy Webster, the former by Francis Alexander and the latter attributed to John Wesley Jarvis, went to Dr. G. F. Muller for $1,200 at a sale at the Anderson Galleries last evening of 101 pictures belonging to the collections of George S. Hellman, Mrs. Julia E. Green and the late Solomon Mehrbach.

The picture of Webster, a pleasing one, was the first special object referred to in his will in which he said: "To my wife I give the picture of myself by Alexander." Mrs. Katherine Leroy Webster was Daniel Webster's second wife.

A head of an Alsatian girl, profile, wearing the Alsatian head dress, went to Knoedler for $475. N. E. Montross paid $375 for George B. Luke's "The Widow McGee," from the Breckenbridge collection; a Dutch "River Front," by H. Terburgh, went to H. Heine for $310; H. Counihan, agent, paid $105 for a "Girl with Dog," attributed to Greuze, and $140 for a very small Blakelock "Landscape." A Dutch "Farm Scene," with undecipherable signature, went to the McDonough Galleries for $460, and "Flirtation," by F. Soulacroix, to G. Gummi for $400. The returns for the evening were $8,688.

STATE OF NEW YORK OFFICE OF
SUPERINTENDENT OF PUBLIC WORKS.

NOTICE TO CONTRACTORS:

Sealed proposals will be received by the undersigned at his office in the Capitol at Albany, N. Y., until twelve o'clock noon of Tuesday, December 16th, 1919, at which place and hour they will be publicly opened and read, for the construction of Barge canal terminals pursuant to the provisions of Chapter 746 of the Laws of 1911, and of the acts amendatory thereof, as follows:

TERMINAL CONTRACT NO. 228.

Contract plans, sheets 1 to 7 inclusive.

Plans may be seen and detailed specifications, engineer's estimates of quantities, proposal blanks, form of contract and bonds required and other information for proposers may be had at the office of the Superintendent of Public Works at Albany, N. Y., at the office of the Assistant Superintendent of Public Works for the Middle Division at Syracuse, N. Y., at the office of the Assistant Superintendent of Public Works for the Western Division at Rochester, N. Y., and at the canal office, Spaulding's Exchange, Buffalo, N. Y.

Copies of detailed plans or drawings may be obtained from the State Engineer and Surveyor at Albany, N. Y., upon payment to him of the cost of producing them.

Monthly estimates will be paid of ninety per centum (90 per cent.) of the work done at the contract price. Every proposal for said work must be accompanied by a money deposit in the form of a draft or certified check upon some good banking institution in the city of Albany or New York, issued by a national or state bank or trust company in good credit within the state and payable at sight to the Superintendent of Public Works for five per centum (5 per cent.) of the amount of the proposal.

The person whose proposal shall be accepted will be required to execute a contract and furnish bonds within ten days from the date of notice of award delivered to him or them in person or mailed to the address given in the proposal.

Upon execution of the contract and approval of bonds, the certified check or draft will be returned to the proposer unless the same shall have been presented for collection prior to such time, in which case the amount of the deposit will be refunded by the Superintendent of Public Works.

The deposits of bidders other than the one to whom the award of contract shall be made will be returned immediately after the award has been made.

The bond required for the faithful performance of each contract shall be in such sum as shall be fixed by the Superintendent of Public Works, which sum shall not be less than twenty per centum (20 per cent.) of the estimated cost of the work, according to the contract price, and an additional bond, known as the labor bond, in the sum of ten per centum (10 per cent.) of the amount of the estimated cost of the work according to the contract price, will be required as security that the contractor will pay in full at least once in each month all laborers employed by him upon the work specified to be done in the contract.

In the event that more than one surety company is offered as surety on said bonds co-insurance only will be accepted.

Each proposal must be addressed to the Superintendent of Public Works, Albany, N. Y., and must be endorsed on the envelope with the name of the construction for which the proposal is made.

Award, if made, will be made to the person or persons whose proposal shall be lowest in cost to the state for doing the work, and which shall comply with all provisions required to render it formal. Before any award shall be made the lowest bidder will be required to satisfy the Superintendent of Public Works of his ability to provide suitable equipment and materials for the proper performance of the work.

The right is reserved to reject all proposals and readvertise and award the contract in the regular manner if, in the judgment of the undersigned, the interests of the state will be enhanced thereby.

EDWARD S. WALSH,
Superintendent of Public Works.

Not only did Spring patent flour go up sharply in the local market, but there was also a rise of 10 cents a barrel in the price of Winter straights. For the first time in quite a while, however, there were no changes in either hams or bacon here. In the Chicago market for provisions live sheep did not change. Mess pork advanced, but declines were recorded by live beef and hogs and by Middle Western lard and short ribs.

No price changes were shown in the cheese quotations in the dairy products portion of the list, but the best grades of butter each advanced 2 cents a pound to levels well above those current at this time last year. The same thing was true of nearby fancy and the best Western eggs, which showed advances for the week of 3 and 4 cents a dozen, respectively. The nearby fancy eggs reached a new high record mark. The only change in the fresh fruits in the list was a break of 50 cents a barrel in common apples. A rise in evaporated apples supplied the only change in the dried fruits. The only listed change in vegetables was in potatoes, which moved up 25 cents a barrel to a point 75 cents a barrel above last year's comparative price. In the minor items there was a decline in No. 7 Rio coffee, but No. 4 Santos did not change. The spices contributed a rise in cloves and declines in mace and white pepper. The list for grains showed a decline in corn and advances in oats, rye, and malting barley. Both the hides and leathers were bare of advances this week, and both showed several declines. In the lower leather prices quoted were some covering shoe stock. Light belting butts also went down. Five of the ten listed items in hides went down, not including calfskins. The combined lists for drugs, chemicals, dyestuffs and oils contained ten advances and five declines, the feature being the rise of menthol to $12 a case.

The continuance of the steel strike was evident in the higher prices that were again asked for practically all varieties of pig iron. Refined iron bars were also quoted higher at Philadelphia and Pittsburgh. The rises in the minor metals took place in antimony and lead, with the declines confined to lake and electrolytic copper, spelter and tin. Tobacco prices at Louisville moved up in a body. Common Hudson River brick was higher. In the naval stores there was a drop in resin, but kiln-burned tar and turpentine were higher. English vermilion paint went up again, and newsprint paper advanced to $7 a hundred pounds. Both Japanese and Chinese raw silks advanced also.

The week dealt unkindly with the textile markets, chiefly with the burlaps and the unfinished cotton goods. Continued quiet resulted in some easing off in the former, in spite of a slight strengthening in heavy goods at the beginning of the week as a result of a demand for export to South America. Weakness on the part of second hands brought down prices on several constructions of printcloths and sheetings in the gray.

Studying Store Wages.

Following a questionnaire sent to the members of the National Retail Dry Goods Association for the purpose of finding the number of stores using bonus or commission systems in paying their employes, a second questionnaire has been prepared to obtain more comprehensive data on the subject. The first circular brought 670 replies from the 1,100 members of the organization, and disclosed that 458 stores have bonus or commission systems. There were 163 that have never adopted such a system, and 49 that once used such payments but have abandoned them. Out of the 458 employing bonuses or commissions 215 stores have used them more than three years and 91 more than five years. In 298 stores bonuses are provided for non-selling help, 307 report bonuses for buyers, and 160 for other executives.

BUSINESS WORLD

COMMERCIAL PAPER.

Yesterday .... 5¼ per cent. for the best names.
Thursday .... 5¼ per cent. for the best names.
The quotations are for six months' paper.

Boys' Union Suits Scarce.

A canvass of the underwear market has failed to reward one buyer's effort to find boys' union suits. Such goods are wanted in large quantities, especially this season, owing to the exceptional progress made in building up a strictly boys' wear business in all parts of the country. The largest houses are understood to be without the merchandise desired, and in view of the fact that the buyer referred to represents a large jobbing house it is believed that the smaller merchants will have an even more difficult time in obtaining their customary supplies.

Plaids and Cream Goods Wanted.

Secondary distributers of dress goods here report the present outstanding feature of business to be the demand for cotton-warp and all-wool plaids, as well as for various kinds of cream-colored fabrics. In the plaids the best business is being done in 39 and 48-inch all-wool goods, which "job," respectively, at $2.25 and $3.50 a yard, but there is also a good call for 42-inch cotton-warp plaids to wholesale at $1.35 a yard. Bright patterns are favored. All of the goods mentioned are wanted for immediate delivery, and are not easy to obtain in quantity. Even scarcer for prompt shipment are plain cream-colored serges, batistes, cassimeres, &c.

Can't Get Mocha Gloves.

Attempts made by some retailers of furnishing goods to locate supplies of mocha gloves have met with little success lately. The market seems cleaned out of all desirable makes. Buyers do not wish to change from trade-marked lines owing to the fact that the guarantees accompanying these purchases cannot be found in other quarters. Even when returns of imperfect merchandise are made now the manufacturers will not replace the goods, but offer credit slips instead. Any exchanges made are on the basis of new prices. A method employed by one retailer to get replacements made instead of credit slips is to return the imperfect gloves, a pair at a time.

Prorating Woolens Again.

Although rosy promises were held forth by the mills that the opening of the heavyweight season for 1920 would see a readjustment of conditions to their normal state, there is talk in the market now that the allotment system will be carried over to next year. Some of the largest factors in the market are understood to be preparing schedules on which the purchases of their customers will be based. These cover the years from 1913 on, and will furnish the basis for prorating merchandise to the clothiers. The heavy demand that marked the opening of Spring clothing lines is believed to have influenced the mills to continue the allotment system.

Gray Goods Again Quiet.

Gray goods continued more or less quiet in the local market yesterday, with the bulk of the business done by second hands. Printcloths got most of the attention of buyers, and the deliveries bought included both this and next year. Among the sales made were 39-inch 68-72s at 21 cents for delivery during the remainder of this and next month, and similar deliveries of 38½-inch 44-40s at 13½ cents. January-March lots of 38½-inch 64-60s brought 17½ cents, and some business was done in the same goods, for March-April shipment, at 17¼ cents. January-February deliveries of 38½-inch 60-48s were sold at 15¾ cents. Sheetings and fine-yarn cloths were inactive, but sateens and twills had a pretty fair day. Sales of January-March 64-104, 4.20-yard sateens were made at 36 cents.

Linen Demand Is Steady.

Not a great deal of change has taken place here in the demand for linens in the last week. The general run of this merchandise is seasonably active, in spite of the increased prices asked for the goods and the difficulty of obtaining adequate deliveries. Large shipments were received in this country recently, some estimates putting the total amount higher than that received in any other group of shipments since the war began, but it was said here yesterday that these goods supplied only a small part of the quantity needed to fill the demand for linens in this country. Sales of British airplane linens are proceeding satisfactorily, and only 3,000,000 to 4,000,000 yards are yet to be disposed of. Of these about 2,000,000 yards are in the allotment to the United States. At the office of the American selling agent, the Hunter Manufacturing and Commission Company, it was said yesterday that this country's share would not exceed 6,000,000 yards in the aggregate, although the original allotment for distribution here was set at 8,000,000 yards.

Hard Coal Getting Scarcer Here.

An abnormal demand from the West, due to the bituminous strike, is curtailing the amount of anthracite coal available for Eastern buyers, Saward's Journal will say today. The heaviest production for over a year is helping the situation, however, and with the close of lake navigation near at hand there will be a further increase in the tonnage of domestic sizes distributed among dealers in this part of the country. In fact, while vessels will continue to clear with anthracite cargoes until after Dec. 1, practically all the coal that will be sent up the lakes this season has already left the mines. Bituminous deliveries are still being closely regulated by the Railroad Administration. However, with a partial resumption of many mines in West Virginia and Maryland, and some in Central Pennsylvania, it seems likely, the Journal will say, that by next week there will be quite a loosening up in the issuing of permits, even if supervision is not dropped right away.

Exhibit of French Goods.

An exhibition of French manufactures, comprising both apparel and art works, is now being assembled in France and will be shown under the auspices of the "Coin de France" in the Bush Terminal Sales Building from Jan. 15 to Feb. 15, 1920. While the exhibition will not be as large or as comprehensive as those made by France at the St. Louis and Panama-Pacific Expositions, it is believed the articles will have a more practical application to modern merchandising and be of more interest to department store and merchandise buyers than a larger display not assembled for meeting business requirements. The apparel will include dresses, corsets, millinery, and lingerie. Leather goods, perfumery, wax figures, chinaware, lamps, artistic candy boxes, painted glassware, tapestry and wall paper will be among the other exhibits.

PROSPERITY IN DRY GOODS.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Nov. 21.—Marshall Field & Co. in their weekly review of the dry goods trade say:

"Current wholesale distribution of dry goods ran much in excess of the same week last year.

"Many more merchants were in market compared with the corresponding week of 1918. All report continued excellent business. The volume of orders from salesmen on the road for both immediate and future delivery was very large, being much greater than for the same week a year ago. Collections were satisfactory."

Copper Stocks Decline, Leading a Late Reaction—Great October Trade Figures.

With the volume of business considerably reduced, dealings in stocks yesterday brought irregular movements which left the lineup of prices in a confused state at the close. During the morning the preceding session's rising tendency was continued, a number of industrial stocks moving forward from 2 to 10 points. The quality of this progress was hardly convincing of improved conditions for bullish speculation, however, for the issues of most resiliency were those which had been beaten down the furthest in last week's decline and their upturn was therefore credited mainly to the covering of short sales. Railroad shares were unsteady, and copper stocks developed weakness after the publication of quarterly statements by so-called "porphyry" companies which disclosed poor earnings. Evidence continues to appear from time to time that the copper trade has not yet received anything in the way of a revival of buying, and, in consequence, the metal has declined from 22 to 19¾ cents per pound in the last three weeks. The sagging course of copper shares in the early afternoon worked to unsettle others, and business came to an end in the midst of a rather general reaction. Viewed broadly, the day's trading showed a complete lack of desire on the part of speculators to acquire new lines of stocks in the face of the adverse attitude of money lenders toward another expansion of credit absorption in the stock market.

As far as money rates went, the Street had little to complain about. The renewal rate was 8 per cent., a lower figure than had been seen on any preceding day of the month, except Nov. 14, and offerings were large enough to cause a decline to 6 per cent. after the noon hour. It is not the position of current call loan rates which impresses the stock market so much as the thought of what may happen if headlong speculation for the rise breaks out. The belief is well grounded that the credit structure has been measurably improved this week, both through the liquidation of securities and by the release of funds tied up previously in merchandise for export. This is by no means half of the situation, however. The improvement of the loan account is something the bankers and Federal Reserve officials desire to carry much further, and with this thought uppermost in the banking mind, it is not difficult for even the most reckless traders to realize that a sudden growth of speculative buying might quickly result in a sharp advance of money quotations.

The foreign exchange market went further with the upturn begun the day before. Sterling drafts rose 1⅛ cents to the pound, to 4.04½, a full 5 cents higher than the minimum quotation of Thursday morning. Francs and lire gained ground, but the Scandinavian rates continued unsteady. The exhibit of foreign commerce figures for October showed that it is too early yet to visualize a contraction of our trade balance because of unfavorable exchange rates. The value of our exports reached the great total of $652,000,000, an increase of $59,000,000 over the September aggregate, and the largest month in our history, excepting June and April of this year. In October, last year, the outflow was 148,000,000 less. Imports, on the other hand, were $19,000,000 less than in September, but they exceeded October, 1918, by $160,000,000, and came second only to September as a record month's total of receipts. Inasmuch as harbor strikes and other labor difficulties retarded deliveries of goods in October, the figures are nothing short of striking.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

The Credit Situation.

The pronounced easing in call money the last day or two seems to indicate that the credit situation has been improved greatly since the middle of last week, when the money market got a severe shock. In today's bank statement it is likely that a decided betterment will be shown. Loan accounts should be down, both in the associated banks' display and at the Reserve Bank. The item which has been carried in the bank statement since last February, called bills payable, acceptances, &c., is expected to reflect a substantial reduction. Two weeks ago the total in this item got above $1,000,000,000, for the first time, and last week it was reduced some $76,000,000, to $983,454,000. It would not be surprising to see a similar reduction here this week, partly because banks are understood to have been reducing their burden of paper and partly because of the liquidation of credit which was tied up at local piers.

Foreign Exchange Rallies.

Those who early in the week insisted that the prime reason for the fall in sterling exchange was the fear of defeat of the Peace Treaty are not so sure they were right, now that the rate has rallied materially in the face of the actual defeat of the treaty. The October trade figures, which appeared yesterday, threw some light on the exchange situation, showing that exports for that month exceeded those of the previous month by approximately $59,000,000, while imports were off $19,000,000, thus advancing the credit balance for October to $236,000,000, compared with $158,000,000 in September. For November it is probable that shipments will be larger, for such exports as grain and flour and cotton have been decidedly heavier this month than last. With Europe largely cut off even from temporary credits, these big exports mean a great piling up of bills of exchange, and the law of supply and demand appears to be doing the rest.

One Rally Theory.

One theory for the recovery in sterling and other rates yesterday and the day before is that the market is now forecasting the future. It is argued by some that the defeat of the treaty means no extensive credits for the allied countries. If these countries are unable to get credits they will have to curtail their purchases, and this curtailment, ultimately, will reduce the supply of bills. On the other hand, imports from Europe are likely to mount, whether Europeans get credit here or not, so that the demand for remittances will expand.

Embargoing Gold.

In some quarters there appears to be apprehension over the continued exports of gold, especially to the Orient, and a few of the alarmists have raised the cry of "embargo," presumably to save our gold, notwithstanding that the United States now holds something more than a third of the world's supply. Most concern is felt over the movement to Japan and China. During October and the elapsed portion of November exports of the metal to these countries, according to unofficial but very carefully kept figures, have totaled $20,000,000 to China and $28,000,000 to Japan. In addition, something like $15,000,000 has gone to India and about $3,000,000 to other destinations in the Orient. One leading banker said yesterday that, far from being alarmed, he would tranquilly see upward of $500,000,000 go out of the country. A general canvass of the leading banks and private banking houses disclosed, in fact, that the great majority of competent judges feel that there is no reason for alarm and certainly no desire that an embargo be imposed. On the contrary, most bankers think an embargo would be a serious mistake.

Silver Prices.

In yesterday's market, bar silver sold at $1.36 a fine ounce here, and at 73½d. in London. This is at a ratio of little more than 15 to 1. The demand for the metal, according to the dealers, continues to be very brisk, mostly from China, and, according to these same dealers, if Europeans or any others really try to buy silver here, there is every indication that the price will go much higher, for the Chinese agents show no disposition to lower their bids; in fact, show every inclination to keep on outbidding the world.

Stock Dividends.

A decision as to the taxability of stock dividends may within a short time be handed down by the United States Supreme Court. Just how important this verdict is to some of the large industrial concerns, which have been accumulating large assets, can be judged by the following statement which has been sent to stockholders of the General Chemical Company:

"In accordance with the practice of recent years, your Board of Directors may have been expected to decide the question of a possible extra dividend at its November meeting. In view, however, of the pending decision of the Supreme Court as to the status of stock dividends, and of the opinion of the Finance Committee that your interests could be more intelligently considered at a later date, it was decided to postpone action."

The Ranger Oil Field.

While there is no denying that the Ranger field in Texas has been a big producer of oil, the fact remains that the field is proving something of a disappointment in that the life of the wells is comparatively short. A 10 per cent. depreciation in the production of a well might be expected yearly, but in Ranger it has been heavier than this, some wells being practically non-producers after having come in with a big initial flow only a little more than a year ago. In certain areas it appears that the territory is suffering from too many wells, which are fast draining the life of the sand.

A Trading Market.

Yesterday's stock market was largely a trading affair, with the professionals as the chief participants. There was some rapid forward movements in the case of such stocks as Crucible and General Motors, but these were hardly indicative of the general situation, where rather narrow price changes were recorded. General Motors went some 10 points above the opening quotation, and in the afternoon, when there was profit taking, declined to a position where the net change for the day was less than 2 points.

One Reason for Remedial Legislation.

It has been asserted that should the railroads be returned to private operation under pre-war conditions, more than 85,000 miles of line would be thrown into the hands of receivers, and almost $7,000,000,000, which has been put into the properties by investors, would participate in the resultant crash. This, it is asserted, has been made perfectly plain to the legislators in Washington, and it is considered to be inconceivable that such an event would be brought about. Opinion generally seems to continue that while the roads will be turned back at the close of 1919, they will be protected until such time as new laws are passed, which will not only readjust rate schedules, but will be the initial step in a campaign for the restoration of railroad credit.

Maxwell Motors to Spend $2,500,000.

Recent reports that the Maxwell Motor Company, Inc., would spend $12,000,000 within the next two years on plant extension in Detroit were scaled down by an official of the company yesterday to $2,500,000, and to the statement that "certain plant additions were now being made." Part of this money, he said, was realized from the sale of old buildings. The total amount includes machinery and equipment.

COTTON PRICES FALL AND EXPORTS GROW

Total Outgo for Month Is 556,466 Bales—Trade Watches for Effect of Large Shipments.

Yesterday's cotton market was a disappointing affair to the extent that it failed dismally to respond to the improvement shown both in money and in foreign exchange conditions. There was an early decline of 15 to 30 points, due mainly to the failure of the Liverpool cables to equal expectations, and this was followed by a rise which regained all of the initial losses and carried the market up 12 to 33 points net. But after that time the market became heavy and despite occasional rallies, tended downward during the rest of the session. In the middle of the afternoon the market went to its extreme low points for the day which were 70 to 95 points under the closing figures of Thursday. In the last hour it rallied about 10 points.

Easily the outstanding feature of yesterday's cotton situation was the tremendous volume of export clearances reported. This volume totalled 119,588 bales, and, naturally, the movement was well distributed among the ports. Over 30,000 bales went out of Savannah, nearly 19,000 were exported from Charleston, about 17,500 went out of Wilmington, while New York forwarded 12,279 bales. This huge volume brought the total for the full week up to 246,058 bales, a new high record for any week of the current year, displacing the previous record of last week which was 206,146 bales. For the month to date, with another full week to go, the exports have amounted to 556,466 bales, against 352,231 bales exported in all of October and 286,694 bales sent out in September.

At the present rate of outgo, the month is likely to show around 800,000 bales moved, and this total, if realized, will be far in excess of any month known. The largest total in recent years was the 796,388 bales exported in October, 1916, and this month may easily beat that mark.

Just what reaction this will have on the price of the staple cannot, of course, be accurately figured just now. Without credits, European buyers will have to pay through the foreign exchange market, and by so doing will force exchange rates still lower than they are now. This, more or less automatically, should check their buying, which, in turn, would have an adverse influence on market prices for cotton. However, it is understood that a good part of the cotton now going to Europe is already paid for, and if this is the case it appears to be reasonably certain that the big movements across the water will have a most bullish influence as soon as their significance is grasped.

COPPER CO. EARNINGS DROP.

Utah and Chino Firms' Reports Show Decreased Revenue.

A continuation of the same disappointing earnings which have characterized the reports of nearly all copper companies this year is shown in the statement for the third quarter by two of the leading porphyry companies, the Utah Copper Company and the Chino Copper Company. The earnings of the Utah Company were $2,419,512 or the equivalent of $1.48 a share as compared with $2,652,103 or $1.63 a share in the preceding quarter. After payment of dividends there was a deficit of $17,223. For the nine months of this year the Utah earnings have amounted to $5,552,939 or $3.41 a share, as compared with $15,614,052 or $9.61 a share in the corresponding period of last year. The production of copper in the third quarter was 24,774,761 pounds or more than 3,000,000 less than in the second quarter of the year.

In the case of Chino the earnings applicable to dividends were $702,384 or 80 cents a share. The preceding quarter showed earnings of $370,415 or 42 cents a share. During the third quarter of 1918 the earnings were $1,035,749, the equivalent of $1.19 a share. For the nine months of this year the earnings aggregate $899,388 or $1.03 a share, as compared with $4,076,516 in the corresponding period of 1918. The third quarter production of copper amounted to 10,427,395 pounds.

FINANCIAL NOTES.

The Guaranty Trust Company has announced that, beginning next Monday, it will exchange in its trust department, outstanding temporary Central of Georgia Railway Company ten-year 6 per cent. gold notes, due June 1, 1929, for definitive notes of the issue bearing coupons due Dec. 1. The company has also been appointed trustee of the Lampert Oil and Gas Company, to secure an issue of $250,000 par value Series "A" 7 per cent. convertible gold debentures due Oct. 1, 1924.

A certificate amending the charter of the Radio Corporation of America has been filed in Delaware by the Corporation Trust Company of America whereby the first concern's capital is increased to $25,000,000 preferred stock, divided into 5,000,000 shares, par value $5, and 5,000,000 shares of common stock without par value. This is the concern which will take over the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company of America.

The Bankers Trust Company has been appointed transfer agent for capital preferred and common stock of the P. H. Hanes Knitting Company, and registrar for capital stock of the International Cement Corporation.

H. L. Crane, formerly with the National City Company, will become associated after Dec. 1 with Bonbright & Co., Inc., as manager of the New York sales department.

The Empire Trust Company has been appointed transfer agent and registrar for capital stock of the Smith Springfield Body Corporation, and trustee for an issue of $500,000 6-year 7 per cent. gold notes of that corporation dated Nov. 1, 1919 and maturing Nov. 1, 1925.

STANDARD OIL TO BE LISTED.

Companies to Begin New Policy with Exchange Offerings.

Plans are nearing completion for the listing of one of the so-called Standard Oil stocks on the New York Stock Exchange. The Atlantic Refining Company has sent a notice to its shareholders asking them to exchange their present common stock certificates for new certificates preparatory to listing the shares on the Exchange.

In the past the Standard Oil Companies have kept very much to themselves. Some little trading has been negotiated on the Curb, but the big volume of business has been over the counter with such houses as are known as specialists in Standard Oil securities.

The first announcement that a change in policy would be established came from the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey a short time ago in connection with the offering of a big block of preferred stock. It was stated then that the shares would be listed on the New York Stock Exchange. Apparently the Atlantic Refining Company has brought its plans nearer to completion than the Standard Company of New Jersey. The Stock Exchange would not state yesterday whether or not the application to list had already been received from Atlantic Refining.

At the present time this company's stock is selling at about $1,500 a share. It is the belief in Wall Street that the proposal to list will be followed by some sort of subdivision of the shares, although there is no official announcement concerning this. There is no stock on the big board which is selling at such a high figure as Atlantic Refining.

The company's capital consists of $5,000,000, all of which is outstanding, and there is no bonded indebtedness. The profit and loss surplus in the last annual report stood at $50,952,881, or ten times the capitalization.

The net income applicable to dividends in the 1918 report was $7,409,491. Present dividends are at the rate of 20 per cent.

FORM HYDRAULIC STEEL CO.

Ohio Organization Arranged to Absorb Four Concerns.

The Hydraulic Steel Company has been organized in Ohio to take over the assets and liabilities of the Hydraulic Pressed Steel Company, the Cleveland Welding Manufacturing Company, the Hydraulic Steel Craft Company, and the Canton Sheet Steel Company. The plan has been arranged to take care of the increased business of the companies and is subject to the approval of the stockholders. Under the arrangement, holders of the common stock of the Hydraulic Pressed Steel Company will receive three shares of common stock of no par value in exchange for each share of common stock now held. The new company will call for redemption $3,500,000 of short term notes, and the outstanding preferred stock of the Hydraulic Pressed Steel Company and the Canton Sheet Steel Company.

To provide for this it is proposed to issue $6,000,000 of 7 per cent. cumulative convertible preferred stock of the new company and 200,000 shares of common stock of no par value. Proceeds from the sale of these stocks will be sufficient to retire the notes and the preferred issues and give the company $1,500,000 additional working capital. A banking syndicate headed by Montgomery & Co. of New York and Field, Richards & Co. of Cleveland has purchased the entire issue.

THE CONDITION OF TRADE.

The trade reviews of the week, while agreeing that uncertain labor, stock market, and coal mining developments were outstanding features, they did not apparently decrease the large volume of domestic business. Had such elements not been present it was presupposed that the volume of domestic buying would have been even greater, according to Dun's Review, while Bradstreet's says that this had but little effect.

Dun's Review says:

> Impediments to a full measure of economic progress still appear in the widespread labor troubles, in the further fall of foreign exchange rates to new low records, and in the delay in the settlement of international political problems, and entire uniformity in business is reported lacking. While both domestic and foreign commerce remain notably active in many instances, yet transactions would be of even greater magnitude if fewer retarding elements were present.
> In spite of a declining tendency at some points, bank clearings, stimulated by speculative activity, high commodity prices, and a large volume of business in most sections, remain the heaviest ever recorded for this period, the total this week at twenty leading cities in the United States amounting to $9,060,037,150, an increase of 37.7 per cent. over this week last year and of 42.9 per cent. compared with the same week in 1917.

Bradstreet's says:

> Distributive trade continues at a swift pace, with demand still apparently outstripping supply, despite a number of ordinarily disturbing elements. Indeed, the ruling complaint might well be summed up in the word scarcity, which still seems to dominate all lines from the mine or mill to the ultimate consumer. Hardening money rates, unsettled stock markets, advancing prices for many staple commodities, insufficient supplies of soft coal in large areas of the West, demoralized exchange markets, high-priced and inefficient labor, and retarded export trade, all operative as they are, seem to offer no important check to domestic buying, which continues eager for current account and confident for Spring and the further future.

CRUCIBLE MAY CONSOLIDATE

Chairman Wilkinson Makes Statement on Steel Company's Plans.

Plans for a consolidation of the Crucible Steel Company and its subsidiaries is under consideration and will be carried through if it is found that the plan best conserves the interests of the stockholders. This statement was made by Horace Wilkinson, Chairman of the Crucible Steel Company, at the annual meeting yesterday.

Mr. Wilkinson discussed at length the underpayment of Federal taxes which has been charged against the old management of the company. These difficulties, he explained, have been satisfactorily arranged. The company, he said, was now in the best position that it had been for the past two or three years. The extra tax has now been paid out of tax reserves which were sufficient to cover such an expenditure and which had been set aside in previous years.

It was stated that the company would be in a position to produce pig iron at a low cost and that there was a fifty-year coal supply and large iron ore reserves.

Bankers to Honor Richard S. Hawes

The Forum Section of the New York Chapter of the American Institute of Banking will hold its annual dinner at the Hotel Astor tonight in honor of Richard S. Hawes of St. Louis, newly elected President of the American Bankers' Association. W. P. G. Harding, Governor of the Federal Reserve Board, Mr. Hawes, and R. A. Philpot, Chairman of the American Banking Institute Section of the American Bankers' Association, will speak.

If you are looking for a safe and permanent investment we believe this 7 per cent stock will appeal to you. It is an old established business. The net earnings available for dividends after the Federal tax and all other taxes were paid during the past four years have averaged nearly four times the dividends on the preferred stock outstanding. W. L. Douglas name is known throughout the world. The trade mark is a very valuable asset worth millions of dollars, and is the property of the stockholders. It is one of the most valuable trade marks in the United States.

You would make no mistake to order at once as many shares of this stock as you can afford to buy, price $100.00 per share. If you care for more particulars fill out the coupon and mail at once. Application will be made to have this stock listed upon the stock exchange.

This company owns and operates 105 W. L. Douglas shoe stores located in the large cities. W. L. Douglas shoes are also sold by over 9,000 shoe dealers in the United States.

The past few years our shoes have been more extensively advertised than ever before. Stamping W. L. Douglas name and the retail price on the bottom of the shoes before they leave the factory has saved the wearers millions of dollars, and guarantees them the best shoes in style, comfort and service that can be produced for the price.

A great demand for W. L. Douglas shoes has sprung up in leading countries in Europe and Asia. Our domestic business has increased so that our sales have actually doubled in four years. In 1915 the sales were $8,069,626.41 and in 1918 $16,660,343.46. The past six months' business was at the rate of over $20,000,000 per year.

In common with other great businesses we need additional capital to meet the urgent requirements of increasing domestic and foreign trade. The new conditions of business also demand more capital. The cost of labor and material has nearly doubled so that twice the amount of capital necessary under the old business conditions is now required.

FOREIGN DELEGATES PLEAD FOR CREDITS

ECONOMIC CRISIS DISCUSSED

Lower Rate of Exchange Profitable in the Long Run to America, Spokesmen Say.

The four industrial missions sent here by Great Britain, France, Italy, and Belgium to attend the Industrial Trade Conference in Atlantic City and to make a study of American industries, began yesterday a five days' series of conferences, luncheons, and visits to industrial plants in this city. Mayor Hylan welcomed the foreign business men at City Hall yesterday morning, and yesterday noon they were the guests of the Merchants' Association at a luncheon at the Hotel Pennsylvania, at which spokesmen of the different missions told of after-the-war economic difficulties which the allied nations are facing.

The proposal for a deferred credit system which the missions have put forth to prominent American business men was discussed by several speakers at the luncheon. It was urged that a lower rate of exchange was profitable not only to the European countries, but, ultimately, to the United States.

Eugene Schneider, head of the French mission and inventor of the French .75 gun, said that the nations of Europe were as ready to help us as they were to ask us to help them. "We can help you," he said, "because we still believe that Europe will be one of the greatest markets for your exportations, and we are ready to help you in that way. But for that purpose we are waiting for your help in our financial settlement. As long as the rate of exchange is kept so high it will be very difficult for us to secure goods in this country and supply our countries with the raw material and foodstuffs so that they can come and buy these goods here. We have to pay high prices, as you do yourselves here, as we do throughout the world. We have tremendous shipping freights to pay, and then as our power of export is temporarily incapacitated because our power of production is used in our own countries for the reconstruction of our devastated areas, we cannot pay with goods, we have to pay with dollars, and when we have to buy dollars we buy them at the present time at about double their pre-war value.

"We have been confronted by great difficulties and we had great efforts to realize during this period of the war. We had great efforts and great sufferings. France has been the battlefield of the world during five years and about one-tenth part of the territory is now devastated and thoroughly destroyed by the enemy. We have a great effort of reconstruction and we are quite willing and quite ready to do it, and I am glad to tell you that the greatest part of our railways and canal systems are already restored. That we have rebuilt almost half of the buildings and houses that had been thoroughly destroyed by the enemy in the space of a very few months, and in perhaps one or two years we will be quite ready to have our production brought to its normal rate as before the war. We are bound to recover, and France has come out of this struggle and she has neither broken down nor is weaker than before.

"Now France, Italy, Great Britain, Belgium, Europe, America, the whole world are waiting eagerly for the settlement of the world and the world's affairs. We know where the settlement of the world may be brought to a decision and to a solution. It is here, gentlemen. It is in America, and we believe that throughout America, it may be in New York, if you will follow us and help us."

Italy's industries are strong and sound, Giorgio Mylius of the Italian Mission told those who attended yesterday's luncheon; "we are capable of producing almost all we require, provided we can be furnished with raw material. However, at the present rate of national money, there is a tremendous waste in the exchange which does not profit anybody. But for us it further implies a heavy increase in the cost of living and therefore a longer extension of time before conditions can return to the normal. That is why we are asking you for deferred credits. In doing this, we do not ask you for charity, but only to give us time to pay you when our currency will have a more fair course. This is bound to happen, perhaps in a shorter time than you may think."

Speaking for Great Britain, Marshall Stevens, M. P., said that no one was asking for philanthropy.

"Next March," he said, "we shall be owed by our allies $8,705,000,000, which is more than twice the amount we owe you. You are capable of doing much more than that, and now you have the opportunity of doing it upon a sound financial basis."

Joseph M. De Frees of Chicago said that a committee was now working on a plan for deferred payments. "These nations must have long time credits here," he said. "This task can only be accomplished by the support of the public. Long time securities are not the securities which commercial banks desire to hold. Long time securities are not the securities which the investment banks can continue unless capital can be adjusted for that purpose. They must be passed on to the investment public, the gentlemen interested in foreign trade."

Chairman William E. Breed presided at the luncheon. Afterward the foreign delegates were taken down town for a transcontinental telephone talk. Many of them visited industrial plants in this city. Tomorrow there will be an executive conference of the missions, after which they will go to West Point to attend a review of the cadets and a football game. There are eighty-five delegates and the party totals 150.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER—Receipts yesterday, 6,817 packages. Good demand for finer grades of fresh table butter, and with a short supply of these prices are again higher and firm. There is also a stronger market for the top qualities of held, but the medium grades of both fresh and held are ruling quiet, though held steady. Renovated, ladles, and packing stock somewhat stronger, with supplies very moderate. Creamery, higher than extras, a pound, 73½@74c; extras, 92 score, 72½@73c; firsts, 90 to 91 score, 67@71½c; firsts, 88 to 89 score, 63@65½c; seconds, 83 to 87 score, 57@61c; lower grades, 55@56c; held, higher than extras, 69@70c; extras, 68@69½c; firsts, 62½@66½c; seconds, 57@61c; unsalted, higher than extras, 76@77c; extras, 75@75½c; firsts, 66@72c; seconds, 59@62c; State dairy tubs, finest, 70@71c; good to prime, 65@69c; common to fair, 54@64c; renovated, extras, 58½@59½c; firsts, 56@57c; imitation creamery, firsts, 55@56c; ladles, current make, firsts, 53½@54c; seconds, 52c; lower grades, 50@51½c; packing stock, current make, No. 1, 51@51½c; No. 2, 50@50½c; lower grades, 47@49½c.

EGGS—9,668 cases. New-laid eggs continue scarce, and the few lots of fresh gathered that contain a fair to large proportion of such hold firm, with a prompt outlet. Medium qualities meet a fair demand at proportionate prices. More seriously defective goods are quiet and irregular. Storage eggs are not moving freely in relation to the quantity on hand, and the tone of the market is somewhat irregular. Very fancy goods are generally held with some confidence. Average prime and lower grades are very freely offered. Nearby white eggs in light supply, and there are very few of uniformly large sizes and fancy quality. These sell promptly, but when mixed with smaller or shrunken eggs, stock moves slowly at a wide range of prices. No fresh arrivals from California. Fresh gathered, extras, a dozen, 79@80c; extra firsts, 76@78c; firsts, 71@75c; seconds, 64@70c; under grades, 48@63c; dirties, No. 1, 53@55c; No. 2 and poorer, 48@52c; checks, good to choice, dry, 44@47c; under grades, 28@43c; refrigerator, special marks, fancy, charges paid, 54@55c; firsts, 52@53c; seconds, 47@51c; under grades, 30@46c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby Western hennery whites, fine to fancy, 98c@$1; fair to prime, 75@97c; gathered whites, common to prime, 70@98c; pullets, 70@80c; Pacific Coast, whites, express, fancy, $1; other Western and Southern gathered whites, 70@90c; State, Pennsylvania, and nearby hennery browns, fancy, 83@86c; gathered brown and mixed colors, graded, fancy, 79@80c; fair to prime, 68@78c.

The Civil Service.

City.

Applications will be received for inspector of elevators, Grade 2, until 4 P. M. on Dec. 9. Candidates must be at least 21 years of age on or before the closing date for the receipt of applications. The subjects and weights of the examination will be: Experience, 4; technical, 5; citizenship, 1. A qualifying physical examination will be given. The salary runs from $1,140 to $1,380 a year.

United States.

The commission announces for Dec. 23 an examination for structural steel inspector. A vacancy in the Construction and Maintenance Department, Naval Ordnance Plant, South Charleston, W. Va., at $7.04 a day, will be filled from this examination. Both men and women, if qualified, may enter this examination, but appointing officers have the legal right to specify the sex desired in requesting certification of eligibles. For the existing vacancy male eligibles are desired. Competitors will not be required to report for examination at any place, but will be rated on education and general experience, 30; special experience and fitness, 70. Applicants must have had at least seven years of engineering experience, of which at least two years must have been in structural steel fabrication, erection, or inspection. Each completed year of an engineering course in a college or university of recognized standing will be accepted as equivalent to one year of general engineering experience. Applicants must have reached their twenty-fifth birthday on the date of the examination. Age limits do not apply to persons entitled to preference because of military or naval service.

Education Notes.

The State Commission of Education will hear on Nov. 28 the appeal in the case of Benjamin Glassberg, a teacher of history in the Commercial High School, who was dismissed from the service because he expressed views in favor of bolshevism. Mr. Glassberg was a candidate for Alderman on the Socialist ticket in Brooklyn at the last election.

The appeal of Miss Mary McDowell, a teacher in the Manual Training High School, Brooklyn, has been denied. She is a Quakeress, and was dismissed from the service for her pacifist views. Her counsel said that her views about war were part of her religion. State Commissioner of Education Finley holds that the question of religion had nothing to do with the action of the Board of Education in dismissing her. Her case will be taken to the courts.

Miss Clara C. Calkins, Chairman of the Legislative Committee of the Teachers' Welfare League, has asked the Board of Education to make $1,015 the minimum salary for first year teachers, instead of $835, which the Board contemplates paying. She says that the State education law, which spread the increase in teachers' salaries over a period of three years, does not affect the new entrants.

ALL LINES FACE DEFICITS

Surface Lines Need Millions for Restoration—Hardship for Outlying Sections Predicted.

The report of Stone & Webster on the financial condition of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit Company was made public yesterday by Federal Judge Mayer, who filed a memorandum with it saying in effect that continued operation of the surface and rapid transit lines of the company was necessary for the public welfare, and suggesting that a solution of the transit problem, fair to all, should not be difficult to find.

The gist of the report is that the B. R. T. system cannot survive without an 8-cent fare on all lines and the continuation of the 2-cent transfer charge on the surface lines. Unless this increase is brought about, it is said, the operation of many of the surface lines must be discontinued. Concerning the rapid transit lines the report says:

"It will take an 8-cent fare to cover the company's preferential and provide a substantial return upon the city's investment (including cost of completion) of more than $150,000,000, although a 7-cent fare will yield a surplus above the company's preferential and a somewhat larger surplus above its fixed charges."

The total amount of outstanding securities is given as $231,895,745, and the earnings of the entire system on this amount for the current fiscal year, above operating expenses and taxes, is given as $3,870,000. It is pointed out that this represents about 2½ per cent. on the outstanding obligations, and about 1⅓ per cent. on the outstanding securities.

"The decrease in earnings due to the war," the report says, "is shown by the fact that in 1917 the system earned, according to the company's report, above operating expenses and taxes, $10,839,312. Those earnings, after providing for all fixed charges, left a surplus for the stock of the B. R. T. Company of $5,195,238."

According to the figures presented, the continuation of a 5-cent fare on the rapid transit lines would result in the company earning $3,349,000 less than its preferential, with nothing earned on the city's preferential. On the other hand, the report says, a 7 or 8-cent fare would result in the company earning its preferential besides earning for the city $3,051,000 or $5,951,000, depending upon whether the fare was 7 or 8 cents. Under a 5, 7, or 8-cent fare the deficits in the city's preferential on June 30, 1922, would amount to $10,979,000, or $3,919,000, or $729,000. The figures show that even an 8-cent fare would not be sufficient to provide in full for the city's preferential.

Big Surface Line Deficit.

Behind the rapid transit lines stands the city, a partner in them, and they are therefore sure of remaining in operation, but the surface lines stand alone, and in dealing with them the report displays more discouraging features. It says that during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1919, the net earnings of these lines were insufficient to pay more than about 30 per cent. of the fixed charges, and, continuing, reads:

"We estimate that during the current fiscal year those properties as a whole, at the present rate of fare, and disregarding the effect on earnings of the partial disintegration which has occurred, will fall by over $1,000,000 to earn their operating expenses and taxes."

Figures presented show that the combined earnings of all of the surface lines in 1917 and 1918 left balances of $1,088,000 and $185,000, respectively, and a deficit of $2,778,000 in 1919, and will leave an estimated deficit of $5,755,000 in the next fiscal year. In a comment on the situation the report says there appears no prospect of improvement for several years, and that the normal increase in traffic will be offset by the competition of rapid transit lines.

The report states that some parts of the surface lines have seriously deteriorated, and that it would require an expenditure of $1,000,000 a year for several years to make up deferred maintenance amounts needed to bring the lines up to standard. It is also said that the disintegration of the system which began with the separation of the Brooklyn City Railroad Company, is bound to continue unless the fare is increased, with the result that the whole surface system will be broken up.

"The people of Brooklyn," the report says, "can never have satisfactory service from the surface lines until they are reassembled into a single system, and that can only be accomplished through an increased fare."

Figures Open for Examination.

In his memorandum Judge Mayer refers to the many offers of service which he has received in the work of finding a way out of the financial labyrinth in which the B. R. T. Company has fallen. He says that full and detailed reports have been submitted to Receiver Garrison and that these reports are open to examination and inspection. Attention is called to the opportunity given to the public to investigate the situation from these documents, and the memorandum says that therefore there should be no difficulty in removing from controversy any question as to the situation. The estimates contained in the reports, it is pointed out, are a matter of opinion, but the estimates for the current fiscal year ending June 30, 1920, are not a matter of opinion, because of the 25 per cent. increased wage cost since Aug. 10, 1919, and the increase in the cost of materials are definite factors.

"It is plain," said Judge Mayer, "that the receipts for the current fiscal year will not be sufficient to pay operating expenses and taxes on the surface lines and will fall far short of paying the preferential either to the city or the investors in the B. R. T. Company."

The separation of the Brooklyn City Company from the B. R. T. system, with the result of increased fares, was referred to, and then the memorandum reads:

"A settlement of the transit situation fair to the municipality, the traveling public, and the investors continues to press for solution."

Damage to Outlying Regions.

Judge Mayer says the disintegration of the system will injure those living along separated lines and that disintegration is bound to follow when there is not enough money to support a unified system. In relation to outlying sections, he said:

"The crowded condition of the city makes it desirable for every reason that the outlying districts should be made attractive to as much of the population as possible. If any of these districts are discriminated against, as they must be, if disintegration takes place and the roads are operated separately with a fare to be paid on each, then such outlying districts are at a great disadvantage and development of the city is retarded, all of which would be avoided if there were a unified system operated with a just fare which would not discriminate against any of the outlying sections of the various boroughs."

The memorandum refers to claims against the B. R. T. Company by those suffering through accidents. He said that all of these persons displayed a disposition to co-operate with the court in working out a way for procuring an appropriate provision for them and that funds for the purpose could not be obtained until "the problem emerges from its present chaotic condition."

INTERBOROUGH GETS BUSES

Says It Can Supply All the Service the City Needs.

The Fifth Avenue Coach Company, which is controlled by the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, issued a finely illustrated booklet yesterday, which contained the announcement that the company was ready to supply all the motor bus service the city needs. It also said it had applications before the city authorities for permits to place new lines in immediate operation.

"There are numerous sections of the city," the company says, "where there are no adequate facilities and where street cars, subways, or elevated roads cannot be provided."

The announcement was accepted to mean that the company was ready to operate buses in any city thoroughfare where there would be no competition with the lines of the Interborough Company except for short distances.

Taxicabs use WEED TIRE CHAINS

It's a business proposition, pure and simple, with taxicab companies. They use Weed Chains for economy and accident insurance.

The main incentive for the use of Weed Chains is the accident-preventing feature—a most important factor as it means the saving of lives and property.

But further than that it is known from bitter and costly experience that the continual, constant and yet hardly perceptible slipping of the rubber tire-surface on wet roads and pavements—only the foot or so of lost traction at a time—is an alarming expense item—wearing out tires just the same as if you pressed them against a rapidly revolving grindstone.

Taxicab companies have learned from experience that only by the use of Weed Chains can this continuous wear on tires be prevented. Their drivers are ordered to put on their Weed Chains "at the first drop of rain" because of the thousands upon thousands of dollars that are thus actually saved every year in tire service and the elimination of skidding accidents. Wouldn't it be well for you to learn wisdom from the fellow who really knows?

Weed Chains are also made to meet the demand for an efficient traction and anti-skid device for trucks equipped with single and dual solid tires or with the very large pneumatic tires. They are so constructed that they satisfactorily meet the requirements of heavy truck service in mud, sand or snow.
